Although there is no set rule, it is a good plan to finish the table first, so the caterer can go ahead with his work. Hardly two tables are ever decorated just alike, so each florist must use his own judgment to a large extent. Still, often your customer will have some scheme to be carried out, or she may have some good ideas which you may not have thought of. Our table, in this instance, we will say, is oblong, while the wallpaper is green, which will harmonize with almost any color. But our order calls for a pretty, loose basket of La Detroit roses, having a low handle, as the chandelier in the room hangs quite low over the table. The guests are not to be seated, a buffet lunch being served.

Avoid too large a basket; it looks better to have some space for the eatables, despite the fact that often there are not many. See that the basket is exactly in the center of the table, and not a few inches off to one side. A few long, delicate sprays of asparagus, or some maidenhair fern laid with apparent carelessness around the basket will add much to the finished effect. The prettiest effect is produced by having the fronds of the greens protrude from under the centerpiece.

We are also to furnish some flowers for the piano and on a mantel. On the piano a bowl or low vase with a large mouth can be used to good advantage. For instance, if you are using peonies, which are so popular at present, have some of the stems shorter than the others and arrange the flowers in such a way that they produce a pretty effect from below.

On one side of the mantel we have already arranged a group of ferns, so we will place the vase of flowers to one side. Two dozen long-stemmed Kaiserin roses is what we have to work with this time. Arrange them in a suitable tall vase. A few nice sprays of Asparagus plumosus between the roses look well.

At this time of year you may often be called on to arrange some garden flowers you did not furnish. If this is the case you must do so cheerfully, even though you do not receive pay for it. A little favor at a time like this may mean a lot at some future time.

I presume you now think you are through, but there is still one thing to do, be the decoration a large or small one; namely, ask for the person with whom you were planning the decoration, usually the bride-to-be, and see that she is well pleased with all your work; then you can leave and feel that you have done a good job. Never sneak out for fear that there might be something to change, or some little complaint to smooth over. Hugo Schroeter.

THE LILY DECORATION.

The word Easter as applied to lilies of the longiflorum type has become a misnomer through the process of retarding the bulbs in cold storage. The result is that lilies now are to be had in all the city markets practically every day in the year and a wedding decoration, such as is shown in the accompanying illustration, is possible at the briefest notice. This decoration was put up at the Hotel Metropole, Chicago, by W. J. Smyth. The room is one of somewhat elaborate decoration and, therefore, called for careful treatment at the lighting the decoration effectively. The balconies, which are on each side of the room, were festooned with wild smilax and here and there other vases of lilies were used.

The wedding outfits, consisting of kneeling stools, satin ropes, electroliers, tall vases, etc., are now one of the indispensable adjuncts of a decorator's equipment.

EUROPEAN TRAVEL.

Steamer trade, as it is known, at New York, Boston, Montreal and other ports, has been excellent this spring and at interior cities leading florists have noted that their best customers are starting earlier than usual this year on their annual vacations, a considerable number going farther away, to be gone longer than in other summers. It cuts down the florists' June trade.

In this connection it is interesting to note that one of the Chicago banks which does a large letter of credit business reports that in the last thirty days it has sold substantially $300,000 of hands of the florist. The opening at the end of the room was filled with palms and curtained above with strings of asparagus, the kneeling stool being placed at the foot of the single step, which chanced to be in just the right position. Tall enameled bamboo vases were filled with lilies and above, at the top line of the asparagus screen, were tied three large bunches of lilies, each with its bows and streamers of chiffon. Back of the asparagus screen were electroliers, which did much toward credit to persons going abroad. This volume of business is larger by forty per cent than for the corresponding period last year. Efforts to discover the occasion for such an increase in travel has developed the fact that the buyers of these letters of credit are mostly persons of moderate means, who find their business so dull that they prefer going abroad for a rest and returning in the autumn, rather than remaining at home, where their presence is not required.

This situation suggests that the present business depression is, in a way, adventitious. It is a happening in a long period of prosperity and has not served to cripple generally the fortunes of those engaged in business. On the contrary, the slow-up is furnishing opportunity for vacations which can be enjoyed because of much prosperity and surplus wealth. In one sense the dullness is something of a welcome incident, and the exodus abroad for rest and recreation is accompanied by the belief that the autumn months will witness a distinct revival in trade.

CUTWORMS ON ASTERS.

I have planted my asters in a new piece of sod ground and cutworms are attacking them. Please tell me how to destroy the cutworms. H. C. C.

Make a mixture of fresh bran, molasses, water and Paris green. Use sufficient molasses to sweeten it, water to make it somewhat pasty and poison so that you can see a greenish hue in it. Drop this in small portions on the affected ground. A light dressing of gas lime is excellent where these pests abound, or slaked lime is also helpful. Black soot has been found beneficial by some growers, dusted over the ground. Keep the soil constantly cultivated. This also helps to lessen the attacks of the pests. Hand picking at night is sometimes resorted to where the cutworms are unusually destructive. As a rule, however, the poisoned bran will be found effective. Keep chickens out of the patch where you are using it. C. W.

SMILAX CARRIED OVER.

Can smilax be grown on the second year at a profit? I have been putting in new plants every year. If they can be held over, what treatment do they require during the summer? D. R.

In our experience, smilax may well be grown at a profit for three successive years. During July or August a slight rest, together with thorough cleaning out of weeds and rubbish, and a top-dressing of well rotted cow manure, should be given. Albert F. Amling.

EUROPEAN LETTER.

The rapid progress which the cultivation of the American carnation has made in England was strongly exemplified at the Temple show, London, held during the last week in May. Five or six years ago only one exhibit was on view, namely, half a dozen vases from the pioneer grower and exhibitor, A. F. Dutton. His exhibit was one of the sensations of that show, and he soon had many imitators. One after another took up carnation culture and at this year's Temple show at least a dozen exhibitors came forward, filling about 250 feet run of tabling. This is rapid progress—six feet of tabling increased to 250 feet.

The exhibits from A. F. Dutton, Iver, Bucks; H. Burnett, Guernsey; Hugh Low & Co., Enfield; Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey; S. Mortimer, Farnham; C. Engellmann, Saffron Walden; W. H. Page, Hampton, and W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey, were characterized by fine, bold flowers, effectively arranged.

Roses were superbly shown by Mount, Canterbury; Paul & Son, Waltham Cross; Paul & Son, Cheshunt; F. Cant & Co., and B. R. Cant, Colchester, and A Wedding Decoration in a Hotel Banquet Hall.

Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham. Paul & Son, Waltham Cross, received an award of merit for Elaine, and awards were also given to Tausendschon and White Dorothy.

Though still early for sweet peas, C. W. Breadmore, Winchester, staged one of the finest lots ever seen in May. Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, were strong in new varieties, but it is too early to pass an opinion on them. I hope to see them again later. E. W. King & Co., Coggeshall, made an attractive hit with their new variety, Mrs. Wm. King.

The finest begonias came from Blackmore & Langdon, Bath, who were awarded a silver cup and an award of merit for Empress Marie. T. S. Ware, Ltd., Feltham, were close competitors and received a silver gilt floral medal.

Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ltd., Newtownards, specialized on May-flowering tulips, as did also Hogg & Robertson, Dublin, and R. H. Bath, Ltd., Floral Farms, Wisbech. The first named received a silver gilt floral medal and an award of merit for Duchess of Westminster. Walter T. Ware, Bath, received a first-class certificate for a new variety, named W. T. Ware.

J. Waterer & Sons, Bagshot, led with rhododendrons and were awarded a silver cup. A similar award was given to Richard Smith & Co., Ltd., Worcester, for specimen plants of clematis.

Novelties of commercial importance were not strongly in evidence. In addition to awards already mentioned, Dracæna Doucetii de Grootei, from Veitch & Son, London, received a first-class certificate; Croton Fred Sander, from Sander & Sons, Bruges and St. Albans, an award of merit, and Pæonia decora alba, from R. Wallace & Co., Colchester, an award of merit.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, was among the visitors. Probably he is now on his way to the cauliflower seed farms in Denmark, thence through Holland, etc., returning to London for the National Sweet Pea Society's show, in July.

The date of the National Sweet Pea Society's show is fixed later than usual this year, namely, July 24. Considering the backward season experienced so far, it looks as if the time fixed will prove all right, unless we have an exceptionally hot July.

Henry Eckford is specializing strongly in sweet peas at the Franco-British exhibition in London, having planted a plot of ground with nearly 150 clumps, representing as many varieties.

John Waterer & Sons, Ltd., of the American Nurseries, Bagshot, Surrey, announce a great exhibition of rhododendrons from June 10 to 30, at the Royal Botanic Gardens, London. Thousands of rhododendrons, from two feet to ten feet in height, in about 200 varieties, will be on view, probably the largest flower show made by any one firm in the world.

An English landscape artist, T. H. Mawson, Windermere, has been fortunate in securing the premier position in the competition for laying out the gardens, eighteen acres in extent, at the new Palace of Peace at The Hague, Holland. He was in competition with leading French and Dutch landscape gardeners. BEE.

CREOSOTE IN GREENHOUSES.

Apropos of the discussion on the subject of creosote in the REVIEW, we beg to say that we have had experience with creosote in our greenhouses and have no hesitation whatever in saying that it is most injurious to plant life. Some years ago we coated the side boards of a bottom bench and the bottom boards of another bench with creosote, and the smilax and ferns that were growing in this house were rendered entirely useless. The plants would not make any growth and had the appearance of having been burnt with tobacco smoke.

MEALY BUG ON COLEUS.

Would like to know what to put on coleus plants outdoors in beds in the summer to keep the mealy bug off. They practically destroy coleus here during the month of August. J. W. Y.

We cannot recommend anything which will kill mealy bug on coleus and not, at the same time, practically destroy the plants. Coleus will not stand any insecticide of an oily nature, as the foliage is easily burned. Force of water through a spray nozzle will keep the pest in check, but this is liable to break the shoots to some extent. Coleus are notoriously dirty plants. When bug-infested indoors, it is the best policy to destroy them. Try to set out young plants which are clean, if you continue to use them, but my advice would be to drop them and try plants which do not harbor mealy bug. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Topping.

In topping plants through the summer, one should keep constantly in mind the three chief objects for which the operation is carried on. Stated briefly, these objects are the conserving of plant energy, promotion of shapeliness in habit and encouragement of continuity in blooming.

It is obvious that if young stock is allowed to bloom during the summer months, we can expect but indifferent results the following winter, under forced conditions. But topping does not consist of merely removing buds as formed, neither can a certain day in the week or month be set apart in which to make a wholesale massacre.

The removal of a large quantity of growth from a plant at one time seriously impairs that very desirable property of the carnation we so much wish to preserve—continuity in blooming—without reckoning the severe check given.

Study the Habit of Each Variety.

Each variety's natural habit of growth must be taken into consideration. Those of neat, bushy form by nature, require little effort on the part of the grower, while those of the sprawly, let-me-lie-down sort need close attention and no little study to manage them well.

All, however, can be trained in the way they should grow. To break off buds or shoots in a hit or miss fashion is to pave the way for unwieldy, misshapen plants, difficult to handle at housing time.

Go over the field at least every other day, cutting back those shoots quite well advanced toward formation of a bud. Topping too soon is liable to cause a break of numerous weak growths.

Remember that growth in the field is different from that under glass. Field growth gives less length between joints, consequently plants can be cut back somewhat higher than if growing inside.

We prefer not to do any topping during rainy periods or immediately after. We choose, instead, bright, sunny days.

Under no circumstances pull out the center of a shoot, as this is not only premature but an invitation for trouble.

The Use of the Knife.

The idea has been advanced that the use of a knife in removing tops is liable to communicate disease from one plant to another, but, while this may be possible, I confess to being skeptical in regard to it. We always use a sharp knife and recommend others to do likewise.

We know an open plant wound affords an excellent lodging place for germs, ever present in the atmosphere, but it seems doubtful that the sap from a plant to all appearances healthy, although perhaps not absolutely so, will in any way affect one in every way vigorous, and certainly an admittedly diseased plant has no place in the patch. On a bright day the clean cut of a knife soon closes against intruders.

Keep the cultivator going, going, going.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CARRYING PLANTS OVER.

I intend to carry over some old carnation plants of a new variety. When is it advisable to cut back the longer blooming shoots? If before replanted, then how soon? If after, kindly state the time. I should like to hear from one who has tried this successfully.

E. O.

Carrying over carnation plants is like carrying over rose plants, only worse. While it can be done and is done successfully, occasionally, I would not advise anyone to depend on such stock altogether for his season's cut blooms. In fact, it is seldom that such stock gives as good blooms as strong young stock will give. They will, however, give a fine lot of splendid cuttings, if the plants have come through in good shape.

Preparations for this should have begun several months ago, instead of now. If the plants have been blooming up to now, the chances of success are against them. They should have been cut back hard in March or April, so that the plants could have made breaks along the older wood and made fine, bushy plants by this time. Then transplanting would be an easy matter. But with all the season's growth on them, transplanting could hardly be done successfully, and to cut them back hard now would mean to kill many of the plants.

This is the most trying time of the year on inside stock and the plants ought to be growing vigorously as they enter this period. We frequently carry over seedling plants the second year, but they invariably have been shortened back to induce breaking for cuttings, and at the end of the cutting or propagating season the plants are again gone over and trimmed into shape, with a view to getting a lot of young breaks to grow through the summer.

You do not give much data on the condition of your plants, but I will presume that they have been blooming up to now. In such case, I would not attempt replanting at all. I would rake off all the loose material from the bed and scrape out as much soil between the rows as seems safe without injuring the roots too much, and then replace with a compost made of two parts good soil and one part old manure. This will practically answer the same purpose as transplanting, without being such a severe ordeal for the plants. In fact, there will be no danger whatever to the plants.

Before you do this, clean off all the dead foliage, and if the plants are at all crowded, cut out some of the growth so the air can get between the plants readily. I would not cut back any of the blooming shoots, but as you cut the blooms do it with a view to getting good breaks to follow. There will be less cropping next season.

Keeping the plants properly supported and free from red spider will be your most trying problems. The former will be found essential if you would succeed in the latter. Abundant ventilation also is essential. If you must syringe frequently for spider, which should be done thoroughly whenever it is done, you will do well to keep on hand a can of Bordeaux mixture. By applying this once in about each week or ten days you will be comparatively safe from the spot diseases, such as fairy ring, Septoria Dianthi, etc. This is a great preparation and is put up for us now, by the supply men, in such convenient form that every carnation grower should keep on hand a can of it. By keeping the can tightly corked, its properties are preserved for a considerable length of time.

After the heat of the summer is over, handle these carried over plants much the same as you do your young plants, except that more feeding will be necessary to sustain the quality of the cut. Do not put much shade on the glass over them, but a little will do them good during July and August. A. F. J. B.

THE PEONY IS POPULAR

A TEST OF PEONIES.

What we want is plants that will stand everything without being discouraged—those that will be prolific and sure bloomers.

We had the most remarkable spring on record. April and May changed places and the mischief was to pay. Warm days brought out the buds and it seemed as if we would have flowers in a few days. Then, early in May, we had a succession, not of frosts, but of freezes which froze the ground. It was a fearful test. Then came mild days to encourage them. Many recovered and we thought they would be all right. Then a bitter freeze caught everything unawares and we asked, Can any living thing endure this? Our old favorites gave it up: Of 1,000 Festiva Maxima, not a dozen decent blooms. The faithful L'Esperence, our dependence for Decoration day, gave up the struggle. Calls poured in, but most of the peonies were nipped in the bud.

Yet there were some that just gloried in tribulation and paid no attention whatever to little trials like those. Golden Harvest maintained its never-fail reputation and ought to stand away at the front—hardy everywhere in Manitoba and the Dakotas, the plants covered with flowers of exquisite beauty. They need but a strong and long stem to stamp them as perfect. Charles Verdier was a glory of bloom. Faust, M. Jules Elie, Sarah Bernhardt and Louis Van Houttei answered the roll call promptly.

I was surprised at the vigor of the M. Dupont. They were by far the best and grandest of the whites—splendid, solid hemispheres, seven inches across, centers flecked with carmine, so distinctly marked you could not mistake them. La Sublime literally deluged the plants with crimson beauty. Couronne d'Or never did better. Baroness Schroeder sent out a flower for every stem, but 1,000 Queen Victoria, usually so hardy, gave up in disgust; not a decent flower on the whole mass.

Rosenfield's Triumph, bred for hardiness, were on hand promptly. Karl Rosenfield, the fine crimson, was all right. Ak-sar-ben, crimson maroon; Grace D. Bryan, large pink; Crimson Victory, Prairie Splendor and Prairie King, all sustained the test. These are robust; the stems are from forty to forty-five inches tall. Just what we have been looking for to endure the trying climate of the west.

Jeanne d'Arc and Golden Harvest. As these bloomed this year, it was hard to tell the difference in the flowers. The former is probably the mother of the latter.

There is this difference. A row of Jeanne d'Arc planted last fall did not produce a flower. A row of Golden Harvest planted the same time was covered with bloom. C. S. HARRISON.

PEONY M. JULES ELIE.

Mons. Jules Elie is one of the introductions of Crousse, the famous French peony specialist, sent out twenty years ago. It is a clear flesh pink, extra large in size of flower, free blooming and in all particulars one of the finest of modern peonies. It is one of the sorts which every florist should plant on his home grounds. A well established clump of this variety, when in bloom in the spring, will be the means of bringing any florist a goodly number of orders for fall planting.

OBITUARY.

Theodore Faller.

Theodore Faller, one of the well-known florists of St. Louis, died at his home, 4901 Natural Bridge road, in that city, June 10, after a long illness with dropsy. Mr. Faller was at one time a prominent member of the Florists' Club. He leaves a wife and four children, also a host of friends, to mourn his loss.

Mrs. B. Schramm.

Mrs. Catherine Schramm, wife of Bernard Schramm, the veteran florist of Toledo, O., died suddenly of heart failure at midnight, June 12, at the family residence, 712 Baker street. Several months ago her health began to fail, but she had been feeling better for several weeks, and was about the house as usual the day before her death.

Mrs. Schramm was born in Bavaria, Germany, and was 68 years of age. She had been a resident of Toledo ever since her marriage to Mr. Schramm, forty-seven years ago. Of the nine children born to them six survive—Miss Minnie Schramm, Mrs. C. Ransch, Mrs. Jos. Kesting, Mrs. Frank Weiss, Charles and Bernard Schramm, Jr. A son, Anthony Schramm, died three years ago.

She leaves also thirty-five grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Schramm was a devoted member of St. Mary's parish for nearly fifty years, and of the Married Women's sodality.

The funeral was held Tuesday, June 15, at 8 o'clock, with solemn requiem mass, from St. Mary's church.

PROPAGATING BOXWOOD.

Kindly let me know if boxwood is taken from cuttings and at what time of the year they are planted. A. H.

The tree box, Buxus sempervirens, is best propagated from cuttings of mature wood, six inches in length, in September or October. In the northern states these require the protection of a coldframe over winter. Make the soil sandy and insert firmly, keeping them shaded and well supplied with water.

The dwarf box used so much for edgings for formal gardens is better propagated by division of the plants. Just as they start to grow, tear them in pieces with the hand and prune off long, thick roots with a pair of shears. Plant deeply and tramp firmly. Given a good soaking of water at the start, these cuttings will need no further attention unless a dry season ensues, when an occasional soaking will help them. Pieces pulled off without roots will grow if kept moistened for a time, but it is usually possible to secure a little root on each cutting.

GENERAL NOTES.

Exterminating the Black Fly.

One of the first things to be done after planting out is to get the plants perfectly clean from black fly. Sometimes there are lots of ladybugs around and they will do the work very nicely, but, failing these, smoking must be resorted to. Dusting with tobacco dust, or spraying with any of the liquid preparations, does not seem to do the job thoroughly.

In my experience the best thing to use is the fumigating kind of tobacco dust. Have everything arranged, and at nightfall close up the house and light the dust. This will give a gentle smoke all night and, if the ventilators are opened early in the morning and the plants sprayed well, no harm will result. If one night does not kill all the flies, use the dust a second time, and after the second application the plants will, generally speaking, keep entirely clean all summer.

Too many growers are careless about this fly, thinking that it does little harm, but it must live off the plant and of necessity detracts from its general health.

Staking.

The staking of the plants should be attended to before they get top-heavy and begin to fall over the bench. Most growers have their own system of supports. The one I like best is an iron stake for each plant, which is supported by wires running lengthwise over the bed, one wire catching the row of stakes about halfway up and another wire catching them near the top. When the stakes have this double tie, if the wires have been drawn tight, a solid support is secured, to which the plants can be tied with no danger of their being pulled over by heavy syringing or getting top-heavy when growth is completed.

Many growers run two wires parallel with each row of plants, one down at the bed and one well up in the air, running strings between, to which the plants are tied. This is all right for the average run of plants, but if you want exhibition stock and a perfectly straight stem, it is better to have a rigid support, so that after the plant has made a break it can be closely tied.

Spraying.

Spraying should be diligently attended to on hot days. While the beds do not need to be kept too wet, but in fact are much better a little on the dry side until the soil is full of roots, yet the atmosphere should be kept well charged with moisture. Spray the plants and roof and paths and everywhere several times a day on bright days. This keeps down the temperature and the plants positively revel in such treatment. There is nothing like it for putting fine foliage on the plants, and it will keep them clean and in a soft, growing condition.

Ventilation.

Keep the ventilators open night and day, likewise the doors, and never close them at this season of the year, unless it be to smoke, or unless a storm is brewing. A house equipped with side ventilators, as well as top ones, will grow better stock than one not so furnished. A close, stuffy atmosphere is bad for the chrysanthemum, and in houses where there is no side ventilation I favor taking out a row of glass, if no better way presents itself of getting a current of air through the plants.

Stock in Sand.

Stock in sand should be watched and, as soon as it is rooted, should be taken out. Cuttings run weak and sickly very soon if not handled at once. If the house is ready for planting, cuttings can be taken right from the sand and planted. If they are shaded by a pot during the hottest part of the day, they will take right hold and come along just as well as potted plants.

If the house is not ready, there are lots of frames in most florists' establishments that are at liberty when the bedding stock is gone, and no better place for young stock can be found.

Charles H. Totty.

TO POISON ANTS.

What would you recommend to keep ants out of seed flats? We have considerable trouble here with ants in seed flats, particularly salvias and tomatoes. We have had them take all the salvia and tomato seed out of flats in one night. J. W. Y.

Secure some cyanide of potassium, mix with powdered sugar and drop near the haunts of the ants in the evening. This is the most effective poison we have tried. Use great care in handling the cyanide, as it is deadly poison. The ants are fond of this mixture. C. W.

CARRYING OVER ROSES.

Will you please tell a beginner how to carry over a house of roses, Brides and Maids, that have been in the benches one year? When should I begin to dry them off, and how dry should I keep them? Dry enough to make all the leaves fall off? Do roses require shade at any time during summer?

Please give explicit details in regard to cutting them back, stating when it should be done and when they should be started again. A. L. K.

This method of culture requires more care, skill and labor than young stock and, unless carried out by an expert, the results are seldom satisfactory. Some experts who have adopted this method have had wonderfully good results, but the majority of growers are content to experiment along these lines on a very limited scale.

If the plants are in solid benches, begin to dry off at once and do it very gradually, never allowing them to become so dry as to cause wilting of even the young growth. This process may require three or four weeks, according to weather, quality of soil and other causes.

If the plants are on raised benches, the same condition can be reached in about half the time. Remove as much of the top soil from between the plants as can be done without destroying the roots; then fill up the space with a rich compost. The compost should be of about one part good cow manure to three parts loamy sod, with a generous sprinkling of bone meal. It is a good practice to give a good sprinkling of air-slaked lime before applying the mulch. The whole mass should then get a thorough soaking and the temperature be kept as low as conditions will allow.

Syringing should be practiced every day, not only with the object of keeping spider in check, but to keep the atmosphere in a proper condition of moistness.

After root action begins, all the small, strawy wood should be removed and the stronger canes cut back to at most four eyes. From thence ordinary cultural directions apply. RIBES.

THE ROSE CHAFER.

Will you kindly tell me what kind of beetle the enclosed is, and also a remedy for it? It destroys the outside roses, eating holes in the blooms and buds. C. C. S.

This insect is the rose chafer, or Macrodactylus subspinosus. It makes its appearance early in summer and feeds upon the flowers and foliage. There is but one brood in the year. The insect lives in the beetle stage about a month. As yet no practicable method of destroying it in its breeding places has been found.

Syringing with hot water, at or near the boiling point, will destroy them without causing injury to the plants. Spraying the bushes with the following mixture will also afford relief: One pound Paris green to fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture.

The insects, being very sluggish in the early morning, can easily be collected and destroyed. RIBES.

EEL WORMS IN ROSE BED.

I have a solid bed of roses that is affected with eel worms. Would it be safe to remove a foot of the soil, replace with new soil and then plant with new plants? Would it be safe to plant roses in the same house in a bed across the walk, with new plants?

Do the "pesky varmints" attack grafted stock as readily as the ungrafted? R. C. E.

Since eel worms are present in all soils, in manures and frequently even in water, it is impossible to get rid of them without cooking the soil and manure and boiling the water.

It is a rare occurrence to see a house, which has been planted with healthy stock and properly cared for afterwards, affected with the pest.

It is always safe to avoid planting young stock taken from infested plants, but I have never seen any evil effects following the use of infested soil where cultural methods were perfect.

The use of the Manetti stock for grafting has certainly had a deterrent effect on the spread of this pest. In fact, such stocks seem to be immune from its ravages. RIBES.

OIL AS A PRESERVATIVE.

We have not tried creosote in our houses, but we have tried linseed oil, and have found it a great help in preserving wood, and if it did any damage to the plants we did not discover it. As it readily dries in, the odor leaves it and it acts somewhat as a priming of paint.

While we have never done it, we think that it would pay to paint all new benches, both frame and boards, as lumber is getting to be at a premium, and good lumber can hardly be had at any price. J. L. O'QUINN & CO.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cinerarias.

There is nothing gained in sowing cinerarias before the early part of July. Seed started in spring gives unsatisfactory results. The plants simply pine away during the hot months. Cinerarias love cool treatment at all stages of their growth and their really rapid development starts with the advent of cold nights in September. In sowing the seed select a bench in a north house, or, better still, a frame having a north aspect. Cover the pan with a sheet of glass and lay a sheet of heavy paper over this. Leave a shutter over the sash to still further reduce drying out. A compost of leaf-mold, sand and fine charcoal will be found suitable. Sowings of cinerarias can be made until the middle of August, but if you want plants early in the winter start your seed not later than early July. Buy the best strain of seed you can procure, in preference to any cheap mixture.

Begonia Incarnata.

Begonia incarnata, the useful midwinter blooming begonia, is worthy of more extended culture. More vigorous in habit than B. Gloire de Lorraine, it is also paler pink in color, but a shade that is attractive. It is some time after the flowering season ends before really good propagating shoots are obtainable. Plenty of these are to be had now, and there is still ample time to root and grow these along into nice plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots for sales next Christmas.

Freesias.

Your flats and pans of freesias, which will have lost their foliage some weeks ago, should be shaken out when the bedding-out rush is over. If you do not cut your flowers with too long stems, these home-grown bulbs are superior to any you can buy, either from Bermuda or California. In taking out the bulbs, place the little offsets by themselves. These, if sown moderately thick in flats, will make good flowering bulbs for another season. To secure freesias for Christmas, a time when fancy prices may be had, the bulbs should be gotten into the soil during the first half of July. Give them a good soaking after planting. Stand them where the sun cannot strike them, where they will not dry out too rapidly, and allow them to dry out well before applying more water.

In the way of varieties, refracta alba is still the dominant variety. Ninety-five per cent sold as alba turn out to be yellow—nothing more nor less than Leichtlinii. Few firms carry the true, pure white form, which is much better than the golden substitute commercially. Fischer's Purity is by long odds the finest freesia on the market. No one who has grown this sort will want to bother with any other sorts. In Europe there are some promising hybrid freesias, which some day, when lower priced, will become popular here. F. Amethyst, lilac mauve, and F. Armstrongi, pink, found wild in Cape Colony a few years ago, are the best of these.

Begonia Rex.

Sections of leaves of Begonia Rex root rapidly during the hot summer months. Laid under a bench on a bed of moss or placed in the regular propagating bench, they will speedily make roots. Although not much seen on the markets, these handsome begonias meet with a considerable sale. They are excellent house plants and, planted under the shade of trees, they make splendid leaves outdoors if the ground is rich and fairly moist. Plants when potted will succeed well in a coldframe, if well shaded.

Vallota Purpurea.

The brilliant but comparatively little known Scarborough, Vallota purpurea, is one of the finest bulbous plants for pot culture for summer flowering. Not infrequently we see pots of these on the doorsteps or piazzas of quite humble cottages, so finely flowered as to excite our admiration. These vallota flower better when well potbound. They want a cool house and can be grown outdoors altogether from June to October. In the way of compost, fibrous loam, broken charcoal, sand, and a fourth part of old and dried cow manure suit them. There is now a pure white vallota in Europe. Could it be propagated and placed on the market at a moderate price, it would jump into instant favor commercially, flowering as it would when choice white flowers are decidedly scarce.

Peperomia Argyrea.

Peperomia argyrea may be propagated either by root division or from the leaves in the same way as Rex begonias. Whole leaves on which a portion of stem has been left should be inserted so that the leaves touch the sand. Cut the central parts of the leaves and drop a little sand over the same. Keep well watered and shaded and pot off as soon as the little plants appear. These peperomias come in very useful for making up table centerpieces, for filling up the vases of tall growing plants and for dishes of mixed tropical subjects. In winter they require a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, but in summer will thrive in any greenhouse or frame.

Amaryllis.

Young plants of amaryllis can be materially strengthened by planting outdoors. Give them a location in the fullest sunshine and where, during dry weather, a soaking from the hose can be given. A mulching of old manure is also helpful. Keep the ground well stirred after heavy rains or artificial waterings. Plants with bulbs of flowering size should have a bench in a sunny house, in preference to outdoor culture. Do not withhold the water supply, as the foliage should re-

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

The Review brings results.

Now is as good a time as you will find to buy glass for your repairs.

This is the season to push collections; if you don't get your money now you may have to wait until your people come back from their summer vacations.

It is stated that the Commercial Club of St. Paul will back the Twin Cities Florists' Club in an invitation to hold the S. A. F. convention at St. Paul.

A schedule of prizes has been issued for the "first grand annual exhibition of dahlias," to be given by the New England Dahlia Society at Tremont Temple, Boston, September 17 to 19. Maurice Field, 5 Union street, Boston, is secretary.

As indicating more graphically than anything else could do how close together Europe and America are being brought, mail posted in London Saturday was delivered in Chicago one week later. It came over on the last trip of the Lusitania, which made the run from Liverpool to New York in less than five days.

According to Bradstreet's, the prices of commodities in general are now lower than at any time since July 1, 1904. Bradstreet's figure that there has been a decrease of 15.4 per cent from the high point which was reached March 1, 1907, and they also display a decline of 14.1 per cent from June 1 of that year. Florists looking at the wholesale prices of cut flowers will subscribe to the belief that Bradstreet's make no overestimate of the decline, but when it comes to the things a florist buys, from food to fertilizer, it looks different; in fact, except on greenhouse glass, the declines seem easily counterbalanced by the advances.

Appointment of State Vice-president.

President Traendly has appointed V. E. Lambert, of Atlanta, Ga., as state vice-president for the State of Georgia.

W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

Secretary Esler, for the week ending June 13, adjusted hail losses amounting to over $1,200.

CLASSES OF DAHLIAS.

Referring to the recently issued schedule for the first annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, Secretary Maurice Fuld says: "You will note that we have at last settled all difficulties in regard to varieties of dahlias, which have created considerable argument in regard to what classes they belong, and if you will kindly refer to classes No. 86 and 87 you will readily see that we have forever settled these arguments."

The classes in the schedule read as follows:

Class No. 86. Giant show dahlias, including the following varieties: Mrs. Roosevelt, Gettysburg, W. W. Rawson, Governor Guild, Grand Duke Alexis, General Miles, Le Colosse, Dr. Kirtland, Cuban Giant, Meteor, Professor Mansfield and any others similar in size and form.

Class No. 87. Cactus dahlias with coarse florets, including the following varieties: Mrs. Charles Turner, Master Carl, Mrs. J. P. Mace, Les Alliées, Mistress Scrase Dickens, Rosea Superba, Purity, Octopus, Nil Desperandum, The Czar, Iona, Duc d'Orleans, Die Unschuld, Lovely Eynsford, Prince of Yellows, Goliath, Miss Gretta Park and any others of similar form.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market has shown considerable improvement this week. The extreme heat at the first of last week made so strong an impression that, although cool weather came Wednesday, it was Saturday before the market began to recover from the effect of the flood of soft stock. The week on the whole was one of the poorest of the season and led to many growers throwing out their stock. With cooler weather, this has led to a decided reduction in the supply this week. There still is an abundance of stock for all ordinary requirements and prices have not advanced; the only difference is that most of the stock now can be moved through the legitimate channels and there is less need for sacrifice sales, and waste has practically been eliminated. It is, however, still necessary to dump some of the white carnations and the growers of this class of stock would do well to save express charges and start preparation for next year.

The principal call continues to be for wedding flowers, but school closings are making their annual recurrence felt. Beauties are in good demand. The supply would be adequate if the quality were up to standard, but many of the Beauties are so poor that the retailers will not use them, and there is a strong demand for anything that is really first-class. Of other roses, Kaiserin, Killarney and Richmond have the call. Maid and Bride are small and the former is off color.

The receipts of carnations, while reduced, still are large. Those growers who have been able to retain the quality are getting satisfactory returns, but the demand is not for poor flowers and the lower grades have not profited to any great extent from the shortening in supply. Indoor asters are offered in fair quantity and are preferred to poor white carnations.

There has been a stiff market for valley and sweet peas are in good demand. The season of the peas under glass is nearly over and, while considerable quantities still are received in the market, only a small proportion have long stems. These sell on sight, for the greater part of the good stock is set aside for shipping orders. The sweet pea growers certainly have had as good a season as anyone and the increasing popularity of the sweet pea gives indications of a still further increase in supply next season.

The worst glut in the market at present is of Easter lilies. Practically every wholesale house has arrangements for a continuous supply of lilies throughout the year, and when all happen to begin cutting from batches at the same time the result is a congestion which deprives the growers of their profit. That is the present condition.

The local crop of peonies has been cut. All the fresh stock now received is from the north and little is coming in. While a number who have stored peonies in previous seasons have not done so this year, several new lots have come in and been stored. There is likely to be a supply of peonies as long as the demand lasts, but as to how the bulk of the stock will come out of storage, no one can say. There seem to be only a few who know how to handle peonies for storage with any certainty as to what the result will be. Year after year these few handlers have stock that gives uniform satisfaction, while that of most of the others does little more than depress the market. This year the conditions for storing peonies were thought to be a little less favorable than usual. At present the best stock is bringing 75 cents per dozen, with plenty at three bunches for $1 and quantities that buyers will not take at that figure.

There is an excellent call for smilax and strings of asparagus, but the demand for other green goods is light.

Floods at Kansas City are doing a whole lot more to hurt this market than the republican national convention is doing to help it. The high water has interrupted transportation to such an extent that the express companies refuse to accept shipments of perishable stock for Kansas City or any point in or beyond the flooded district. The extra demand from the convention does not counterbalance this loss; about all that Chicago florists will get out of the convention crowds will have first passed through the hands of other local people.

The Case of Perle.

A number of buyers have been disappointed recently at their inability to secure Perle roses without notice. Last week good Perles commanded 10 cents each over the counter, so short was the supply and so insistent the demand. There is only a limited demand for yellow roses in this market, except during the season of school closings; then they are wanted for use where yellow is the class color. It does not pay the large growers to plant many Perle for the intermittent demand through the season, and consequently they are not to be had in quantity in June. Anyone who wants Perles should order in advance; then they usually are to be had.

Boxwood.

Several wholesalers find themselves with quantities of boxwood, for which there is no sale and on which cold storage charges are piling up. There can be no doubt that the wholesalers overbought on this specialty this year and will be cautious in loading up with it another season. The first of the year there was a good demand, but lately there has been no sale whatever. Some of the stock in storage is still of usable quality, but E. C. Amling says the fact is that boxwood became so generally used that its sudden popularity flattened out completely and nobody wants it any more.

Saturday Mail Delivery.

June 13 the Chicago postoffice, without notice to the wholesalers, began its summer schedule of Saturday mail deliveries. The result was that a number of orders intended for shipment Saturday afternoon were not received until the regular Sunday trip was made to the postoffice.

Buyers should remember that in future there will be no mail delivery after 1 o'clock on Saturday. If a mail order is not dispatched in time to reach Chicago Saturday morning, a special delivery stamp must be attached; or one can now put on six ordinary 2-cent stamps and mark the envelope "For special delivery."

In Iowa.

F. J. Olsan, of Ames, Ia., is in town this week to settle a dispute with the John C. Moninger Co. Mr. Olsan claims the local firm did not make his last houses as large as they should have been, while the Moninger people assert the error was made by Mr. Olsan himself, for they wanted to make the houses larger and would have done so but for his objection. A compromise was reached by Mr. Olsan leaving an order for two more houses 25x100. He says that he cannot get along without additional space.

"We hear that business is not good," said Mr. Olsan, "but out in Iowa the florists sell everything they can produce, right down to the bottom. We don't know how much better business might be if we had more stock."

greenhouses. He does business as the Norwood Park Florists.

C. Philipp has just completed a roof garden decoration at the Illinois Athletic Club. Large window-boxes have been placed around the coping, with trellises ten feet high and connected at the top. The boxes have been planted with Cobæa scandens and Clematis paniculata for quick effect. A number of bay trees and boxwoods are used among the tables on the roof.

Bowling for both ladies and gentlemen will start June 23, at Mussey's alleys, under the auspices of the pastimes committee of the Chicago Florists' Club. This is to qualify for the S. A. F. convention teams.

A peony decoration at the opening of the Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. store last week attracted considerable attention.

Peter Reinberg returned June 18 from a short trip to New York as a member of a council committee to attend the dedicatory exercises on the new steamship Chicago.

Wietor Bros. report that they have had a surprising call for young stock of Richmond rose; it has been far heavier than last year. They say there also has been an excellent demand for Kaiserin.

George Fisher, who is the local buyer for the H. A. Fisher Co., spent last week at the firm's main store at Kalamazoo.

N. C. Moore & Co. have found the wholesale plant business a profitable department and are in the market for a carload of small pots, with which to extend that feature of their business next season. Miss Nellie C. Moore has been suffering with neuralgia for a fortnight.

Local wholesalers have been notified of the financial difficulty of a Greek named E. Mirras at St. Paul, who bought considerable quantities of stock in this market. It is stated his liabilities are $16,000, but wholesalers here for once are not interested to a large extent.

Frank Beu planted one house with carnations before the house was glazed, and says the stock is making splendid progress.

C. L. Washburn received his new Studebaker automobile June 16. This was a birthday present for his son, Ned Washburn, who has just completed his course in the agricultural college at Madison, Wis., and who will now actively enter the business of Bassett & Washburn.

Percy Jones says that the local buyers all call for valley, Kaiserin and peonies; there is no inquiry whatever even as to the price of Harrisii.

Zech & Mann are handling Matt Mann's annual crop of red gladioli. These never fail to go well and are to be seen in the window displays of the leading retailers.

C. H. Fisk says that June business is not so good as last year, but a little better than it was two years ago. He thinks the retail department of the business should be satisfactory to all.

Within the last week George Reinberg has practically doubled his stock of cattleyas, having received 1,000 plants of Mossiæ, gigas and one or two others.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has started the erection of four houses, about 28x350. These are for carnations and will comprise the firm's addition for this season.

Robert Johnstone is rusticating at Nunda, Ill.

It is stated that the Chicago Carnation Co. has concluded to discontinue the growing of roses and will next season devote all its glass to carnations.

A. A. Sawyer has 15,000 plants of his new aster in the field and says the growth is ten days ahead of last year.

Fred Schramm, of Park Ridge, has put in a new gasoline pumping engine that works directly into his water pipes and gives him good direct pressure, instead of the tank pressure he has used heretofore.

Charlie Erne, of E. H. Hunt's force, carries his hand in a sling—three boils.

Kennicott Bros. Co. says the E. Wienhoeber Co. is using a good many auratum lilies, because of their novelty. An Evanston grower supplies them, apparently the only lot grown under glass for this market.

This is the week of roses on the wooded island at Jackson park. Last Sunday, June 14, there was a record crowd there. Quite a few plants died out and the garden has been fully as good in other years.

The A. L. Randall Co. says there is a good call for valley and for Adiantum Croweanum.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the cold storing of miscellaneous lots of peonies is not all it is cracked up to be and that sooner or later a good many wholesalers will come to the conclusion that poor stock doesn't become any better by paying a month's storage charges on it. The only peonies it pays to store are the very best; the quicker the others are sold the more they will bring.

the marriage of a daughter of W. G. Matthews, at Dayton, among other interesting announcements.

C. W. McKellar says the orchid crop promises to outlast the season of spring weddings.

Among recent visitors were George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Mr. Heite, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City; L. F. Dintelman and A. S. Halstead, Belleville, Ill.; also a large number of nurserymen on their way home from the Milwaukee convention.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Local florists are planning to give the finest flower show ever held in the city next November. Plans are now making by the local club for the affair, which will probably be held in the arsenal. The event is arranged for the purpose of demonstrating to the citizens of Springfield what a showing the "Flower City" of the state can make when the great abundance of blooms are brought together. The show will be open for three days, afternoon and evening, and a nominal sum will be charged for admission. It is probable that the proceeds will go to the charitable institutions of the city. Frank A. Friedley has been appointed chairman of the executive committee, which includes A. C. Brown and Henry Drake.

The event will be the first of its kind to be held in the capital city, the flower show of last summer having been in charge of the merchants.

The committee and officers of the Florists' Club are planning to make the show in November a great success and if so it will be held annually. The officers include: President, Carl Ruth; vice-president, R. T. Donnell; secretary, Frank A. Friedley, and treasurer, George Van Horn.

The Market.

The usual midsummer stagnation, which is recognized as inevitable in July and August, has arrived ahead of time. With European travel, weddings and commencements it was fondly hoped that June would prove the best month of the year. It is to date about the worst in the wholesale section, and nothing can now lift it from the slough of despond. It will go down in wholesale history as the most disastrous and discouraging experience cut flower growers and wholesalers have ever known. There is no market, is the response to one's solicitous inquiries. Price is no object, never were such low values at this season, and yet the volume of retail trade does not increase. When the weddings and school closings are over, there will be nothing left but lethargy and resignation. The lesson of patience has been a severe one and all have suffered. But the end of depression will come in due time; the future is bright with promise. The grand harvests, the shelving of presidential uncertainty, the reopening of the banks and the return of public confidence all tend to the absolute dependence that may surely be entertained by all in the good times coming; wait a little longer. In the meantime New York wholesaledom will rest on its oars and recuperate.

Few good Beauties are arriving. The limited quantity insures a good figure for the best, but the most of the Beauty stock is anything but beautiful. This applies to all rose arrivals. Quality is deteriorating and the supply is abundant. The peony flood is over. There were millions of them while they lasted. The hot, dry weather spoiled most of them, so that the few arrivals June 15 were small and off color. This week will see their finish. They made a great noise while they lasted. You could hardly hear the other flowers at all and they did great service in the wedding decorations.

White orchids are still wanted at good prices. The other colors and kinds are abundant and reasonable—very. There seems to be no end to the carnations. Every wholesaler has his place full of them. There are no prices. I saw 10,000 go for $25 June 15. Gladioli become more plentiful daily. Next week the southern stock will be here. That means the limit in low rates—50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are scarcer and the selected stock sells readily. Lilies do not improve; $2 to $3 per hundred June 15 was the prevailing quotation. Valley holds because of the June weddings.

The Belmont funeral caused quite a demand the last of the week for orchids and valley. Over 100 beautiful floral offerings were sent to the church and house.

The passage of the racing bills at Albany, which ended the betting ring in New York and threw thousands out of situations, will be felt by the leading retailers heavily, these patrons of the sport being among the best spenders for flowers in the city, and always reliable cash customers. Every little bit hurts when the large bits are eliminated from the retailer's regular income.

Society is leaving for the summer colonies two weeks earlier than usual. The exodus is already in full swing. Before the end of the month there will be good cause for every department of the trade to take a holiday. Doubtless July 1 will see a general conforming to the system of other years and the closing of the wholesale doors at 3 p. m.

The Rose Meeting.

The union meeting of the American Rose Society and the Horticultural Society of New York was held at Bronx park June 10 and 11. This joint demonstration was naturally expected to materialize both a large attendance and a large exhibition, but it did not. In fact, if J. H. Troy, of New Rochelle, had forgotten to come, the rose show would have required much less room. But the genial Englishman saved the day. He made a splendid display and did it artistically, using fancy vases, hampers and baskets in his arrangement. He well deserved the F. R. Pierson silver cup. Silver medals were awarded W. A. Manda and Dr. Van Fleet for exhibits of Wichuraiana hybrids. Other exhibitors were F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, collections of peonies, outdoor roses and sweet peas of many new and popular varieties; R. Vincent & Sons, of White Marsh, Md., geraniums, over thirty varieties; Harry Turner, of Castle Gould, L. I., Malmaison carnations; Lager & Hurrell and Julius Roehrs Co., orchids. Mr. Troy staged nearly fifty varieties of roses.

W. C. Barry, who was announced as the lecturer of the occasion, was not present, nor was his lecture read. Leonard Barron made a stereopticon exhibit.

P. O'Mara was chairman and announced the fall exhibition of flowers and plants at the Museum of Natural History building, Eightieth street and Columbus avenue, November 17 to 19. The conclusion arrived at by the attendance was that Bronx park is too far from the beaten track to draw the inquisitive New Yorker. The Museum of Natural History is quite central, easily reached and quickly from downtown, and ample in room and convenience for a big show, if this city ever can be woke up to its privileges floricultural again.

Ed. Roehrs, secretary of the orchid section, is strongly in favor of a more central spot for orchid exhibits in the future.

Various Notes.

Thomas Wholgren, head gardener for Burden, of Westbury, L. I., is again a hero. Last winter he was severely wounded defending his employer's home against burglars and last week he saved the lives of two of the Burden children and their governess in overcoming a mad Newfoundland dog, being severely bitten himself, his hand badly lacerated. Mr. Wholgren was taken at once to the Pasteur Institute for treatment.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., arrived at Rotterdam June 17 and will make a tour of Europe this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, of the J. M. Kellar Co., Brooklyn, are also summering in Europe and George Stumpp, the retailer of Fifth avenue, and wife are enjoying their annual tour in the same localities.

Next Tuesday, June 23, the auction season closes at W. Elliott & Sons, 42 Vesey street. Special invitations and celebration of the best season the firm has ever known will bring together a record attendance.

July 1 will be especially interesting this year because of the New York Florists' Club's annual outing. Everything promises the greatest success the club has ever enjoyed. The gardeners' societies of Tarrytown, Madison, Orange and Nassau County have been invited to participate. In fact, delegations from all horticultural clubs or societies in and near New York will be cordially welcomed and an opportunity for fraternal reunion is here provided that should draw the largest crowd the club has ever entertained.

The sympathy of the trade is tendered the Johnston brothers, of the Johnston Heating Co., in the death of their other brother, George, whose early demise is regretted by a large number of friends.

Mrs. Frank K. Frank, wife of the florist at 1561 Third avenue, is recovering from a serious illness. Mr. Frank takes a gloomy view of the retail business, because of the general depression that has so adversely affected the wage-earning class of the east side, and sees little hope of improvement before the return of general prosperity.

June 16 and 20 the New York Cut Flower Exchange will distribute its annual dividend of ten per cent to its stockholders, a most satisfactory showing after so strenuous a season.

E. Bonnot, the retail florist of Jersey City, and of the firm of Bonnot Bros., in the Coogan building, leaves with his family next week for a summer in France.

Joseph Levy, with John Seligman, says he is writing the music for a new song, with words by Mr. Saltford, on "The Mysteries of the Wholesale Business." There should be a wide demand for this music, especially if it develops the solving of the problems. The music this year will have to be written in a minor key.

The Brooklyn Retail Florists' Association is now well established and Secretary W. A. Phillips announces the next meeting for Monday evening, June 22, at the Imperial. There are over 200 retail florists in the City of Churches. With harmony and coöperation, this society should number every man and woman in the business and prove a wonderful power for mutual benefit. The New York wholesalers have found their association of enormous benefit. The same principle will work in the retail department and in other branches of the business, creating and maintaining harmony on the basis of fair play and square dealing and generous consideration of each other's welfare. The plant growers also have demonstrated the value of getting together. As already announced, they will celebrate by a family outing on Staten Island June 25. Their regular meetings are held monthly at the Hotel St. Denis.

The roof gardens of the principal New York hotels and the summer gardens at the Plaza and St. Regis have never been so perfect and beautiful as this season. Some of the retail florists cover the entire expense of the summer by their contracts for this style of decoration and the care of the palms in the home conservatories.

M. A. Bowe had some grand baskets and bouquets at the opening of the aerial theater on the New York roof June 15.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was an interested attendant and exhibitor at the flower show last week in New York.

A much-needed rain fell all day Monday in New York and vicinity. The peonies arriving early in the week showed the bad effects of the long continued drought. Long Island crops of all kinds have been greatly benefited. Sunday, June 14, the temperature hugged the 90 degree mark.

A call at the factory of S. Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, June 13, found this house, as usual, with many contracts booked and many buildings in course of construction. In addition to their regular work, they are now erecting some Donohoe and wife are at their summer home near the Palisades, and as the days begin to shorten, the balance of the hard-working employers and employees will take their reward up in the health-giving zone of the mountains or by the sounding sea.

Bowling.

This must be Joseph Manda's lucky year. By the narrowest of margins and a strike in the ninth frame of his final game, he won the Traendly transportation prize, with an average of 155 1/6. To date he alone has qualified. There is still a fighting chance for Fenrich, Donaldson and Schreiner. The later additions to the club experts began too late. Steady progress is evident weekly. Bowling will continue for several weeks and the team, which will be selected about July 1, will practice together weekly until August. Fenrich made the high score, 210, June 12. The record was as follows:

The Brant-Hentz Flower Co. has been incorporated, as reported in a news note in last week's REVIEW, under the laws of New Jersey, to deal in cut flowers, plants and nursery trees and do decorating and landscape gardening. The company will pay special attention to the wholesale flower trade. Henry Hentz, Jr., will be president of the new company, and Elwood Brant treasurer. The principal office and greenhouses will be at Madison, N. J. Mr. Hentz is well known for his success as a grower of roses. Mr. Brant is also a successful florist and is the present owner of the property and green-

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is gradually diminishing, with a few good days, and other days that are far from good. There are still a few commencements and some weddings; these, with a few parties and the ordinary demands for flowers, sum up our business activity. The supply is noticeably smaller, especially in carnations, some of the growers having realized that it was not worth while to ship in flowers from played-out plants. The supply of outdoor sweet peas, excepting on the rainy days, is large and they are fine. They can be had in all colors, with excellent stems. Prices are receding. Among the roses, Kaiserin is looming up strongly. Beauties are in good supply and of fair quality. Killarney is good but in most cases short in stem. Bride and Maid are deteriorating.

Cattleyas continue fine and in strong supply. Valley is excellent. Peonies are over, the market being supplied by flowers placed in cold storage. A limited number of outdoor flowers, such as pyrethrum, achillea, etc., have made their appearance. Greens are in good demand, especially asparagus, both in bunches and in strings.

The Graham-Mergenthaler Deal.

For fully three months the street has been alive with rumors concerning combinations and deals wherein Wm. Graham and J. Fred Mergenthaler were leading factors. These rumors proved mere phantoms when traced to their origin. But an arrangement has finally been consummated whereby the Graham Floral Co. assumes the management of the store on Germantown avenue, near Chelten avenue, leased by F. & H. Mergenthaler, and of the greenhouses and residence on East Washington lane belonging to the same family. Inquiry on East Washington lane elicited the information that the Graham Floral Co. consisted of Wm. Graham, J. A. Burrows and another person of great importance, who, it may be said, bears somewhat the same relation to the Philadelphia Four Hundred that Mr. McAllister formerly bore to the élite of New York.

When asked concerning the future of the present Graham companies, David Rust, who is receiver for both companies, said that he was making every effort to wind up their affairs. All the plants belonging to the Hugh Graham Co. at Logan have been sold, excepting a house of orchids. The lease and fixtures of the store at 104 South Thirteenth street, now owned by the Wm. Graham Co., will, Mr. Rust thought, be disposed of before July 1. No statement has been made regarding what the receiver will be able to realize for the creditors; such a statement is impossible until liquidation is complete.

The Profession of Horticulture.

I am indebted to Alfred Burton for the following interesting newspaper clipping. Mr. Burton, who is a graduate of State College, believes that a young man whose aim is to make his mark as a florist will greatly benefit by a college course.

"The school of agriculture in the Pennsylvania state college has its catalog for 1908-9 ready for distribution. The work is clearly outlined for all the courses offered. There are seven four years' courses leading to the degree of bachelor of science, offering opportunity to specialize in agricultural chemistry, agronomy, animal husbandry, dairy husbandry, forestry, horticulture and plant pathology. Students desiring to enter these courses must satisfy the usual college entrance requirements. The instruction of the first two years is practically identical and the student is not required to make his decision as to his special course until the beginning of his junior year.

"The special course of two years is designed to meet the needs of young men who do not have the time to give to the four years' courses. No entrance examination is required. In the first year some of the most fundamental subjects necessary to a general knowledge of agriculture are definitely prescribed, while in the second year wide latitude is offered the student in the selection of subjects of study, in order that he may be fitted for the practical work he may desire to undertake.

"The winter courses in agriculture begin December 1, 1908, and continue twelve weeks without intermission for the holidays. They seek to serve those engaged in general agriculture, horticulture, dairy husbandry, dairy manufacture and poultry husbandry or those who purpose to engage in these practical fields of work. Anyone interested may receive a catalog by addressing School of Agriculture, State College, Pa."

large part of the arrivals are sold for anything they will bring, the rubbish heap being the destination of many. There is little call for indoor roses, but the Jacqs and other outdoor hybrids are now of good quality and sell fairly well. Carnations can be had at almost any price. Numbers have been cleared at $1.50 to $2.50 per thousand, some even lower. A fair price is 50 cents per hundred, and more sell lower than higher. Peonies are abundant and meet with a fair sale. After the present week they will shorten up, some growers having already finished cutting them.

Outdoor sweet peas are now of fair quality. Prices vary from 10 cents to 25 cents per hundred. There is little call for lilies, double feverfew, stocks and other flowers. For lily of the valley there is a fair call, also for gladioli and Spanish iris. Bedding plant trade is about over. Sales have been satisfactory this season.

Rose and Peony Exhibition.

The main exhibition hall was filled to overflowing June 13. The display of peonies was undoubtedly the best ever held in Boston. While the hardy roses made a creditable showing, numerous fine displays of hardy perennials and other flowers added interest to a most beautiful and varied exhibition.

Taking the peonies first, we have never seen a finer lot of blooms, and the interest in them was far greater than that shown in the hardy roses. For thirty or more double varieties, prizes went to T. C. Thurlow, James McKissock, George Hollis and E. J. Shaylor & Son. The too heavy preponderance of white flowers in the last named exhibit prevented it from securing a higher award. For twelve named doubles, three of each, William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, E. J. Shaylor and George Hollis won in order named. For collection of singles, T. C. Thurlow was first. This was an excellent lot. A few of his best varieties were: Adana, Venus, Meteore, Lady Helen Vincent, Queen of May, Dorothy, Argus, Hesperus and Princess of Wales. Second and third went to George Hollis. For twelve varieties single Japanese, George Hollis won with a fine set, with one exception all being his own seedlings. The best specimen bloom was shown by James McKissock, George Hollis, second. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, secured first in the large China vase class with a well arranged lot, second going to Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener. For six named doubles, white, prizes went to T. C. Thurlow, J. L. Blanchard and C. S. Minot. For six varieties rose-pink, six varieties salmon-pink and six varieties red, T. C. Thurlow was first in each class. For twenty-five blooms, white or blush, T. C. Thurlow was again first, while for twenty-five double pink or rose, E. J. Shaylor was first, followed by T. C. Thurlow and William Whitman. For twenty-five double red or crimson, T. C. Thurlow led with a splendid vase of Felix Crousse, W. Whitman second, Frederick Mason, E. L. Lewis gardener, third. For any other color W. Whitman won. For twelve blooms, double, for new commercial growers, J. L. Blanchard led in a strong class, W. Whitman second, Mrs. Gardner third.

There were several large non-competitive collections of peonies. A. H. Fewkes had a splendid lot. Some of his best were: Livingstone, Mme. Emile Galle, a beautiful soft pink, and Marie Lemoine. George Hollis had a good many seedlings, Eliza, single pink; Admiral Togo, double dark red, and Aristocrat, double soft pink, being the best. James McKissock had seventy-four varieties of doubles, John Richardson, deep pink; Mme. L. Mere and Tarquemada, full deep pink, being noteworthy. T. C. Thurlow showed a splendid collection of all classes. Some of his best doubles were: Pottsi alba, a lovely soft pink; Duc de Wellington, Princess Clothilde, Mr. Manning, fine double red; Virginia, soft pink; Rousseau, shrimp pink; Bridesmaid and Edouard Andre. From E. J. Shaylor came many unique varieties. Some of the best flowers noted were: Baroness Schroeder, Triomphe de L'Exposition de Lille, Mme. Savrean, James Kelway, superb white; Souvenir de L'Exposition Universelle, Avalanche, M. Dupont, H. Woodward, M. M. Cahuzac, La Tendresse, Germaine Bigot, Aurore, Duchesse de Nemours (Calot), probably the purest white variety known, also shown here under the name of Mrs. Gwyn Lewis; Henry Laurent, M. Jules Elie, A. A. Gould, Mme. de Galhau, Kelway's Queen, Mme. Leonie Calot, Gloire de Charles Gombault, Marguerite Gerard, Octave Demay, Mme. de Vatry, Mme. de Verneville and Emily Hoste. For his fine new seedling, Georgiana Shaylor, a first-class certificate was awarded, no other novelties receiving mention.

Farquhar & Co. staged an extensive collection of peonies, mostly in large vases, and containing about 2,000 flowers altogether. These included some fine sorts. Among other exhibits they also had flowers of a new lily in the way of

L. tenuifolium sent by E. H. Wilson from western China recently.

Blue Hill Nurseries were first and second for thirty varieties of perennials, with a fine assortment. F. J. Rea, W. W. Rawson and T. C. Thurlow also contributed large collections of perennials. J. T. Butterworth had a collection of Spanish iris, and C. W. Parker, German iris.

While the date was a trifle early for some exhibitors of hardy roses, there being none from M. H. Walsh, whose flowers were not yet open, there was a good general display in the numerous classes. W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen gardener, was again the most successful exhibitor, taking seven firsts and one second. Other successful rosarians were Mrs. Aaron Ward, of Roslyn, N. Y., whose hybrid teas were extra good; Mrs. F. Ayer, George Page gardener; Frederick Mason, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Whitman, Mrs. E. M. Gill and E. E. Lincoln. For 100 bottles arranged for effect, the winners were W. J. Clemson, Mrs. F. Ayer, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Frederick Mason. William Whitman and Mrs. J. L. Gardner had the best fifteen vases of sweet williams. Robert Cameron had an interesting collection of insectivorous plants, also a display of hardy flowers. Mrs. E. M. Gill had, as usual, an interesting general display.

The attendance, which was large June 13, was phenomenal June 14, showing the popularity of the Sunday shows with the masses.

Garden Committee's Travels.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the peony gardens of E. J. Shaylor & Son, at Wellesley Hills, June 11. The visitors were agreeably surprised at the wealth of floral beauty awaiting their inspection. Although Mr. Shaylor has only been in the peony business since 1901, he now possesses a collection which cannot probably be duplicated in the country. All the best European novelties from Kelway, Dessert, Lemoine, Calot and other noted specialists are secured each year. Poor varieties are weeded, duplications noted and corrected and every effort made to have every plant absolutely true to name.

After such a long spell of hot and droughty weather it was pleasing to see several acres of these flowers in full beauty. The size of flowers has never been surpassed, and the absence of dashing rains made almost every flower seem perfect. A few of the finest doubles noted were Mme. Emile Lemoine, Marguerite Gerard, Therese, Aurore, Germaine Bigot, Mme. Savrean, Mme. Joanne Sallier, Coronation, new; Lady Alexandra Duff, James Kelway, fine; Rosa Bonheur, Baroness Schroeder, Pottsi alba, M. Dupont, Mme. L. Mere, Mme. Leonie Calot, Avalanche, and Mme. de Galhau. Some excellent singles were still blooming, while quite a number of promising seedlings were in evidence. Among the latter was a magnificent double of shrimp pink color, flowers eight and one-half inches in diameter. This is the only seedling so far named, but in Georgiana Shaylor we have a novelty equal to the finest French or English introductions.

Mr. Shaylor has a beautiful residence, quite romantically situated. With peonies he has made a striking success and all interested in these beautiful hardy flowers should pay him a visit while they are in season.

After leaving Mr. Shaylor's the committee inspected the private peony collection of J. L. McKissock at West Newton. Mr. McKissock has gotten together what is probably the richest amateur collection in America, embracing several hundred varieties, the cream of European novelties being included. Of the Moutan varieties there is also a fine assortment, these being seen to good advantage on an earlier visit.

The garden committee inspected the estate of Harry A. Belcher, of Randolph, June 13, while June 15 the rose gardens of Peter B. Bradley and Ernest E. Lincoln, of Hingham, were looked over. The committee has a number of other prospective visits to make, including one to the estate of George E. Barnard, of Ipswich, June 19, the latter being entered for the Hunnewell triennial premium.

Club Meeting.

For a June and hot weather gathering there was a big attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club June 16, nearly 200 being on hand to hear Prof. A. H. Kirkland deliver a stereopticon lecture on gypsy and other moth pests and methods of fighting them. The stereopticon part of the lecture was of special interest. Mr. Kirkland is an entertaining speaker and answered many queries from his hearers, being accorded an enthusiastic vote of thanks.

There was some discussion over the location of the coming picnic, the high rental charged at Riverside park, which had been favored, making it an impossibility. Pine Banks park, Malden, was most favored; the date being fixed as July 26. Three new members were elected.

There was, as usual, a fine display of seasonable stock on the exhibition tables. Wilfred Wheeler had a fine collection of strawberries. William Downs was awarded

The many friends of Robert M. Grey, formerly of North Easton and for the last five years located at Cienfuegos, Santa Clara Province, Cuba, were pleased to see him on a visit last week. Mr. Grey likes his new field of labor. He is specially interested in raising improved seedlings of sugar cane and is doing much experimental work for Harvard College.

As the board of aldermen of the Boston city council have failed to endorse Mayor Hibbard's recommendations for an amalgamation of the park department and that of public grounds, we will be compelled to witness a little longer the woeful mismanagement of the latter department. When it is removed from the arena of municipal politics and ceases to be a convenient recreation ground for needy aldermanic supporters, then and not till then will it emerge from the rut it now occupies.

A number of carnation growers are now throwing out their stock and will start replanting with field plants early in July. In spite of the dry weather, stock in the fields is doing well.

Waban Conservatories are handling some extra fine summer roses at present, the Kaiserin being specially good.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

Reports from California continue to reflect the conditions reported in the Review May 28, by A. J. Pieters.

Don't forget that this is the time to prepare the illustrations for your 1909 catalogue; make your photographs.

Mail quotations received from Ollioules this week are the lowest yet to hand for the season's crop of French bulbs.

The total invoice value of seeds imported in April, 1908, was $402,411, against $525,431 in the same month of 1907.

The reports from the Michigan bean fields are to the effect that the necessary acreage has been found and planted under favorable conditions.

A. C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., is inspecting the sweet pea crops in the Santa Clara valley of California, where he has growing contracts.

George S. Green, president of the American Seed Trade Association, says he is hoping for a large attendance at the Detroit convention next week.

The peas in Michigan are doing reasonably well; unless a sudden hot wave strikes them while in flower, as might easily happen after so cool a spring, the yield should be normal.

One has only to take a ride through the country at this season to be made to realize what the inventors of hand cultivators have done to lighten the labors of "the man with the hoe."

The Seed Trade Association will hold its annual convention at Detroit next week. There are several important subjects to be discussed besides those on the program, and a good session is expected.

Joseph Breck & Son, Boston, report a larger volume of business in seeds than they have done in any previous season. Their representative, P. J. Van Baarda, will sail for Europe July 25 for a two months' trip.

The legality of the non-warranty is now so well established that in most of the cases now threatening seed houses, the sellers have given some guaranty by not employing the language of the generally adopted disclaimer.

F. M. Roesch, of the Fredonia Seed Co., Fredonia, N. Y., has begun work on a three-story brick and stone building for a factory, office and retail store for his company, on Water street. It will be 50x100 and of the most modern construction.

At Toledo, O., June 8, James T. Lynch filed suit in common pleas court for $15,000 damages from James G. Hickox and S. C. Schenck because of misrepresentations through which, he alleges, the defendants induced him to buy $7,500 stock in the Hickox, Mull & Hill Co., handlers of grass seeds, after it had been reincorporated under the Michigan laws. Lynch alleges that the stock was worthless, and that, through James W. Knott, who went to see Schenck for him, the defendants led him to believe that the stock was a good investment and would pay seven per cent.

NEW KEOKUK (IA.) FIRM.

The Gate City Seed Co., with capital stock of $30,000, has leased the old Hubinger building on the corner of Third and Main streets, at Keokuk, Ia., and will occupy the three stories and basement as wholesale and retail departments of the seed business. They are already moving into the building, which is one of the most imposing business structures in the city, and expect to complete all their plans within the next few days. This move has been necessary because of the fact that the seed department of the O. A. Talbott Co. has outgrown the present quarters of that firm, so this new firm has absorbed that branch of the Talbott business and has broadened out into larger fields. O. A. Talbott will not be actively connected with the new firm, of which A. M. Davidson is president, W. D. Burt and H. E. McCoy being associated with him. Mr. Talbott will devote his entire time to the grain business.

DUTCH BULBS.

Now that the flowering season in the bulb fields of Holland is quite finished, growers are no little surprised to find that notwithstanding the unusual backwardness of the season, many of the tulips are already showing signs of ripening, and from present appearances it would seem as if the lifting will not be much behind ordinary seasons. The fine, warm weather of the last two weeks of May has no doubt done much towards the ripening of all sorts of bulbs, and if it keeps up for some weeks it will prove of great benefit for all outstanding crops. It is true that under these circumstances the growers will not be able to harvest as fine and large bulbs as last season, but the blooming capacities of such bulbs will decidedly be far better than last year. Generally speaking, however, the outlook is not for an abundant crop of either tulips or hyacinths, as the growing season has been too short, and from the present appearances of the crocus stocks it is likely that good crocus will be quite as scarce, or even scarcer, than they were last year. However, as crocuses are not lifted until July, little can be said before the end of June and by that time tulips are likely to be out of the ground, and results of crops can be fairly well estimated.

If bulb sales are to be depending upon the number of visitors we have had this season during the spring, says a

ALLEN, OCTOGENARIAN.

Saturday, June 13, C. L. Allen, the widely known seed grower of Floral Park, N. Y., was 80 years of age and the occasion was celebrated by a considerable gathering of his friends, both afternoon and evening, to whom he read a paper he had prepared, entitled "At Eighty." He is enjoying good health, despite the fact that he was very ill this spring with pneumonia. Pulling through this was due to his remarkable constitution and the good care he had while sick.

IOWA SEED DEALERS MEET.

The second annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association was held at Des Moines June 10, with the attendance of most of the seedsmen of the state, nine new members being elected. Three sessions were held, the principal business being the consideration of the Iowa pure seed law, which now has had a year's test and been found inadequate, unjust and burdensome.

In his opening address, President Page urged co-operation among the members of the society with the object of competing more successfully with dealers of other states. He dwelt upon the advantages of a change in the state seed law and asked the members of the organization to work in conjunction to bring sufficient pressure to bear upon the state legislature to secure a repeal or amendment of the measure. He declared that the law discriminates against dealers in the state in favor of seedsmen from surrounding territory.

Among those present were Prof. L. H. Pammel, of Ames, one of the framers of the law, and State Seed Commissioner H. R. Wright, who is charged with its enforcement. Prof. Pammel said that since the law has had a year's practical test he has seen its defects and admitted that it needed remedying. Commissioner Wright said that during the year he has observed between 500 and 1,000 cases of where seed dealers might be prosecuted under the pure seed law, but because of the law being a new one he had overlooked minor offenses.

A legislative committee consisting of C. N. Page, Des Moines; H. A. Johns, Sioux City, and B. H. Adams, of Decorah, was appointed to urge the amendment of the law by the next legislature. H. A. Johns was appointed to take up the subject of freight rates with the railroads.

Officers were re-elected as follows: President, C. N. Page, Des Moines; vice-

The Market.

There is not much to say about the cut flower business. A few June weddings, some commencements and a little general trade manage to keep life in the shops, but the business is much below last year.

The wholesale houses have Beauties, lilies, phlox and sweet peas in abundance. All other stock is showing the effects of the hot weather.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg Florists' Club met June 9 with a good attendance. The subject scheduled was "Hardy Roses and Peonies," but the meeting was one week too late for these, the early season bringing them on so early that a poor show resulted. The club, however, awarded the following prizes to private gardeners: W. C. Madson, gardener for R. H. Boggs, first on roses and peonies; Robert Lilley, gardener for Mr. Barnsdol, second on roses.

There were some other exhibits of flowers which helped out the show, such as digitalis, columbine, delphinium, Spanish iris and a number of other things, all good.

The club decided to hold the annual outing as a basket picnic, Thursday, June 25, at the Crystal Farm, Bakerstown, Pa., the home of the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co. There were many who desired to visit this, the largest plant of the kind in western Pennsylvania, and thought they might combine this trip with the picnic and save one day. Trains leave the B. & O. station, Allegheny, at 1 p. m. Trolley cars run every hour. The committee having charge are P. S. Randolph, John Jones and Julius Ludwig.

Various Notes.

A party consisting of Wm. Falconer, Fred Burki, E. C. Reineman, Julius Ludwig and W. A. Clarke visited the beautiful country place of R. H. Boggs at Sewickley, Pa., June 11. This is one of the most delightful spots in this part of the country, being situated on a hill which in many parts of the country would be considered a mountain. It overlooks the whole Sewickley valley, with a view of the Ohio river for miles and, while within three minutes' drive of a bustling village, is in a sense isolated. The mansion is reached by a drive which winds around the hill at a grade which does not seem at all unusual, especially as on entering the grounds one finds something striking to catch the eye and interest him. In some spots are common wild flowers, with clumps of wild crab, kalmias, rhododendrons and evergreens in variety, all growing luxuriantly. The gardener, W. C. Madson, took the party in charge and pointed out the things of most interest. Some of the observant ones noticed the provision made for birds all over the place and it developed that Mr. Madson is the author of a work on song birds of America. While this was not the best time to visit the greenhouses, his fall crop of mums and roses was inspected and there was a bench of carnations still blooming finely.

The place contains about fifty acres and outside of the roads no grading has been done, but it is planted naturally, each group of plants suited to the spot. The whole is a credit to the landscape architect who laid out the scheme, the gardener who carried it out and maintains it in its present perfect shape and lastly to R. H. Boggs, who selected the choice spot in all Allegheny county and then was not afraid to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to make it the leading place among the colony of well-kept places which overlook the Sewickley valley.

HOUSE FOR TOMATOES.

I want to build a house 14x80 for tomatoes. Would a wall four feet high be high enough for a bench, or will the plants do better on a raised bed?

J. J.

In a house as narrow as fourteen feet a wall four feet high would hardly be high enough for a raised bench, as it would give your plants little head-room. The plants could, of course, be carried over on a line with the roof a foot or more away from the glass, but trained that way only two rows could be accommodated, and your house would be pretty well shaded by the foliage. A tomato plant will fruit much better with the roots confined, so that the solid or raised bed is not the most suitable place for them.

Your best plan would be to grow them in boxes. Make these about one foot wide and nine or ten inches deep and any length you desire. They could be made continuous for the whole length of the house, or in lengths that could be easily moved around. Set the plants about fourteen inches apart in the boxes.

With a good light house four rows of plants could be grown without the one shading the other much if they were trained to upright trellises. The height of your plants would, of course, be regulated by the height of your house and they would have to be stopped before they reached the glass. The two outside rows would not have as much headroom as the two in the center of the house; but if you have an east and west house it may be best to stop them all about an even height, so that the center rows would not shade the back row. If it is a north and south house it will be all the better for your plants, as then the light will strike on both sides of the rows some part of the day and give them all an equal chance.

C. J.

BUFFALO.

State of Business.

The spring business has now come to a sudden end; that is, the planting and cemetery work. This business comes and goes like a storm. Orders pile in early and it is a case of hard work till you finish up. The city is now a bower of beauty and it has been remarked that the city never has looked so well. The cemetery work is now all complete and the growers have a breathing spell, for a time at least.

The cut flower trade is quiet, aside from the weddings. Graduations are now in full force and when this is over everybody looks for a quiet season. Stock is keeping up good and bids fair to last until the rush is over.

Various Notes.

Owing to the hot weather and the busy season, the regular meeting of the club was called off.

Arnold Ringier called in Buffalo last week.

David Scott, of Corfu, is picking a fine crop of early peas. The stock finds ready sale, as it so far surpasses the worn-out winter flowers.

Rowland Cloudsley, of the Lenox Flower Shop, reports a good business since his opening a short time ago.

W. J. Palmer & Son have handled all the large weddings in this vicinity for the last few weeks. With the large force they have in the store they can handle weddings and any business which may come their way.

R. A. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The last week, which was, generally speaking, the end of the season among the florists, was a fairly good one. The principal work was for school commencements. There were also quite a few weddings, though nothing of any note, and some funeral work. The rain has at last let up and we had delightful weather last week, clear and cool. Stock at all of the wholesale houses was plentiful all of the week, and the demand, both local and shipping, was reported as satisfactory. The quality of the stock that is coming in is poor and will be from now on.

Roses seem more plentiful than carnations. Good, first-class stock is always in demand, but too much of the poorer grades is thrown into this market. Extra good valley can be had. Candidums, irises, peonies, cornflowers and a lot of other outdoor stock go to make up the daily market here, with plenty, also, of extra quality smilax and other greens.

Club Meeting.

There was quite a large gathering of members at the June meeting of the Florists' Club, which was held last Thursday afternoon in Bowman's hall. All the officers were present, including President W. C. Young, who opened the meeting at 2:30 p. m., with an attendance of fifteen members, which later increased to twenty-five. The regular opening proceedings were quickly disposed of. The president called for a report from the trustees, all three being present. Through Chairman Schoenle they reported that all arrangements had been made with the management of Normandy grove for the club picnic, to be held July 15, and a full program of the doings at the picnic will be presented at the July meeting. This being the first meeting of the club since the death of our friend, William Scott, the president appointed Messrs. Ammann, Guy and Beneke to draw up suitable resolutions. During a discussion as to the florists' business this season, the general opinion was that it had suffered somewhat, but not as much as other sorts of business, during the late panic. The question box, too, brought out some interesting discussions.

The next meeting of the club will be held July 9. The nomination of officers will take place, and the election at the meeting following this should bring out a large attendance. As this is the year for nomination of presidents, the competition should be keen.

Various Notes.

Edward Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., is taking an active part in the European trip of the St. Louis Turners. He says he may make the trip with them.

During the last week our three high schools had closing exercises. At the Central High the floral work was furnished by the Mullanphy Flower Co., at the Yeatman High by the Bentzen Floral Co., and at the McKinley High by the Eggeling Floral Co. Each did splendid work.

C. Young & Sons Co. has enjoyed a most successful season in all departments, cut flowers, seeds, plants, bulbs and nursery stock.

John Burke, whose place is at Sixth and Locust streets, will close up during the summer months, as usual, this year. He says he had an elegant season's business and can afford a two months' rest.

Alex. Siegel says that after this week will be a good time to go fishing. As a lone fisherman, he has them all skinned. He also reports a good season's trade in cut flowers.

Dominic Bova, the little Franklin avenue hustler, will be played by the retailers at third base in the approaching ball game. He says none of the wholesalers can get past him at any stage of the game.

John Heeley, for years with C. Schlueter, the St. Louis avenue florist, writes to friends here from Oregon that he is enjoying the far west and will soon settle in some city in the state and open a flower store.

The Foster Floral Co. has offered half of its store for rent during the dull summer months. Mr. Foster says they had a good business season.

John Steidle, state vice-president of the S. A. F., states that the reason he failed to attend the club meeting Thursday was that he attended the funeral of his brother-in-law, but the next meeting will see him fully prepared for S. A. F. convention matters.

Mrs. William Ellison will, by the end of the month, leave for her summer home in the north, to spend the summer, after a good business season.

Those who attended the club meeting last week from out of the city were J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Edwin Denker, St. Charles, Mo.; E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., and Harry Balsley, of Detroit, Mich.

The trustees of the club will be glad to receive any suggestions from any of the florists that would make interesting features for the club's picnic. The chairman of the trustees will call a meeting this week to arrange the program. They will also be pleased to accept any offer of special prizes. Several special prizes have already been offered by Carl Beyer, W. C. Smith, Charles Schoenle, J. J. Beneke, Harry Balsley, St. Louis Seed Co. and W. C. Young. Anyone wishing to offer a special should call up any of the trustees before the program goes to print. An effort will also be made to have both the wholesalers and retailers close a half day July 15, to give their employees a half day off.

Harry Balsley, of Detroit, was in town last week and attended the club meeting.

The superintendent of public parks, George Ostertag, and his big force of help have finished the planting of all the parks. The larger parks are elaborate in bedding, with new and original designs. The lawns in City Hall park are looking better each day, they being in the heart of the business center of the city. J. J. B.

Rose Carnival.

The rose carnival, ending June 6, was unanimously voted a great success, notwithstanding the fact that the rose crop was a disappointment and fell short of the demand. It was one whole week of jollification and hustle, and the people of Portland had not seen such a lively time since the Lewis and Clark fair. The street car company reported handling 360,000 passengers in one day, 50,000 more than were carried on any one day during the fair. It proved a greater magnet for the country people than a circus.

With Admiral Swinburne's big ship and a torpedo flotilla anchored in our harbor, and the presence of Bob Fitzsimmons, we were well protected and perfect order prevailed. A good, big, round sum had been subscribed and the floats were gotten up elaborately.

Society was generous, and we doubt if any one line of business profited more from the rose carnival than our own. It was almost a clean-up for six days, and at good prices.

The only florist to take direct, active interest in the outdoor festivities was John Holden, who showed a splendid piece of workmanship in one of the parades, which deservedly won first prize. It was a miniature residence, with all the details of landscaping worked out perfectly.

Among the visitors who made their presence known during the week were Miss Armstrong, of Spokane, and Mrs. A. M. Barnett, of Centralia, Wash.; Mrs. H. Jewell, The Dalles; Mrs. C. B. Blount and daughter, of Albany, and Geo. Allen, the nurseryman, of Lebanon, Ore.

A hot wave struck the city June 7 and we now have flowers enough to supply a hundred fiestas. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are in the midst of the midsummer dullness, and, from appearances, everyone with any money to spend has left the town for the seashore or the mountains. Several of the retailers have taken advantage of the reigning quietness and are renovating their stores and putting things in shape for the fall opening.

Flowers are practically without price and it is only where dealers have contracted to use certain quantities of stock, or where there are regular contracts all the year around, that it is possible to get a line on what goods are really worth. Anyone who is at the mercy of the supply and demand is poorly off at this time, and still, in comparison with last year's prices, we are only slightly lower. The volume of goods handled, however, is much less than a season ago.

The quality of stock is better now than that generally seen during June. We have had absolutely no warm weather for over a month and an overcoat feels very agreeable, both in the morning and evening. This continued cool weather has had the effect of moderating the usual forced summer's growth, so that better color and quality of flower and stem have resulted.

A few early asters are seen, but they are of the short-stemmed sorts, and the florists have not made much use of them thus far. Sweet peas continue to be the best selling article, both in the stores and on the streets. They are sold at ruinously low prices and the public is thus being educated to expect a very large bunch for a few cents. Bride gladioli are gone and the larger varieties are coming into market slowly.

Easter lilies are still in considerable evidence and they sell well. They cost the stores from 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen stems. Other kinds of outside stock move slowly.

Over in Oakland and Alameda business has been fair, considering the season, with considerable funeral work to enliven the retailers.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, left this town during the present week, on his way to Portland, Ore.

H. Plath, of Ocean View, is contemplating a trip to Europe within the next two months.

Several growers are planting largely of kentia palm seeds, the stock of which has been hard to get on this coast for several years.

The Exotic Nurseries, of Santa Barbara, Cal., have shipped some splendid specimens of kentias to several local dealers. The plants are lath-house grown and are fully as perfect as those grown here under glass.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nurseries, reports heavy sales of calla bulbs for fall delivery. G.

PORTLAND ROSE FESTIVAL.

Rose festival week was one of continuous gaiety and crowds. More than 100,000 people witnessed each parade. The street car company on Thursday carried 240,000 passengers.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, the competitive rose show in the Oriental building of the Lewis and Clark Exposition was an unqualified success. The large interior was turned into a bower of beauty. Roses, roses everywhere—millions of roses!

Wm. S. Sibson, of the Sibson Rose Nurseries; F. W. Settlemeier, of the Woodburn Nurseries, and Dr. Sulliger, of Bellingham, Wash., were the judges, and succeeded in giving general satisfaction.

The amateur competitions were numerously and well contested. There was, however, a lack of competition in the professional sections.

Clarke Bros. made a fine decorative display and thereby earned the premium of $100, which was well deserved.

This was the second rose festival, and hereafter it is to be an annual event.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., J. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will oe held at Rochester, June 1909.

THOSE Texas nurserymen certainly do think Texas is all right.

THE St. Louis park commissioner has issued the usual beautifully printed and freely illustrated annual report.

THE seventh annual convention of the National Nut Growers' Association is booked for Chattanooga, Tenn. The date will probably be the latter part of October.

A NURSERY agent named B. C. Clark has been arrested at Bath, N. Y., charged with collecting commissions from a Newark, N. Y., nursery by means of the old, old scheme of orders signed by fictitious names.

LONICERA JAPONICA HALLEANA is an excellent climber and a vigorous grower, with white, sweet-scented flowers, changing to pale yellow. The berries, borne in autumn, are black. It spreads rapidly from underground runners.

THE Intermountain Nursery Co., of Brigham City, Utah, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $100,000, in $1 shares. The officers are: A. L. Patterson, president; F. T. Troxell, vice-president; E. M. Tyson, secretary and treasurer.

J. W. KERR was the only one at the Milwaukee convention who had a good word to say for the Kieffer pear. He said $200 to $300 per acre has been made in Texas off the Kieffer and that such a variety is entitled to credit. It was an aspersion for the northern nurseryman to interject: "Who buys 'em, Texans?"

THE new Waterloo Nursery Co., Waterloo, Ia., held a meeting June 9, at which the following officers were selected: President, P. C. Schmidt, Cedar Falls; secretary, C. H. Dietrich; treasurer, F. F. Knapp. Walter Brown and F. E. Hunter will comprise the board of directors, together with the above named officers. The new firm will soon be ready for operation, and will both wholesale and retail nursery stock.

MILWAUKEE CONVENTION.

A Successful Meeting.

J. W. Hill proved an ideal presiding officer and the thirty-third annual convention, held at Milwaukee June 10 to 12, had a snap and go that was as refreshing as the delightful weather. The attendance was not so large as it has been in some years, but there was lively interest throughout. All the familiar faces were there. Nearly every state in the Union was represented, there being members present from New England and Florida, from Texas and Oregon. As buying and selling between members occupies so large a place in the week, it was but natural that all the firms seeking nurserymen's trade should be represented—there were probably more salesmen present than ever before. More business has been done between members in some other years, but notebooks were nevertheless much in evidence.

President's Address.

In his address President Hill spoke in part as follows:

"During the past year we, like all other business men, were brought face to face with a financial depression which resulted in what Ex-Secretary Shaw claims to be 'the worst panic the world has ever known.' This condition of affairs arose last fall, at the time the retail nurseryman was making his shipments, and in many places poor deliveries were made, or clearing house certificates, notes and other evidences of indebtedness were taken in payment for trees, but with the readjustment of affairs, these have been promptly met, congress has just passed the compromise currency bill, and we are now, I trust, over the roughest places with nobody badly hurt.

"The season just closed is generally regarded as one of the best we have had for many years. All stock, with the possible exception of Kieffer pears and some varieties of plums, has commanded unusually strong prices, and stocks were well cleaned up. In consequence of this, I am inclined to think every man here today is happy, and I see no reason why we should not have an enjoyable and profitable convention.

J. W. Hill.
(President Nurserymen's Association, 1907-8.)

"The present condition of the affairs of the association, with a membership of more than 400 and annual receipts of about $3,000, are, on the whole, quite satisfactory. Some aggressive action, however, is needed along certain lines.

"As far as I am able to learn, the outlook for future business is good, with such indications as to justify us in thinking that the present satisfactory wholesale prices will be maintained, but the practice of our wholesale men in placing surplus stock on the market late in the season, at greatly reduced prices, I think is demoralizing and should be discontinued.

"I am inclined to the opinion, however, that the retail nurserymen, who constitute a large portion of the membership of this association, are not getting from the planter prices commensurate with the total cost of stock handled. These prices should be advanced and this can be gradually brought about by handling only first-class trees, of the grades specified, and consigning the inferior stock to the brush pile rather than disposing of it to department stores and unreliable mail-order concerns, which dump it on the market at ridiculously low prices, in competition with dealers in first-class trees. Tell your customer the truth, furnish him first-class stock, charge him good prices for it, and you will soon find him taking care of it and willing to pay you the right prices for good trees."

Committee Reports.

Orlando Harrison, for the committee on a national inspection law, presented a long report, showing the divergent views of the trade, and recommended that for the time being the association make no further effort to secure such a law covering domestic stock in interstate commerce, but that a law for the inspection and certification of imported stock would be desirable. The report was accepted and the committee discharged.

For the transportation committee, F. H. Stannard reported only routine work in the last year, except opposition to the adoption of "Rule 4" by the western roads, releasing the roads from liability for loss or damage, unless twenty per cent additional freight be paid. The outcome is not yet determined. The committee on tariff, by Irving Rouse, made a verbal report.

For the committee on mutual fire insurance, Peter Youngers reported that the various state laws made the matter impracticable. For entomology, C. L. Watrous related the coöperative work with the Society of Economic Entomologists, the organization of state and other bug hunters, which already has done much to ameliorate the hardships imposed on nurserymen by different laws and different interpretations and administration of similar laws. All these reports were accepted.

The legislative committee was authorized to proceed to contest such legislation as it considers open to its attack, as was the South Dakota law.

Following a report of C. J. Maloy on the work of the National Council of Horticulture, the appointment of a committee of three on national horticulture, to which work the association contributes $200, was authorized.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $2,913.27 in the treasury. Expenditures for the year were $2,883.

Resolutions.

J. C. Hale, of Tennessee, presented a resolution giving the association's endorsement to a national inspection law to apply to imported stock alone and urging its passage by congress. Referred to the committee on legislation.

Fred W. Kelsey presented a resolution authorizing the transportation committee to take up with the railroads the matter of treating nursery stock as perishable goods and thus avoiding delays. Adopted. Also a resolution setting forth that the association is opposed to any advance in freight rates. Adopted. Also a resolution endorsing the parcels post and commending the recent reduction in the rates of foreign postage. Adopted.

C. L. Watrous presented resolutions on the deaths of N. H. Albaugh and E. H. Pratt, which were adopted.

The Nurserymen at Milwaukee, Wis., June 11, 1908.

Papers Read.

The papers and addresses were more than ordinarily interesting and drew out much discussion. The subjects were as follows:

"Is It Good Policy on the Part of the Nurserymen to Send Out Cheap Lists at the End of the Season?" by J. M. Pitkin, Newark, N. Y.
"A Few Points on Improvements," by Eugene Stark, Louisiana, Mo.
"The Pecan," by H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind.
"The Great Southwest," by Jno. S. Kerr, Sherman, Tex.
"Elements of Success in the Nursery Business," by J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.
"Spraying," by Prof. L. R. Taft, East Lansing, Mich.
"Peach Yellows," by Professor Phillips, of Georgia, read by Prof. E. L. Worsham, state entomologist of Georgia.
"How Can the Nurserymen Best Assist in the Civic Improvement Movement?" by J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa.

Mr. Pitkin's remarks brought out considerable argument, but all on one side, for those who spoke were in favor of the bonfire rather than the cheap list at the end of the season. The paper on yellows asserted that contagion could be spread by infected nursery stock and by both seeds and grafts from infected trees, and claimed it is better to use Georgia seed from budded trees carrying a certificate of health than to use the Tennessee natural pits, which are of uncertain source. J. C. Hale denied that there is yellows in Tennessee and several nurserymen asserted that experience has proved that yellows is not spread by the distribution of nursery stock. Prof. Taft gave safe formulas for spraying and both he and Prof. Worsham said fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas is sure death to all insects, including San Jose scale, and does not injure the stock if properly done. Several nurserymen related instances of injury where the work was in the hands of public authorities and others supposedly capable.

Mr. McFarland's address was characteristic and full of inspiration.

A list of questions in the program brought out good discussion, if not especially illuminating. One question, "Why should growing nursery stock be taxed as personal property any more than wheat, corn, etc.?" received more consideration than some dozen others combined. It showed that in some states the stock is taxed, while in others it is not, and that in all but one or two states, where the law specifically provides for the taxation of growing nursery stock, assessment can be prevented, or at least reduced, as F. H. Stannard said, "to where it doesn't cut any figure." W. H. Wyman asserted that it was a matter of principle with him and that he would no more submit to a trifling assessment than he would to a higher one, and said he hoped everyone would stand on his rights.

Officers Elected.

The rollcall of the states resulted in naming the following state vice-presidents:

Place of Meeting.

The state vice-presidents recommended accepting the invitation to meet in Seattle in 1909, during the Alaska-Yukon exposition, and J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, made a strong fight for it, but the body of members thought the distance too great and substituted Rochester after the recommendation was before the convention. So Rochester has the president, secretary, treasurer and convention for 1909, and ought to be reasonably well satisfied.

The Trades' Display.

The Protective Association.

One of the most important features of the convention was the merging of the two protective associations, the Mutual being absorbed by the American Nurserymen's Protective Association at the meeting June 11. The merger brought a number of new members to the larger association and concentrated the business all in one office, to the advantage of all. Officers elected are as follows:

President—R. C. Berckmans, Augusta, Ga.
Vice-president—J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.
Second vice-president—W. F. Heikes, Huntsville, Ala.
Secretary—T. B. Meehan, Dreshertown, Pa.
Treasurer—Peter Younger, Geneva, Neb.

Last year's executive committee was reelected. The association has had an exceptionally successful year.

Local Hospitalities.

The business was pushed through so that at the hour for convening Friday morning, June 12, the association could accept the invitation of the local committee, headed by T. J. Ferguson, of the Hawkes Nursery Co., Wauwatosa, and of the Business Men's Association of Oconomowoc, for a trip to Oconomowoc, about thirty miles. On the way a visit of two hours was made to the famous Pabst stock farm, which proved much more interesting, even, than the Pabst brewery, which was inspected the last time the association met at Milwaukee. Arriving at Oconomowoc, dinner was served, after which the entire party was taken for a 12-mile ride through some of the prettiest country in the lake region.

SHRUB JOTTINGS.

Kerria Japonica is a moderate growing shrub which is not half sufficiently known. Entirely apart from its extreme beauty when in flower, it is an attractive winter object, its bright green bark rendering it a striking object in any shrubbery. In Arnold Arboretum the flowers were this season at their best May 22, the plants being simply smothered with a mass of orange yellow blooms. This shrub suckers up freely and is readily propagated by digging up any of these offsets. The extreme height rarely exceeds six feet and therefore this kerria should not be planted among those of coarse growth. It shows up to best advantage on the front of shrubberies, where it should be given ample spread to show its beauties.

Chionanthus Virginica, better known as the white fringe, makes a beautiful lawn specimen. Its large, dark green, glossy leaves and myriads of pure white, feathery racemes of flowers make a combination difficult to duplicate, and anyone coming across a well flowered specimen stands in rapt admiration. This is unquestionably one of the most beautiful small flowering trees known and being absolutely winter hardy, even in our northern states, can be safely planted in almost any location. It was this year in full beauty in eastern Massachusetts June 7, the trees at that time being a veritable misty wave of whiteness.

Lonicera Japonica aureo-reticulata, a fine variety, with yellow, reticulate-veined leaves, is sometimes employed as a hedge and must grow in full sunlight to bring out the color. As a hedge plant it requires frequent shearings to keep it symmetrical. It is not hardy in the northern states.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

August E. Baumer and Miss Jessie Lauser, two of the best known young people in the East End, were married Thursday evening, June 11, at the English Lutheran church, at Highland and Rubel avenues. The marriage ceremony was pronounced by the Rev. A. C. Miller. After the wedding an elaborate reception was held at the home of the bride, where many of the friends of the young people gathered to extend their congratulations. The groom is proprietor of a flower store in the Masonic Theater building. The bride is one of the prettiest and most popular women of the East End.

WASHINGTON.

Capital City Comment.

Last week was a busy one, especially for the decorators. There were all kinds of decorations, besides weddings. Stock is poor, especially the carnations. Some fine peonies from the north are to be seen in some of the windows. Phlox is plentiful and good, also the blue Japanese iris.

Z. D. Blackistone had the decoration for the McKinley Manual Training School.

Gude Bros. Co., besides weddings, had a unique decoration in one of our largest churches for children's day, representing a camp. A large number of oak and cedar trees were used, with tents and a 15-foot flag pole, with a concealed motor furnishing the breeze for the flag. This firm also furnished all the plants and arranged the palm garden on the steamer Jamestown.

J. H. Small & Sons had the Leiter-Williams wedding. This was the notable event of the week. The apartment at the Connecticut, where the ceremony took place, was banked with hundreds of Harrisii lilies. Rauscher's Parlors, where the reception and wedding breakfast took place, was a bower of Beauties. Over the doors was lattice work with Lady Gay Rambler roses running up the side and over the doors and windows. In the bow window was a lattice arbor covered with Lady Gay roses. Here the bride and groom received. The bride's table was heart-shaped and had a heart centerpiece made of Carnot roses and valley. The eighteen smaller tables were done in Lady Gay roses.

Geo. Cooke reports business good.

Mr. Robinson is wearing one of those breakfast food smiles and says business is so good he needs a rest.

F. H. Kramer comes out with a double page ad in the local Sunday paper with a general review of his business, from an obscure $1 per week tobacco stripper nineteen years ago to the proprietor of a $100,000 business. Last week he purchased the store at the corner of Ninth street and Grant place, formerly owned by Walter T. Gordon. Miss Martena Atwell is in charge and will make good.

Z. D. Blackistone has taken to street car advertising: "Wedding bouquets, $3 and up; $2 for flat clusters worth $5 any day in the year."

This week will be a hummer. The District High School commencements take place June 17 and, with the number of weddings on, everybody will be busy. This practically closes the season in Washington.

Geo. C. Shaffer has a motorcycle special delivery which has proved a good thing.

E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., is in town. O. O.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Last week saw a round of June weddings and the last of the graduates. If there were not this incentive to business, it would have been a dull week for the florists. The weather, with the exception of one day, was typical March weather. Peonies at present are the popular flower and the wet weather helped them along so that the latter part of the week they were more or less plentiful. Roses are good and plentiful, and there is a noticeable scarcity of good Bride. Carnations are still running all the way from $1.50 to $3 per hundred.

Various Notes.

A proposition was made at the April meeting of the Twin City Florists' and Gardeners' Club to incorporate the association under the name of the Minnesota State Florists' Association. The committee appointed framed up a constitution and by-laws, to be voted on at the meeting June 16 at the park board greenhouses.

The Twin City Pottery Co. is again doing business as a stock company, under the name of the American Clay Products Co., and in addition to pots will make fancy jardinieres, vases, etc. They intend to move their place of business to Midway in the near future, thus having a better business center.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Baltimore is having a hot, dry spell, which is disastrous to carnations. A number of the growers have started to water them. There was a good demand for cut flowers last week for funeral work for the victims of the terrible wreck on the new Baltimore, Washington & Annapolis Electric road. The cars were running at forty miles an hour when they met a special car which was crowded with passengers for the Naval Academy ball. There were ten killed and twenty-two hurt. The general superintendent was seriously hurt, and his daughter was killed. This is a single track road to Annapolis.

The commencement exercises have kept the florists busy of late. Carnations are showing the effect of the hot weather. They are small and full of red spider.

There will not be so many mums planted this season as last. Yellow is scarce everywhere.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' Club bowling team is going over to Washington June 20, to bowl several games with the Washington florists.

W. O. Stran has sold his property on the Old York road to the city as a site for a public school, and he has bought five acres at Carney, on the Harford road.

The Gardeners' Club went to Blenheim, the country seat of Wm. Lanahan at Govanstown, June 11. There were over 100 members present. This was the third visit of the club and they had a royal good time. Chas. L. Seybold, superintendent of Carroll park, had charge of the sports. They had a potato race, a sack race and a ball game. At 6 o'clock all assembled on the spacious lawns, where refreshments were served. Mrs. Lanahan was presented with a handsome bunch of Beauties by N. F. Flitton, the secretary of the club.

Mr. Ufler gave an interesting talk at the last meeting on how to force asparagus under glass. Q.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business has kept up remarkably well this month so far, but, with the closing of the schools and a general exodus to summer resorts, the trade will experience the usual summer quietness and all will be able to devote their energies toward getting their places in readiness for another season. Emptying and refilling the benches, painting and repairing and a general overhauling of the whole plant will keep all hands busy during the summer months.

Various Notes.

Baur & Smith are cutting a fine lot of blooms off their bench of May. This carnation is proving itself to be a splendid summer variety, not burning or bleaching like so many others.

At the last meeting of the City Florists' Club a committee was appointed to make arrangements for a picnic, to be held in July.

John Berterman is a busy man these days as chairman of the decoration committee of the Saengerfest, to be held in the city this week.

John Hartje is making fine progress with the erection of his new houses, south of the city. S.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Things were rather quiet in our city last week. Business started in pretty briskly on Monday, June 15. There was a marked scarcity of pink roses on this day. The graduating exercises have created a demand for all kinds of flowers, particularly roses and sweet peas. The latter are fine. Peonies are also meeting with a good demand this year. The quality of the flowers seems to be unusually good. They have good stems and are very lasting.

The less said about carnations at the present time the better. The price is away down and the market flooded. When it gets along about this time of the year the people, with few exceptions, seem to have tired of carnations and many do not want them at any price.

Smilax and other greens are plentiful.

While there are a number of small wedding decorations called for, the big jobs are few and far between. A number of our society buds are being married, but they are not making as much show this year as in the past.

Various Notes.

Visitors: E. C. Pruner, representing E. H. Hunt; H. C. Cormack, of the Florists' Album Co., of Boston; Winfried Roelker; W. Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. H. S.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

If any improvement made in New Orleans during the last few years will especially benefit the florists' business, it is certainly the new water works system which is being laid now all over the city and which will furnish the florists inside the city limits with filtered water at a reasonable price. With perfect drainage also, we can expect, no doubt, a better growth of trees, which so far have been of a very short life around New Orleans.

W. E. Eichling made a good purchase in becoming the owner of the place which he has occupied for several years on St. Charles avenue. His direct importation from Belgium did not turn out well. From some unaccountable delay in the transportation, some plants, chiefly araucarias, came entirely sported. He is very successful with his lily of the valley. Funeral designs and decorations keep him quite busy. For the funeral of Mrs. Chas. Newman, a few days since, he had to fill up an order for fifty-one designs. He is contemplating a trip to Indianapolis and Chicago.

I. M. Chopin says business is all right and he is receiving his full share of orders. At his place a bench of Adiantum hybridum is in good condition. His Boston ferns have been badly cut by caterpillars, but are recovering. He cut plenty of White Malmaison, finding them superior to any other at this time, even the White Maman Cochet.

F. Faessel has a nice lot of chrysanthemums. He is still advocating raised benches, his place being entirely supplied with them. Asters, carnations and roses grown this way are certainly fine, but it takes an almost constant spray of water to keep them from drying up.

J. St. Mard's residence was recently burned down. A portion of his greenhouses was also destroyed, with a few plants. He says he was not insured enough to cover his loss. He will build again as soon as everything is adjusted.

M. M. L.

HEBRON, NEB.—Mrs. M. F. Lindsey says that trade this year, both in plants and in cut flowers, has been the best in all her experience.

FORT DODGE, IA.—Otto Hanson, who for the last four years has been employed at the greenhouses of P. L. Larson, has now bought two lots at Ninth avenue north and Fifteenth street and will build greenhouses there. He will ask for an extension of the city water mains to that point.

main on the plants a couple of months longer at least. Often, after flowering, we see these amaryllis thrown under the benches to take pot luck until they are examined for flower spikes another winter.

Rambler Roses in Pots.

In the rush of other work, do not neglect the rambler roses, if you would have the best stock for another Easter. Be sure to use the hose freely and let the pressure be good. That insidious foe, red spider, must not be given any foothold or the plants will be nearly ruined. Keep the shoots tied up securely. All this means work, but it is work which will pay you well. As the shoots become well matured you can place them outdoors, where they should be plunged and, if possible, tied up to a fence of either wire or wood to keep them from being blown about. Do not allow them to suffer from want of water at the roots. This in itself will speedily bring spider around. Any young stock propagated the past spring should be kept potted along. Some of these can now safely go into 6-inch pots, in which size strong blooming plants can be grown.

Cyclamens.

Cyclamens should now be in their summer quarters in coldframes, with the sashes tilted up six inches both top and bottom, to secure a free and continuous passage of air, and cloth or lath shadings should be used over them during bright sunshine. A little sun mornings and evenings will not hurt them, but the noonday glare they cannot stand. A light spraying over on warm evenings, and also early in the afternoons of very hot days, refreshes them much. The popular size of pot for market purposes is 6-inch. Early plants will now be ready for a shift into these, while later ones can be placed in 3½-inch or 4-inch. Do not allow the plants to become potbound. To keep thrips in check in the frames, use some tobacco stems among the pots and spray with some tobacco extract. In potting use a mixture of fibrous loam, sharp sand and either sheep manure or dried cow manure. A dash of fine bone may also be added at the final shift. The compost should be porous and be pressed quite firmly in the pots. The corms should not be buried. Be careful not to overwater newly potted stock.

Brief Reminders.

Pinch the tops from bouvardias, solanums, stevias and eupatoriums in the open ground.

Hardy roses will be benefited by a hosing overhead in the evenings in dry, warm weather. This also keeps aphis in check.

Do not attempt to sow calceolaria seed before August.

Pot over the small ferns and space them out so that they will have ample room for development.

If not already done, get in a final sowing of asters.

If you are short of crotons, get a batch of cuttings in the bench at once. Keep the sand constantly wet and they will soon root.

Ply the cultivator constantly and give weeds no chance to smother your crops.

Have you ordered your coal supply for the coming winter? Remember that prices are low now.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual June exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, held in Music hall, June 12, eclipsed all previous ones. There was a magnificent display of roses staged on five large tables, one exhibitor having over 100 varieties of hybrid perpetuals and teas, a majority of them truly named. Frau Karl Druschki was much in evidence, having been entered in many classes, and carried off the honors wherever perfect. Competition was keen in every class and judging difficult.

Strawberries were also fine, large and well finished, every class heavily entered, single plate entries numbering eleven and a majority of them perfect in every way. Shrubs were lacking, only two exhibits being staged with common varieties.

Perennials were fine, two exhibitors having over fifty varieties each, well labeled. The F. R. Pierson Co. had some large exhibits of miscellaneous plants and cut flowers, not for competition but interesting.

An innovation which has proved successful and interesting was the giving of two prizes for bouquets of wild flowers, open only to school children under 14 years of age. This brought twenty-four contestants.

The principal prize winners were: F. L. Milne, gardener to E. H. Wetherbee; W. H. Waite, gardener to Samuel Untermyer; W. C. Roberts, gardener to Frederick Potter; Wm. Jameson, gardener to Emil Berolzheimer; James Stuart, gardener to Mrs. F. A. Constable; John Woodcock, gardener to Gen. McAlpin; John Elliott, gardener to Geo. Legg; H. Nichols, gardener to Mrs. J. B. Trevor; John Brunger, gardener to I. N. Seligman.

A certificate of merit went to F. R. Pierson Co., for a miscellaneous exhibit, and to Mathew J. Murtka, gardener to Mrs. W. L. Bull, for shrubs, hardy perennials and roses. A cultural certificate was given George Whitlinger, gardener to Miss Blanche Potter, for a collection of vegetables, and to John Elliott for Rose Frau Karl Druschki. Honorable mention was made of Wm. Jameson for Blenheim melon and Lorillard tomato, and of Francis Gibson for shrubs, hardy perennials and roses. L. A. M.

JAPANESE IRISES.

The Japanese iris is enjoying increased popular favor and the National Council of Horticulture recommends it as of the easiest culture, but cautions gardeners against overlooking the essential requirement of plenty of moisture at all times.

If possible, select for this plant a place that is naturally continually moist. It should not be under water in the winter, however, for in such a location the plant will rot. A heavy, moist soil is needed. If too poor and sandy, dig in plenty of well rotted manure and mulch the bed heavily in summer. Plants in the open border frequently suffer from the hot sun and dryness. In preparing a bed, dig deeply, as the roots often penetrate two feet or more. Planting can be done either in fall or spring; if in the fall, mulch well with straw or manure to prevent the frost lifting the plants out of the ground.

The Japan iris blooms earlier than other species. The flowers are variable in color and size. Some are very large. The colors range from pure white to various shades of lilac and violet, indigo to almost black. The lighter shades are frequently blotched and streaked with other colors. The flowers appear in June or July, large plants often producing upwards of 100 individual flowers. A big bed when in blossom is a sight not to be forgotten. If cut with long stems the spikes are fine for bouquets. Seed is produced in abundance. If planted in outside beds in a moist place or sown in shallow boxes and left outside during the winter, the seeds will germinate the following spring.

ALBANY, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Albany Florists' Club was held June 4, at the establishment of W. C. King, on Madison avenue. Forty members, the largest number in some time, were present.

Fred A. Danker, of the committee on a new circular upon the care of plants, reported progress and asked for an extension of time, which was granted. The circular is intended for distribution among the customers of the club.

W. C. King, the host, gave an excellent review of the state of trade for the spring season now past, and spoke optimistically of the future. The members regretted the inability of H. G. Eyres to be present to deliver an address on the cultivation of the amaryllis, of which Mr. Eyres has had on exhibition some notable specimens.

During the evening four new members were elected and a social session was enjoyed, with refreshments. Lewis Schaefer entertained with recitations and a thoroughly enjoyable time was had.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the establishment of the president, Fred Goldring, at Slingerlands, on the evening of July 2. Carryalls will leave the Union station at 6 p. m. and from the intersection of Madison and Delaware avenues at 6:30 p. m. A large number have expressed their determination to be present.

PLYMOUTH, OHIO.

Trade has been fine here all winter and spring. The recent panic has not seemed to make any material difference with it, except we have found collections much slower and harder to get, and also more of them. But the whole volume has been larger for the year past than ever before in our experience. Bedding trade has been late and slow on account of the erratic weather. Hot, wet, cold, dry, hot, cold, wet is about the way it has been ever since April, with cold and wet predominating just now. F. E. C.

Greenhouse Heating.

GROWERS are invited to write to the REVIEW about any of their heating problems. Give all the details.

A DIVIDED VEGETABLE HOUSE.

We are planning to put up a house especially for starting early vegetable plants, to be put out in the open ground as soon as the weather will permit. We make this our specialty. But we also grow and sell some flowers and we want to use the proposed house to grow all the cuttings and flowers we can in the first part of the winter, before needing the house for our vegetable seeds and plants. Our location is southwestern Pennsylvania.

We have two small greenhouses, heated with hot air. These are lean-to houses, with a walk in the center. The houses both face south. There are ventilators in the highest part of the roof, but none on either side. We find that the plants are much more dwarf and spindly at the wall than next to the walk. We think this is caused by lack of ventilation or circulation of air next to the walls. And this is one of the points I want your opinion on.

We wish to build our house sixty or sixty-five feet long and eighteen feet wide, with an even-span roof. The building would stand east and west, with twenty-four inches of glass under the eave on the south and twenty inches of glass under the eave on the north. We would have these sash all hinged and ventilators also at the ridge. There would be a partition near the center of the house and the room next the boiler would be used for growing tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers and eggplants, the second room for lettuce, cabbage, beets and cauliflower.

There are two reasons for having the glass shorter on the north side—first, less exposure to the north wind; second, because we wish the bench to be four

Expressions From Men Who Know

Mr. J. G. Frisz, of Vincennes, Ind., writes as follows:
"Your No. 13 boiler is carrying 25,000 square feet of glass and I can keep it at 60° in the coldest weather without any trouble. I have three other types of boilers also heating a range of 25,000 square feet of glass, but the No. 13 Kroeschell boiler only takes half the coal and half the work to get the same results."
P. S.—Mr. J. G. Frisz, of Vincennes, Indiana, has the largest range of glass in Indiana devoted to vegetable forcing.

Damm Bros., Chicago, Ill., write:
"In 1894 we bought one of your No. 12 boilers to take the place of four smaller boilers of another make. Your boiler has done the entire work to the highest satisfaction, saving labor and about one-third of the fuel we used to burn before. We had that boiler up to 1906, that is 12 years, having no repairs on it whatever, except one set of flues we put in in 1900. Last fall we installed one of your No. 14 boilers, having enlarged our plant. It takes care of 35,000 square feet of glass very easy. When firing we keep the ash door open only about one inch. We think your No. 14 boiler could carry 40,000 square feet of glass."

Mr. Nic Zweifel, North Milwaukee, Wis., writes:
"I have a range of 200-foot houses with a total of 27,000 square feet of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in 30 minutes with one of your No. 13 greenhouse boilers and it is very easy firing. Can fire just as easy with screenings as with lump coal."

W. W. Allabaugh, Silverdale, Pa., writes:
"Your boiler gives entire satisfaction. You will notice the No. 4 boiler is rated to warm 10,500 square feet of glass and I have over 12,000 square feet of glass."

Theo. Diedrich, Anacostia, Washington, D. C., writes:
"No. 6 Boiler carries two houses 20 x 172, and three houses 22 x 96; this is 3,200 square feet of glass more than its rating."

Wm. Pinchbeck, Ridgefield, Conn., writes:
"I expect to enlarge my plant soon, and when I do shall use another of your boilers. Now a few words about the boiler I bought of you in 1901. This is a No. 1 boiler, rated in your catalogue at 6,000 square feet. It is taking care of 7,000 square feet of glass in carnation houses and works to perfection. No trouble whatever in cold nights; no night fireman; easy to work and easy to coal. I consider this the best boiler on the market and I have used a good many different kinds."

Jacob Phillips, Rogers Park, Chicago, Ill., writes:
"Has 20,000 square feet of glass. Can keep 60 degrees in coldest weather. Had one boiler 15 years, only expense one set of flues. Kroeschell Boiler is so satisfactory that I do not care to try any other."

G. Basler, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:
"Had different kinds of cast iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10th and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

Chas. W. Unglaub, Springfield, O., writes:
"I had a cast iron sectional boiler before I got yours; would not give yours for a dozen of the others. Your boiler is the quickest heating boiler I ever saw. I hardly ever have the damper over half open and the draft shut most of the time. I wish I had gotten it four years ago, when I got the sectional boiler. I would be ahead now. In the four years I had to buy a new section and four heads that had cracked, and I had to be right with the cast iron boiler, and I would have to fire every twenty or thirty minutes. It took more coal than your boiler. The cast iron boiler took much more attention and more coal and would be leaking half the winter. I want no more cast iron sectional boilers."

THE KROESCHELL BOILER IS BUILT RIGHT FOR FUEL ECONOMY, DURABILITY, SAFETY

and is the most popular boiler made. During the season of 1906-1907 the Kroeschell boiler was installed to heat 4,286,000 square feet of glass. 1346 Cast Iron Boilers were replaced by the Kroeschell in 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907. No other type of boiler has ever equaled such a record or made so many friends. Send for catalogue.

inches higher, so as to grow plants better under the bench. I see that many advocate more glass in the south side of the roof than in the north side. I scarcely can see why they do this, as our little houses run wild in temperature when the sun shines, either in summer or winter. I think, if the roof is equal, that such sudden change would not occur either way, for when the sun is hid the temperature falls nearly as rapidly as it rose.

Now you have our plan. Why can we not raise the best plants and flowers in this house by using the ventilation wisely? Please mention all defects about the plan that you may see, and mention any improvements that you think might be added.

sectional boiler No. 518, and four rows of 2-inch pipe, four flow pipes and four return pipes under each side bench. That arrangement of pipe seems to give good satisfaction in a house not far from here, but if you can better it, please tell me how.

Are greenhouses set level, or are they all raised at the farthest end from the boiler? If raised, how much rise to the foot, and how much are the pipes usually raised in fifty feet? W. C. D.

Plan to arrange fourteen 1½-inch returns in the part to be devoted to cabbage, lettuce, etc., and eighteen in the part to be used for eggplants and warmer stuff. A 2½-inch flow under the ridge will be sufficient to carry through the first section, where it may be reduced to 2-inch to serve the second or cool room.

If I were building such a house I should run it north and south and use even-span construction, with solid benches and overhead heat in the cool part and raised benches and bottom heat in the warmer section. Greenhouses are usually built on a slope; four inches to the 100 feet is enough for the gutters. Usually the pipes slope in exactly the opposite direction from the way the house slopes. The highest point in the hot water system is usually the point farthest away from the boiler, which is at the same time the lowest end of the house, because it is usually desirable to discharge the gutter water at the opposite end from the boiler pit. ## CINCINNATI.

The Market.

We have struggled through another week of heavy surplus and light business. It was about as discouraging a week's business as we have had yet, but with all of that we still have hope, for it does look as if the end was in sight if it had not already arrived. This week has started in with a positive scarcity of flowers of all kinds. White stock was especially in demand and orders for white carnations and roses could not all be filled. This tended to put some backbone into the prices, and if it only can keep up we will all feel better.

As so many growers have thrown out their roses and carnations, there will undoubtedly be a big let-down in the supply of these flowers. This ought to insure a good price for what does come in, and it looks as if there will be business enough to keep the price up to paying level. The summer business last year was the best we have ever had, and if we have anywhere nearly as much this year we will have reason to be satisfied.

DENVER.

The Market.

Last week was a busy one, with school commencements and weddings, there being a good demand for all choice flowers, particularly American Beauties and Maid and Chatenay roses. Sweet peas also sold well, the price holding good, which it will until the outdoor supply comes in. The quality of roses is deteriorating on account of the warm weather. Carnations still hold their quality fairly well, but have not been overabundant. Peonies are now good, but the supply has been limited; therefore the price held up, but will recede steadily from now on.

Judging by the reports we have received, the present season has been one of the best on record for the sale of bedding stock, and some of the larger growers are already almost sold out of stock.

Of all the social affairs of the year, the University Club ball stands as the first largely attended and elaborately arranged entertainment of the early summer season. It is always preceded by numerous dinners, making floral decorations necessary. The decorations this season were particularly beautiful—if anything, more elaborate and lavish than in years past. Outside the club, the grounds were enclosed in canvas and were brilliantly illuminated with colored electric lights. A quantity of Asparagus plumosus was used in the club house. In the hall and many other rooms pink and white peonies were effectively used, while the tables in the dining-room were handsomely decked with American Beauty roses. The garden effect was carried out in the decorations inside of the club house by palms and bay trees. The work was done by B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co. E. S. K.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade remains about the same as usual. There is a good supply of carnations coming in. The warm weather is having its effects on them, for they are coming smaller now. Saturday, June 13, was another carnation bargain day. One firm advertised 20,000 of them at 15 cents per dozen; another, 8,000 at 12 cents per dozen, besides 20,000 roses at 25 cents per dozen. This is going some, and nearly everyone on the street seemed to be wearing either a carnation or rose. The regular price of carnations is 25 and 35 cents per dozen retail, while roses bring $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen retail. Outdoor sweet peas are now in. Napoleon Lemay, the Hillman street florist, is advertising them at 25 cents per bunch as big as your head.

There has been a tremendous call, and still is, for geraniums and salvia, besides other bedding plants. The call is more for red ones. Everything outdoors is showing the effects of the dry spell. We need rain. Roses outdoors are now in bloom. W. L.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

To judge from the brisk demand last week, it seems that June weddings are in full swing, and, with a good deal of funeral work, business all last week was good.

With the exception of peonies, which are now having their inning, outdoor stock is at its end, and this undoubtedly helps the sale of the old standbys. A couple of cool days the latter part of the week checked the supply of roses and gave all a chance to clean up at 2 cents to 6 cents. Carnations are still plentiful and can be had for 25 cents to $2 per hundred. The only flowers short of demand are good Beauties. There are enough green goods to go around.

While a few local commencement exercises have taken place, still the usual heavy demand is expected next week.

Various Notes.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. is cutting some fine peonies, which are consigned to the Holton & Hunkel Co.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. began to move into its new quarters, at Fifth street and Grand avenue, June 15.

The Edlefsen-Leideger Co. has opened a branch store at 782 Third street, the place formerly occupied by E. Haasch. After being remodeled, it presents quite a different appearance. The firm reports cutting fine carnations, which find ready sale, and funeral work was extra heavy last week.

H. V. Hunkel, of Holton & Hunkel Co., took a flying trip to Morton Grove, Chicago, and vicinity June 14. He is looking for young stock for the Brown Deer place.

Will Zimmerman, of 430 Grand avenue, has returned from Beaver Lake, Wis., where he took chances at fishing.

Nic Zweifel is taking a brief rest at Fox Lake, Wis. Maybe he will bring back a few fish.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. says that the demand for supplies has been brisk lately. The firm is cutting its peonies at present, and they move well.

Heitman & Baerman, Wauwatosa, still have a good cut of longiflorum lilies.

E. OESTREICHER.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

One of the most enjoyable meetings of the Springfield Florists' Club was that held on the evening of June 8, at the spacious and homelike suburban residence of our veteran floral nurseryman and botanical authority, Thomas McBeth.

After the usual business session, two well rendered readings were given by Miss Dora Kreis, and a song by Harry D. Brydon, the recently acquired son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. McBeth.

The host then invited the members and guests to the ample dining rooms, where tables had been spread and beautifully adorned with candles, as well as peonies, weigelias, deutzias and similar products of nature's handicraft, assisted by the skill of Mr. McBeth, who is said to be able to make anything grow which he puts into the soil.

A splendid three-course supper was then served by the hostess and daughters, the menu including exceptionally luscious strawberries, which were grown on the place and seemed to have attained to the height of perfection for this event.

The feast having been disposed of to the refreshment of all present, President George H. Mellen opened the oratory with a review of the two years' existence and work of the club and the advantages of holding a membership in the organization, as well as the great benefit of the club to the community at large.

Judge Francis M. Hagan was then introduced as toastmaster, and presided in his customarily interesting manner, the judge being a leading attorney and prominent in local literary circles and politics.

Judge Walter L. Weaver spoke entertainingly on the theme, "The Front Yard."

District Superintendent Du Bois, of the Methodist church, ably responded to the toast, "The Back Yard."

"The Peony Farm" was assigned as a subject for John M. Good, but he soon drifted to a discussion of civic improvement, which is now uppermost in his mind, and in behalf of which he is accomplishing great things for the present and future good of the city.

Roger Murphy, ex-postmaster of Urbana, O., followed along the same line, and concluded by suggesting that the florists having any surplus stock at the end of the season might well donate it to the poor, thus utilizing what would otherwise be a waste product, bringing cheer to the unfortunate, and at the same time adding to the general beauty of the city.

In addition to the related guests and the speakers, James F. Dick, superintendent of our beautiful Ferncliff cemetery, was present.

Ge Dale.

Waltham, Mass.—F. A. Greenlaw disappeared from his place of business, on Piety Corner, June 1, and has not been heard from since. As a result of his prolonged absence, the business is in the hands of James T. Silman, as keeper, in behalf of a creditor. Mr. Greenlaw came here from a neighboring town about a year ago and leased the Kidder greenhouses from the owner, E. P. Smith. Though an expert florist, he did not seem to be very successful, and it is considered probable that he became discouraged and decided to abandon the field.

TALKS ON GREENHOUSE MATERIAL

No. 9.

If you hold a ten cent piece close to your eye with one hand and a silver dollar at arm's length with the other hand you won't be able to see the dollar. The ten cent piece will shut out all sight of the piece ten times as big. In building greenhouses of poor material you are holding up the dime and losing sight of the dollar. It is a fact, that the florist who builds up-to-date houses shows himself to be a good business man and in 99 cases out of 100 is successful. The fellow who "stints" and tries to get something for nothing never amounts to much. It is the same old truth over again: "You can't grow the best flowers in a barn." For forty years we have been selling the cypress greenhouse and the way we build them now is so perfect that you owe it to yourself and your business to get our estimates and sketches. We will make a sketch for you free of charge and send you figures on all the material needed for the house. We will cut all the material at our factory ready for you to set it in place and you will have no trouble whatever in erecting your house. Our plans and printed instructions make building easy. # AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY

THE MEETING AT ITHACA.

June 19 and 20 the American Peony Society held its annual meeting in the New York State Agricultural College, at Cornell University. The exhibition of flowers, limited to two exhibitors because of the lateness of the season, was staged in one of the laboratories of the Horticultural department. Many of the society's members live in Pennsylvania, southern Ohio, Long Island, etc. In their sections peonies had had their blooming period. However, the trial plots in Ithaca were one mass of bloom. Inasmuch as the most important object of the meeting was to study the different varieties on the ground, it was thought best to hold the meeting when the plots were at their best. It was a disappointment that the attendance should have been so light.

Prof. A. P. Saunders, of Clinton, N. Y., brought a large collection of blooms, which were entered in the amateur class. T. C. Thurlow & Co., West Newbury, Mass., also sent a large consignment.

Business Session.

The regular business meeting was called to order June 19, in the Horticultural lecture room, by Secretary Fewkes; President Ward and Vice-president Peterson being absent, E. A. Reeves, of Cleveland, was elected chairman. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. R. T. Brown, representing the Cottage Gardens Co., spoke in behalf of Mr. Ward. He said that he regretted the fact that Mr. Ward was unavoidably detained in the west by business.

Report of the Secretary.

The report of Secretary Fewkes was in part as follows: The present membership of the society is forty-nine, not including four honorary members. It is gratifying to note that the membership is steadily increasing, slowly to be sure, but in a substantial manner. Those who have dropped out are few and greatly overbalanced by the new members who are annually admitted.

Since the last meeting the work of the society has been steadily progressing. The committee on diseases has sent out a large number of inquiries, which have brought out much information, but this has not yet been reduced to an orderly condition.

The nomenclature committee has the result of its work done by Mr. Coit, last summer, in press, in the form of a bulletin which will be issued shortly.

The secretary has the proceedings of the society for the five years from 1903 to 1907, inclusive, in the hands of the printer.

In response to the circulars sent out by Prof. Craig last July, in regard to forming a supplementary test collection, a large number of roots were sent in and were planted in accordance with the expressed wishes of the society. These, as well as the older collection, were top-dressed with stable manure last fall, which served as a mulch last winter.

In regard to the diseases of the peony, we can not be too watchful or too persistent in our endeavors to learn all that can be found out about their nature and means of prevention. To the commercial man the matter is not of a directly serious nature, but to the amateurs, and indirectly to the commercial man, it is most serious. I have in mind a peony garden near Boston which was stocked with many rare and choice varieties. Many of the plants had reached their third and fourth years and were fine, large plants. During last summer the wilt and black rot attacked many of them, causing much loss and distress to the owners. In the fall large roots were dug up which were completely destroyed.

This is but one instance. There are many others who are suffering and so situated that they cannot change their plants to new ground, but must either give up growing the peony or find some means of checking or preventing the spread of the diseases.

Miscellaneous Business.

On the statement by Secretary Fewkes that many people thought $5 too high a price for the peony check list, the motion was made and carried to change the price from $5 to $2.

A letter from Prof. Whetzel was read, saying that, owing to conditions over which he had no control, he found it impossible to attend the meeting and make a report. He gave a brief outline of the work he was doing on peony diseases and said that he expected to publish results soon.

A general discussion of the present trial plot followed. Great regret was expressed by members of the society that the plot on which the roots were planted would not be properly drained. All agreed, however, that the plants were doing well, considering the conditions.

The question of where the society was to meet next year was then taken up. A letter from the Minnesota Horticultural Society was read, asking the Peony Society to hold the exhibition at the Minnesota State Fair grounds in 1909.

Mr. Brown, speaking for Mr. Ward, asked the society to hold the next meeting at the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y. Inasmuch as the Cottage Gardens are at the center of a peony growing section, Mr. Brown thought it would be best to hold the next meeting there.

It was moved and seconded to accept Mr. Ward's invitation, and the motion was unanimously carried.

It was decided to send out a circular letter about May 15, 1909, to learn from the growers when their peony blooms will be at their best. In this way the time of the meeting can be fixed to suit the majority of growers.

Election of Officers.

The following officers were elected:

President—C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.
Vice-president—C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y.
Secretary—A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.
Treasurer—J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa.
Director—E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O.

The following were elected into membership: C. Harmon Payne, 141 Wellmeadow road, Catford, London, England; William Miller, Bar Harbor, Me.; John Cavers, Oakville, Ontario county, N. Y.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y.; John Merkel, Mentor, O.

A VISIT TO ROSENFIELD.

J. F. Rosenfield, at West Point, Neb., has one of the largest and finest collections of peonies in America, and that means in the world. He has 700 varieties, besides thousands of seedlings on the way, and, I should judge, if all were cut up and replanted this fall, he would have half a million.

He is a peony specialist, understanding all about them, and knows how to keep them strong and healthy. He has deep, rich, well-drained, sandy loam. The ground is sloping, to carry off the rain, for it will not do for the peonies to have wet feet. He has found it will not do to plant peonies after peonies until the ground has had rest, nor will it do to manure heavily. After clearing the land, he sows a crop of oats and, as I saw them, there was a tremendous growth. This he plows under in June and lets it rot; then, in September, he plows deeply and the ground is ready for peonies again. He often puts some coarse manure on the fall-planted ones. He thinks there is no harm in this, as the manure does not come in contact with the roots and the rains feed them liquid manure, which is safe.

His Methods.

He has been raising seedling peonies for about twenty years. The plat is carefully laid out and each plant is numbered. A record is kept of the blooming qualities. Those that produce flowers annually are noted and the intermittent ones rejected. Perhaps, under this close scrutiny, nine-tenths will be rejected from the first careful selection. The five points of excellence must be met:

1. Robustness of the plant and readiness to propagate.
2. Annual bloomer, regardless of frosts.
3. Fragrance.
4. Large, full, symmetrical flower.
5. Good keeping qualities.

As I looked over his charts I was impressed with his patience and conscientious regard for the future of his creations. It is important to have a peony that will multiply readily. J. Descaisne is a beautiful flower, but it is brittle in the root and with me it takes four years to double itself, while Baroness Schroeder will easily double every year, and I have cut four good roots from one in a single season. So this is cheaper at $5 than the other at 25 cents. A peony that is an intermittent bloomer, though of equal beauty, is not worth half price. I have had some of Kelway's best and have had to wait five years for a blossom. That don't pay. One trouble with European propagators is, they put their novelties on the market too soon. It is a fact that young peonies are inclined to wabble till they are established. Many of Terry's seedlings vary widely in color from the descriptions first given. Among my seedlings one year I found one of marvelous beauty—one of the most charming variegated flowers I ever saw. A press representative saw it and said, "Now, let me name this." He called it Exquisite. I planted a strong stake beside it, with the name on it. Next year the stake was there and the same plant, but no Exquisite. That identical plant had the impudence to throw up a tall stem with a worthless single flower. I waited for years for Exquisite to come back, but it never came. Another time I found one of the most magnificent flowers in the whole collection. It was an immense, compact bloom of violaceous, vivid, deep red. It was a splendor. I marked it. The next year it had an inferior bloom and for five years it has not bloomed at all. Now, if on the first blooming I had commenced propagating, what a disappointment my customers would have! I am convinced that right here is where the trouble lies with our French and English growers. They rush things on the market before they have been fully tested.

Mr. Rosenfield is so conservative and exacting that he has selected only eight out of thousands in twenty years. His Golden Harvest and Floral Treasure are well known. They immediately went to the front. Delicatissima and Floral Treasure are much alike. The latter may be a seedling of the former, but it was born years after. Mr. Rosenfield never had a Delicatissima on his place till long after Floral Treasure was born. Again, Golden Harvest and Jeanne d'Arc resemble each other when there is forty years' difference in their birth. They do look alike, but they are not the same. A row of Jeanne d'Arc planted last fall did not produce a flower. A row of Golden Harvest of much smaller roots, planted the same time, was covered with fine blooms, and they always bloom. A good many years ago Mr. Rosenfield secured some of the choicest seed from an eastern grower and it is probable that among them were seeds of those two varieties which nearly reproduced themselves, and though they look alike it is only a family resemblance. They are not the same, as you will find by planting side by side and watching them year by year. Golden Harvest is the most continuous bloomer under adverse circumstances that ever was born.

After years of waiting and testing, Mr. Rosenfield is now putting six more on the market. They are: Karl Rosenfield, crimson, large, tall, early, fragrant; Ak-sar-ben, crimson maroon, tall; Grace D. Bryan, large pink, double, fragrant, robust, late; Crimson Victory, tall, full crimson; Prairie Splendor, tall, large deep pink; Prairie King, late, tall, deep red.

He thinks that ultimately we will come down to about seventy-five varieties. C. S. HARRISON.

SINGLE PEONIES.

Notes on a Little Known Flower.

Commercially, the single peonies are much less grown than their beauty and other good qualities would seem to warrant. The fact that they flower earlier than the double herbaceous class is one great point in their favor. Then, again, their extreme grace appeals to many critical flower buyers far more than the doubles, the beautiful golden stamens setting off the light-colored and crimson varieties wonderfully. For dining-table centerpieces they are decidedly preferable to the doubles, which are too heavy, no matter how carefully they may be arranged.

It is tolerably well known that peony flowers, to keep well, should be cut either late in the evening or early in the morning, preferably the latter, and stood in a good bulk of water in a cold room as soon as possible. In the case of the singles it is better to do this before the blooms have reached their full size. If treated in this way they will last in the house fully as well as the doubles.

Culture.

Cultural directions for peonies have been given so often that it would seem as though nothing new could be said on this point. They love rich, deep, well-manured ground, and if it is rather moist, all the better. They succeed well in partial shade and, if some are planted in such locations, it will allow of a longer succession of bloom. While planting may be done from August until April, we have found September an excellent month for this work. If set out thus early, the divisions get a chance to root freely before freezing weather sets in.

Some Good Sorts.

Each year sees an addition to the varieties of single peonies from European and home sources, and striking advances are being made in them. A few of the older and better known varieties worthy of attention are: Albiflora, pure white with golden stamens; Bridesmaid, a beautiful white of large size; festiva fragrans, rose; Whitleyi major, pure white, a good old sort; La Fraicheur, pinkish white; La Fiancee, silky, pure white petals; Claribel, purple; Bacchus, dark crimson; tenuifolia, crimson, very early; officinalis, rosy purple, and the varieties rosea, red, and Striata elegans, crimson, flaked maroon, are also valuable early blooming sorts. Hesperus is a lovely bright pink, and Ideality, of a deep rose color, is superb; Stanley, rich maroon crimson, with pure gold stamens, is a lovely variety.

A few other sorts we have grown are: Mrs. Vernon Harcourt, beautiful flesh shade; Sir Edward Lawson, pure rose; Lady Jeane, blush white; Lady Helen Vincent, white, tinged flesh, a beautiful variety; Duchess of Sutherland, flesh pink; Earl of Pavis, cherry rose, and Countess of Warwick, soft flesh. The prominent way in which the masses of golden stamens stand out from the centers of the flowers make them doubly charming.

The Japanese Class.

The newer race of Japanese Imperial single peonies are centers of attraction at all exhibitions. These are not single flowers, as are the varieties previously referred to, usually having two or three rows of petals. The yellow stamens add much to their beauty, lying loosely in the centers of the flowers. Of these, the following have proved satisfactory and are admired more than any other single sorts while in bloom: Princess Opaleep, single pink, with very prominent golden anthers; Lady Cecilia Rose, pure white; Cendrillon, cherry red; Moonlight, silvery white, and White Lady, pure white and water-lily-like in form. As they become better known we look to see the Japanese class become more widely grown and popular than the ordinary singles. Some of our American specialists are now carrying a good selection of these in stock. W. N. CRAIG.

PEONY TESTS.

"When we do not speak of things with a partiality full of love, what we say is not worth being repeated."

How apropos this sentiment after feasting for almost a month amid the beauties of the king of flowers, the peony! From the time the first flower opened (L'Esperance, May 16), until the last flower was gone (Dorchester, June 15), there was displayed before the wondering eyes of the lucky beholder a panorama of coloring that by its rapid transition was kaleidoscopic in effect and simply indescribable, a veritable month of beauty.

As to those whose familiarity with the peony recalls only the old, commoner varieties of our grandmothers' gardens or the varieties usually sold by the nursery trade, I would say to them that they have no conception of the wonderland opened up to them by the newer peonies.

The collection being gathered at Cornell should set everybody right as to nomenclature and place the peony on a safe commercial basis, in that growers would be sure of obtaining what they desired.

A great deal of complaint has been registered about substitution. Substitution can only be accomplished in two ways—by premeditation and from lack of knowledge. My opinion, based on an experience with plants purchased from fourteen American and three foreign growers, would lead me to state that lack of knowledge as to the right name of a peony is the cause of practically all of the substitution.

It is to be hoped that the Cornell experts will in no event come to a conclusion as to the correct name for a peony from the fact that a majority of American growers have a variety under a certain name. To illustrate, from several growers, both foreign and home, was bought the variety Eugene Verdier. While I am not an expert, I should say that only one firm (foreign) is selling the true plant, the others selling the variety known as L'Indispensable.

Then, again, the two varieties, Mont Blanc and Solfatare, have no resemblance except in color, and yet are claimed, so far as we know, by all American growers to be the same peony. With such vexatious questions settled once and for all, it would simplify the peony business and make us all toe the mark and be good, and there would be an end of the confusion that now exists by reason of the fact that anyone who has a few years' experience in collecting peonies forthwith sets himself up as a know-it-all, when the fact is that what he does

A VISIT TO ROSENFIELD.

J. F. Rosenfield, at West Point, Neb., has one of the largest and finest collections of peonies in America, and that means in the world. He has 700 varieties, besides thousands of seedlings on the way, and, I should judge, if all were cut up and replanted this fall, he would have half a million.

He is a peony specialist, understanding all about them, and knows how to keep them strong and healthy. He has deep, rich, well-drained, sandy loam. The ground is sloping, to carry off the rain, for it will not do for the peonies to have wet feet. He has found it will not do to plant peonies after peonies until the ground has had rest, nor will it do to manure heavily. After clearing the land, he sows a crop of oats and, as I saw them, there was a tremendous growth. This he plows under in June and lets it rot; then, in September, he plows deeply and the ground is ready for peonies again. He often puts some coarse manure on the fall-planted ones. He thinks there is no harm in this, as the manure does not come in contact with the roots and the rains feed them liquid manure, which is safe.

His Methods.

He has been raising seedling peonies for about twenty years. The plat is carefully laid out and each plant is numbered. A record is kept of the blooming qualities. Those that produce flowers annually are noted and the intermittent ones rejected. Perhaps, under this close scrutiny, nine-tenths will be rejected from the first careful selection. The five points of excellence must be met:

1. Robustness of the plant and readiness to propagate.
2. Annual bloomer, regardless of frosts.
3. Fragrance.
4. Large, full, symmetrical flower.
5. Good keeping qualities.

As I looked over his charts I was impressed with his patience and conscientious regard for the future of his creations. It is important to have a peony that will multiply readily. J. Descaisne is a beautiful flower, but it is brittle in the root and with me it takes four years to double itself, while Baroness Schroeder will easily double every year, and I have cut four good roots from one in a single season. So this is cheaper at $5 than the other at 25 cents. A peony that is an intermittent bloomer, though of equal beauty, is not worth half price. I have had some of Kelway's best and have had to wait five years for a blossom. That don't pay. One trouble with European propagators is, they put their novelties on the market too soon. It is a fact that young peonies are inclined to wabble till they are established. Many of Terry's seedlings vary widely in color from the descriptions first given. Among my seedlings one year I found one of marvelous beauty- one of the most charming variegated flowers I ever saw. A press representative saw it and said, "Now, let me name this." He called it Exquisite. I planted a strong stake beside it, with the name on it. Next year the stake was there and the same plant, but no Exquisite. That identical plant had the impudence to throw up a tall stem with a worthless single flower. I waited for years for Exquisite to come back, but it never came. Another time I found one of the most magnificent flowers in the whole collection. It was an immense, compact bloom of violaceous, vivid, deep red. It was a splendor. I marked it. The next year it had an inferior bloom and for five years it has not bloomed at all. Now, if on the first blooming I had commenced propagating, what a disappointment my customers would have! I am convinced that right here is where the trouble lies with our French and English growers. They rush things on the market before they have been fully tested.

Mr. Rosenfield is so conservative and exacting that he has selected only eight out of thousands in twenty years. His Golden Harvest and Floral Treasure are well known. They immediately went to the front. Delicatissima and Floral Treasure are much alike. The latter may be a seedling of the former, but it was born years after. Mr. Rosenfield never had a Delicatissima on his place till long after Floral Treasure was born. Again, Golden Harvest and Jeanne d'Arc resemble each other when there is forty years' difference in their birth. They do look alike, but they are not the same. A row of Jeanne d'Arc planted last fall did not produce a flower. A row of Golden Harvest of much smaller roots, planted the same time, was covered with fine blooms, and they always bloom. A good many years ago Mr. Rosenfield secured some of the choicest seed from an eastern grower and it is probable that among them were seeds of those two varieties which nearly reproduced themselves, and though they look alike it is only a family resemblance. They are not the same, as you will find by planting side by side and watching them year by year. Golden Harvest is the most continuous bloomer under adverse circumstances that ever was born.

After years of waiting and testing, Mr. Rosenfield is now putting six more on the market. They are: Karl Rosenfield, crimson, large, tall, early, fragrant; Ak-sar-ben, crimson maroon, tall; Grace D. Bryan, large pink, double, fragrant, robust, late; Crimson Victory, tall, full crimson; Prairie Splendor, tall, large deep pink; Prairie King, late, tall, deep red.

He thinks that ultimately we will come down to about seventy-five varieties. C. S. HARRISON.

SINGLE PEONIES.

Notes on a Little Known Flower.

Commercially, the single peonies are much less grown than their beauty and other good qualities would seem to warrant. The fact that they flower earlier than the double herbaceous class is one great point in their favor. Then, again, their extreme grace appeals to many critical flower buyers far more than the doubles, the beautiful golden stamens setting off the light-colored and crimson varieties wonderfully. For dining-table centerpieces they are decidedly preferable to the doubles, which are too heavy, no matter how carefully they may be arranged.

It is tolerably well known that peony flowers, to keep well, should be cut either late in the evening or early in the morning, preferably the latter, and stood in a good bulk of water in a cold room as soon as possible. In the case of the singles it is better to do this before the blooms have reached their full size. If treated in this way they will last in the house fully as well as the doubles.

Culture.

Cultural directions for peonies have been given so often that it would seem as though nothing new could be said on this point. They love rich, deep, well-manured ground, and if it is rather moist, all the better. They succeed well in partial shade and, if some are planted in such locations, it will allow of a longer succession of bloom. While planting may be done from August until April, we have found September an excellent month for this work. If set out thus early, the divisions get a chance to root freely before freezing weather sets in.

Some Good Sorts.

Each year sees an addition to the varieties of single peonies from European and home sources, and striking advances are being made in them. A few of the older and better known varieties worthy of attention are: Albiflora, pure white with golden stamens; Bridesmaid, a beautiful white of large size; festiva fragrans, rose; Whitleyi major, pure white, a good old sort; La Fraicheur, pinkish white; La Fiancee, silky, pure white petals; Claribel, purple; Bacchus, dark crimson; tenuifolia, crimson, very early; officinalis, rosy purple, and the varieties rosea, red, and Striata elegans, crimson, flaked maroon, are also valuable early blooming sorts. Hesperus is a lovely bright pink, and Ideality, of a deep rose color, is superb; Stanley, rich maroon crimson, with pure gold stamens, is a lovely variety.

A few other sorts we have grown are: Mrs. Vernon Harcourt, beautiful flesh shade; Sir Edward Lawson, pure rose; Lady Jeane, blush white; Lady Helen Vincent, white, tinged flesh, a beautiful variety; Duchess of Sutherland, flesh pink; Earl of Pavis, cherry rose, and Countess of Warwick, soft flesh. The prominent way in which the masses of golden stamens stand out from the centers of the flowers make them doubly charming.

The Japanese Class.

The newer race of Japanese Imperial single peonies are centers of attraction at all exhibitions. These are not single flowers, as are the varieties previously referred to, usually having two or three rows of petals. The yellow stamens add much to their beauty, lying loosely in the centers of the flowers. Of these, the following have proved satisfactory and are admired more than any other single sorts while in bloom: Princess Opaleep, single pink, with very prominent golden anthers; Lady Cecilia Rose, pure white; Cendrillon, cherry red; Moonlight, silvery white, and White Lady, pure white and water-lily like in form. As they become better known we look to see the Japanese class become more widely grown and popular than the ordinary singles. Some of our American specialists are now carrying a good selection of these in stock. W. N. CRAIG.

PEONY TESTS.

"When we do not speak of things with a partiality full of love, what we say is not worth being repeated."

How apropos this sentiment after feasting for almost a month amid the beauties of the king of flowers, the peony! From the time the first flower opened (L'Esperance, May 16), until the last flower was gone (Dorchester, June 15), there was displayed before the wondering eyes of the lucky beholder a panorama of coloring that by its rapid transition was kaleidoscopic in effect and simply indescribable, a veritable month of beauty.

As to those whose familiarity with the peony recalls only the old, commoner varieties of our grandmothers' gardens or the varieties usually sold by the nursery trade, I would say to them that they have no conception of the wonderland opened up to them by the newer peonies.

The collection being gathered at Cornell should set everybody right as to nomenclature and place the peony on a safe commercial basis, in that growers would be sure of obtaining what they desired.

A great deal of complaint has been registered about substitution. Substitution can only be accomplished in two ways—by premeditation and from lack of knowledge. My opinion, based on an experience with plants purchased from fourteen American and three foreign growers, would lead me to state that lack of knowledge as to the right name of a peony is the cause of practically all of the substitution.

It is to be hoped that the Cornell experts will in no event come to a conclusion as to the correct name for a peony from the fact that a majority of American growers have a variety under a certain name. To illustrate, from several growers, both foreign and home, was bought the variety Eugene Verdier. While I am not an expert, I should say that only one firm (foreign) is selling the true plant, the others selling the variety known as L'Indispensable.

Then, again, the two varieties, Mont Blanc and Solfatare, have no resemblance except in color, and yet are claimed, so far as we know, by all American growers to be the same peony. With such vexatious questions settled once and for all, it would simplify the peony business and make us all toe the mark and be good, and there would be an end of the confusion that now exists by reason of the fact that anyone who has a few years' experience in collecting peonies forthwith sets himself up as a know-it-all, when the fact is that what he does not know makes him appear ridiculous. I find there is just cause for complaint in the many strays that appear, only one grower being free from this slipshod method of sending out peonies. To overcome this, all plants should be flowered and diligently rogued before being offered for sale.

The planting which I describe is owned by the Perennial Gardens, but up to the present time the product of both flowers and roots has been handled by the Good & Reese Co. It is situated eight miles from Springfield, on Mud Run, a spring-fed tributary of the Great Miami river. This collection contains 260 varieties, in 119 varieties of which the planting this year was of such age and in such quantities as to be intelligently judged. In describing the varieties, I use the terms in the order of their excellence, as grand, extra, fine, good. But I lay no claim to being a peony critic, only giving you my impressions.

Achille (Calot)—Early. Opens with a very delicate blush tint, finishing pearl white. This variety is widely grown and sold in this country under the name of Marie Lemoine. Good.

Albert Crousse (Crousse)—Late. Immense, very full convex bloom, as perfect in outline and contour as a dahlia; best described as a delicate sea-shell pink; has all the points of excellence. A most remarkable variety. Grand.

Andre Lauries (Crousse) — Late. Anemone-shaped flower of a violaceous rose color. Indispensable, as it is in bloom among the latest and is a very free, sure bloomer. Good.

Asa Gray (Crousse)—Midseason. Large, imbricated, perfectly formed bloom. Opens flat and, when finished, builds up high in the center, forming a cup. Flesh pink, delicately dotted and flaked with carmine. Extra.

Avalanche (Crousse) — Midseason. Large blooms of perfect shape. Color fine milk white, with creamy center with a few stripes of carmine. This we believe to be finer than the much lauded Baroness Schweder. Grand.

Berlioz (Crousse)—Midseason. Full globular shape. Color bright currant red; as the flowers finish, the petals are distinctly tipped with silver. Unique. Fine.

Canari (Guerin) — Midseason. Outer petals fleshy white, with yellow center, changing to white. Fine.

Charlemagne (Crousse)—Late. Delicate flesh, with deeper peach tinted center. A beautiful flower. The bud is so full of petals it has difficulty in opening. Fine.

Claire Dubois (Crousse)—Midseason. Very large globular flowers; center full convex; color finest clear, glossy pink, with silvery reflex. Desirable. Grand.

Couronne d'Or (Calot)—Late. Large, full flower of superb form; color white, reflecting yellow. Outer petals bordered with carmine, showing golden stamens through the flower. Beautiful. Grand.

Dorchester (Richardson)—Late. Free bloomer; compact, erect habit; color delicate salmon pink. Fine.

Dr. Boisduval (Guerin) — Midseason. Rich, dark, velvety crimson. The color cannot be improved on. Grand.

Duchesse de Nemours (Calot) — Midseason. Large cup-shaped, sulphur white flower, fading to pure white. Especially fine in half open bud state. Extra.

Eugene Verdier (Calot)—Late. Immense in size, globular and literally packed with petals. Color very delicate blush. Slow in opening and holds a long time. One week later than L'Indispensable. Has the largest bud of any peony in this collection. Grand.

Floral Treasure (Rosenfield)—Midseason. Clear, delicate pink; a very chaste, beautiful and refined flower. Extra.

Single Peony Idealty, Pale Pink.

Felix Crousse (Crousse) — Midseason. Large, full, American ball-shaped bloom, of richest ruby red; the finest finished flower of all the reds. Grand.

Festiva (Donkelaer)—Late midseason. A dwarf growing Festiva Maxima, blooming five to six days later. Grand.

Festiva Maxima (Miellez) — Early. The standard of perfection in peonies. Enormous blooms of pure snow-white, flecked with an occasional carmine spot on edge of center petals. Grand.

Gigantea (Van Leeuwen) — Early. Found by Mr. Van Leeuwen in his collection and named by him. Gigantea is a ravishingly beautiful wild flower, of clearest soft pink. Large, fragrant. Grand.

Golden Harvest (Rosenfield)—Midseason. Large tricolored bloom. Guard petals blush pink, with a distinct blush white collar and blush center; a few of the center petals tipped and striped with carmine, the total color effect of the flower being creamy pink. Grand.

Grandiflora (Richardson)—Late. Immense, large petaled bloom of La France pink, fading lighter. Grand.

Grandiflora Rubra — Late. Probably a variety renamed. It is a very light, dull colored red. Enormous, well shaped double bloom. Would rank much higher were the color brighter. Good.

Humei Carnea (Guerin)—Late. Large, compact, bright pink. While this is an old variety, it ranks away up in the list. Good.

Jenny Lind—Midseason. This variety was one of a collection that Parsons, of Long Island, sent west about the fifties. Large bloom on long, strong stem; bright pink, with silvery reflex; a striking variety. Fine.

Lady Derby—Midseason. Probably renamed; of the largest size; pure pearly white, on the strongest of stems. When the flower finishes, it cups in the center. Free bloomer; nothing finer. Grand.

La Tulipe (Calot)—Midseason. Delicate rose, shading to ivory white, with center petals tipped carmine. Extra.

L'Eclatante (Calot) — Late. Strong, upright grower; double flowers of dark, velvety crimson. Grand.

L'Esperance (Calot) — Early. Fine form; full, high tufted center. Color bright pink. Very fragrant and free. Fine.

L'Indispensable — Early midseason. Probably renamed. Very large, cup-shaped bloom, finishing with a high-built center. Very delicate blush, almost white, with a profusion of golden stamens showing through the sides of the flower and center; might well be called the water lily peony. A strikingly beautiful variety. Entirely dissimilar to Eugene Verdier. Grand.

Livingstone (Crousse) — Late. Very full, large bloom of softest pink, overlaid with white. Good bloomer; certainly a prize winner. Grand.

Mme. Crousse (Calot)—Late midseason. Large, pure white bloom, with occasionally a carmine spot, most flowers coming pure snow-white. We believe that this is the very best all-around purpose white. Grand.

Mme. de Verneville (Crousse)—Midseason. Pyramid-shaped center; pure white, with carmine spots; one of the most beautiful varieties. Extra.

Mme. Ducel (Mechin)—Early. Enormous and perfectly formed, compact globular blooms, resembling a huge mum; color brilliant silvery pink, with lighter silvery reflex. Grand.

Mme. Emile Gallee (Crousse) — Late midseason. Large, cup-shaped, imbricated flower; the color an even, delicate shade of La France pink. The coloring of this variety is matchless and in this respect it is in a class by itself. Grand.

Mme. Forel (Crousse)—Late midseason. In Holland this is designated as the princess of all pink peonies. Enormous, very full, ball shaped bloom, on long, strong stems. Perfect shape; color bright, glossy pink. The flower finishes with a silvery reflex. Grand.

Mlle. Rousseau (Crousse)—Midseason. Large bloom that finishes with a cup. Color sulphur-tinted white, with flesh colored center, showing carmine spots, some flowers showing golden stamens. Fine.

Marguerite Gerard (Crousse)—Late midseason. Enormous flowers of clear, delicate pink, changing to tender, creamy white. Center petals occasionally tipped red. Grand.

Marie Lemoine (Calot)—Late. Enormous sulphur white blooms, changing to pure white. A very massive flower, probably the largest of all peony flowers. A gem of the first water. Grand.

Mathilde de Roseneck (Crousse)—Late. Beautiful, bright flesh pink. Color of the old Malmaison rose, with a narrow carmine edge. Extra.

Mireille (Crousse)—Late. Large, full, imbricated flower, of purest paper white; no markings or stamens. The latest of all white peonies to bloom; in a class by itself. Grand.

Modele de Perfection (Crousse)—Late. Good sized, perfectly formed, cup-shaped bloom; color clear, bright pink, bordered with silvery rose. Extra.

Mons. Crousse—Late. Evidently renamed. Is called the American Beauty peony, from the color of its flowers resembling that rose. The color is several shades lighter than L'Eclatante. A most desirable sort. Grand.

Mons. Dupont (Calot)—Late midseason. Very large, well built, cup-shaped bloom. Color ivory white, with lively carmine border on central petalage. Extra.

Mons. Jules Elie (Crousse)—Early midseason. In Holland called the prince of pink peonies. Immense, globular and very full flowers; broad overlapping petalage, forming one of the most perfect peonies in existence. Glossy pink, the entire bloom covered with a silvery reflex. Grand.

Mons. Krelage (Crousse)—Midseason. Full, large flowers, of bright currant red. Fine.

Mons. Martin Cahuzac (Dessert)—Early. Cup-shaped, semi-double flower, of a rich black maroon color, with metallic reflex. A very glaring color in a class by itself. Grand.

Mont Blanc (Van Leeuwen)—Midseason. Found growing in Solfatare by Mr. Van Leeuwen. The plant is dwarf in growth, with a peculiarly drooping habit seen in no other peony within our knowledge; foliage being narrow, drooping and of a decidedly dull, dark green color. Buds twist up into a pencil point, carried on long, stiff stems, with slight foliage, well above the plant. In this respect like Marie Lemoine. Broad, snow-white guard petals. Center petalage narrow and of a light sulphur yellow, changing to pure white. Carpels yellow. Grand.

Nigra (Terry)—Late midseason. To those who admire the semi-double reds, this variety will appeal. Good.

Paganini (Guerin)—Midseason. Medium sized bloom. Guards delicate pink, center sulphur yellow. Very free bloomer. Had this the size, it would be A No. 1. Fine.

Pierre Dessert (Dessert)—Late. Large, full flowers of deep, rich, velvety crimson. Violet reflex. Extra.

Pizarro—Midseason. Another peony from Parsons' collection, resembling somewhat the variety Berlioz. Opens deep currant red; each petal finishes with a pronounced silvery tip. Enormous flower, very distinct and unique. Grand.

Single Peony The Bride, Pure White.

Queen Victoria (Eng. Hort.)—Midseason. A very free flowering, medium sized white. Good.

Rubra Superba (Richardson)—Late. Magnificent, rich, brilliant crimson, shading to violet. Very large and double. Grand.

Solfatare (Calot)—Midseason. The plant is tall in growth, of upright habit. Foliage broad, of a shiny light green color. Buds very flat, carried on stems well foliaged up to the flower. Broad snow-white guard petals; center petalage as broad again as Mont Blanc, of a light sulphur yellow, changing to pure white. Carpels bright pink. Extra.

Thurlow's Dark Red—Midseason to late. Origin unknown. Enormous, very double, full flowers, of intense, deep, rich red. The freest bloomer of all the red peonies, if not of all peonies. Often comes in clusters. Superb. Grand.

There are entirely too many semi-double red varieties of peonies in existence, and then, again, of the worthless tricolors there are a score or more that can be dispensed with to the vast benefit of the business. Who would compare that grand variety, Golden Harvest, with its many charms, to such a variety as Reine Victoria or any of this type or class?

I have avoided reference to numbers, but the stock of the Perennial Gardens is very large, such varieties as Festiva Maxima, Duchesse de Nemours and Felix Crousse being grown in lots of 10,000 strong plants; such varieties as Marie Lemoine, Mons. Crousse, Eugene Verdier and Mons. Jules Elie in lots of 3,000 to 5,000 each. JOHN M. GOOD.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Co-operation.

I have read in the REVIEW the different articles from the various writers in reference to coöperation. It is all very well to talk over the different questions that naturally confront us, to exchange our views and thereby get beneficial pointers wherever we are able to catch one, but in my humble opinion the whole thing may be simmered down to this, that the law of supply and demand rules the world, in every branch of business.

When the glass factories overproduce, they shut down until their surplus diminishes. It is so with every factory in every line of trade, but not so with the greenhouse man. No? What then? Why, he goes to work and builds ten more houses, in face of the glut, and in so doing we bring on such unwelcome conditions as now exist, as they naturally and surely will follow such a course of procedure.

Our country is growing, its population is increasing and the bulk of our people appreciate flowers, but there is a limit to all things and the flower market is no exception to this rule. So then, if this method of operation continues as it has in the last ten years, it does not require a very large telescope to see that our days of reckoning must come.

I do not wish to be placed on record as an alarmist. President Roosevelt passed through a small town four years ago and, not being able to speak to the people that greeted his presence, he simply cried out from the platform of his car, "Let well enough alone!" Pretty good advice to anyone.

FRANK JERABEK.

I have read with interest the comments on Arthur A. Niessen's paper on "Co-operation Between Retailer and Wholesaler" and believe this general expression of opinion will prove of great value in solving the problem of disposing of the surplus in cut flowers to the best advantage. The closing letter of Frank H.

Traendly ridicules the whole matter and casts the old-time slur on Philadelphia's slowness for introducing the subject at all. I think every New Yorker who visited Philadelphia last August will disagree with Mr. Traendly's assertion about the slowness of our city, and many of them will agree with me when I say that Mr. Traendly's failure to recognize the importance of this question is not a sign of superiority. J. W. Young.

[Mr. Traendly did not fail to recognize the importance of the subject; rather he recognized it as so big a problem as to be beyond solution except through the gradual changes which are every year apparent in the trade, for he said: "It is a condition that we all have to buck against and do the best we can." As for Philadelphia's slowness, Mr. Traendly is one of those who lightens life's labors by enjoying his little joke at each step on the journey. Don't take him too literally.—Ed.]

Poinsettias.

While it is still somewhat early to propagate poinsettias for pan culture, it is well to continue to put in cuttings to produce plants for planting in benches or growing singly in pots to produce large sized bracts for Christmas trade. A greenhouse is not needed for the stock plants now. They will make better cuttings if kept outdoors and will root freely in a coldframe, in which the little plants should be placed when first potted. If you have any old stock still in a dormant state, instead of potting the same plant it outdoors, where it can receive some water and will speedily give you a crop of nice cuttings. Be sure to pot off your cuttings as soon as rooted, as they soon become hard in the propagating bench and if the roots are long they will break badly when removed.

Gardenias.

During July is a good time to plant out a bench of gardenias. If cuttings were put in a month ago, they should now be rooted and potted off. Keep these in a warm, moist house, where they can have frequent sprayings overhead, and they will grow surprisingly fast and be fit to plant out within three or four weeks.

Gardenias do not want a large body of soil to grow in. We prefer four to six inches and the compost should be of a porous nature. If water, after being applied to the bench, will stand on the surface, you must expect yellowing of the foliage. To have ideal soil conditions it should pass away as if poured into a screen. Good drainage is essential. Over this place a layer of fibrous sod, with the grassy side downwards. Sod of a fibrous nature is to be preferred, and use as little of the finer particles as possible. Some old, well dried cow manure, sharp sand and broken charcoal should be added to the loam, but it is better not to use bone or other chemical fertilizers. Make the compost firm and leave a little ring around each plant, in which to apply water for a few weeks. This is preferable to soaking the whole bench.

Use the spray nozzle on the hose to keep down insect pests, particularly mealy bug. A fine damping overhead twice a day in hot weather will prove helpful. Pinch out the tops of the shoots to keep the plants bushy.

Show Pelargoniums.

As the flowering season for show pelargoniums ends, stand the plants outdoors in full sunshine. Do not immediately withhold water, as is too often done, but give them a liberal supply for the next three or four weeks, after which time gradually reduce it and lay the plants on their sides. Be sure that the plants are correctly labeled while any flowers remain, and if you are anxious to increase your stock of any varieties, you can get plenty of cuttings now, but, as a rule, we find it sufficiently early to propagate when pruning back the old plants.

Peonies.

The flowering season for peonies, owing to warm, dry weather, was less extended than usual this year. We hope you marked the good and undesirable sorts. Get rid of the latter and try to increase your stock of the former, August and September being suitable months for dividing the plants. Remove all seeds from the plants and keep them well cultivated. Some pessimists are opining that peonies are being overdone. There have been too many flowers on the market, but not of the better varieties. Growers who have had good white and soft pink shades have found a ready sale for them. The old varieties, which are still most in evidence, are hard to dispose of. You cannot afford to grow these poor kinds. Get some of the more up-to-date ones and remember that peonies are ironclad plants, that they increase in value each year and, even if you do not sell a flower, the plants themselves will give you good returns on any outlay you may have made on them.

Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Oncidium varicosum Rogersii is a popular yellow fall and winter blooming orchid that is grown to some extent by quite a number of florists. To any wishing to try a few plants, the present is a good time to procure a few newly imported ones, which are now being offered by several dealers. Carefully sponge over the new plants; cut away any dead bulbs or roots. Lay on a bare piece of bench for a few days, giving them occasional gentle sprayings. When root and growth action starts, place them in pans, pots or baskets, using these of as small size as you can conveniently get the plants in. A compost of fern fiber, to which a little live sphagnum moss has been added, is suitable. Grow in an airy house where they have good light, but no direct sunshine. Water sparingly until root action is becoming vigorous. Then apply it more freely.

These newly imported plants should all flower next fall or early winter and the following season will produce fine spikes. As their cost is comparatively low and they are splendid for decorative effects, coming in season for the fall shows, it is no wonder that the demand for them constantly increases.

Tuberous Begonias.

Late started tubers, recently potted off, come in useful during August and September, when flowering plants are none too plentiful. It is true that the demand for such plants with some growers is practically nil, but there are a number of others who do a considerable trade at this season, particularly if they are located near shore, mountain or other resorts.

These begonias like some shade, but it should never be heavy. They must have a light bench to do them justice and the shoots, being breakable, should be supported with short stakes. Do not crowd them nor syringe them overhead. For compost they prefer a light but rich mixture of well rotted manure, loam and a good addition of sand. If your loam is heavy, also add some leaf-mold. Six-inch pots will grow fine begonias, but if you prefer larger sized ones, use 7-inch and 8-inch. Splendid specimens can be grown in these two latter sizes.

CREOSOTE IN GREENHOUSES.

With reference to the use of creosote in greenhouse construction, as discussed in the Review, we can say but little from our own experience, and we have not been able to find any one who can speak from experience. We do not think, however, that it would be safe to use creosote in any manner, as this is a distillation of wood tar or coal tar.

Some years ago a house which was built for Robert Hoe was found to be very unsatisfactory. The plants frequently lost their leaves and the gardener laid the trouble to several things, among them that there was a gas generated inside the heating pipes. He had an open tank which was then used closed up and the pipe led outdoors, so there might not be any connection between the heating pipes and the indoor air. This did not help the difficulty in any way, as the plants still dropped their leaves. It was at last found that when the sills were laid on the walls some coal tar paper had been used. This paper was laid on top of the 8-inch brick wall and the sills were bedded down close on top of it. The odor of gas could easily be detected at certain times in the greenhouse. So they had the sills taken up and all the tar paper taken out and the sills rebedded in cement. After that was done, we believe there was no further trouble.

We think it would be very dangerous to plant life to use creosote in any manner. It would be more dangerous at the time of the year when the house was closed, or in extremely cold weather, when the fire would be pushed to carry the desired temperature.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

The Plants in the Field.

During the months of May and June your carnation plants should make their main growth, and everything you do for them should be done with that end in view. As a rule, the weather conditions during this period are most favorable to plant growth and, if cultivating and topping are looked after closely, no trouble is experienced in getting good, fair-sized plants for housing in July and August. During this period rains are usually frequent enough, if supplemented with proper cultivation, to insure a sturdy, healthy growth, which, if followed by rather dry weather for a couple of weeks before housing time, will carry the plants through the transplanting season in splendid shape.

I have always been a strong advocate of the cultivator in both wet and dry seasons, especially in the latter, and during the last few weeks we have had occasion to verify our good opinion of the cultivator. During the last few weeks we have had no rain heavy enough to wet the soil deeper than just to lay the dust, and vegetation has been hanging its head during the heat of the day. Uncultivated soil became hard enough to defy the spade. Yet, our carnation field, which has been gone over regularly, has kept mellow and moist, except for the top two inches or less of loose material, which acts as a mulch. Plants cannot suffer under such conditions, and while the growth is not very rapid, yet it is steady and sturdy.

Artificial Watering.

If we could have a longer growing season in the field, I would certainly prefer those conditions to any other. During such spells the temptation to water artificially is quite strong and many growers yield to it, only to make matters worse. Usually watering with the hose is resorted to, and in most cases not half enough is applied to wet through the dry soil. The plants are freshened up for the time and excited into activity, only to be burnt up worse by the sun the next day. We have seen this happen so often that we would discourage hosing the field plants at any time.

If, however, artificial watering is done intelligently and systematically and is supplemented with the cultivator, it can in some cases be made to be of great benefit. For instance, if shortly after planting a dry spell should set in, before the plants have really gotten a good start, a good, thorough watering twice each week will start them into growth. Each watering should be followed by the cultivator as soon as the soil dries enough to work well, the same as you do after a rain. Cases of this kind are exceptional, however, and will be met with, perhaps, once in five years.

A Word of Warning.

The greatest danger lies in overdoing the thing, and to those who are watering I would offer a word of warning. As I said at the beginning, your carnation plants should make their main growth during May and June if you plant between July 15 and August 15, which seems to be the favorite time among the best growers. During that time, promote the growth as much as your judgment tells you and do it in whatever manner you choose, but after July 1, if you would have success, you must confine your energies to getting the growth into proper shape to stand transplanting. By this I do not mean that growth must cease altogether during that time, but it must not be rapid or soft.

If you have ever carried roses over the second season, you will understand what I mean when I say that the plants should be brought to a practical standstill. In the ordinary summer, when the weather during July is hot and dew is scant, the carnation will naturally come to that point, and if transplanted when it is in that semi-dormant condition very little trouble is experienced. But if you wait until late in August and September, when the nights are cool and the dew is heavy, even though the rainfall may be scant, the plants waken up and growth is resumed. The growth soon becomes succulent, and any disturbance at the roots causes wilting and loss of foliage and in many cases of the whole plant.

To keep on watering the plants right along till housing time keeps them in a soft condition and prevents this semi-dormant condition which is such a help in transplanting. To this better condition of the plants, rather than to the longer season inside, may be attributed the success of those who house their carnations early.

A fine, heavy rain last night, which has saturated the soil thoroughly, has caused all vegetation to look up again, and our carnations, after cultivating tomorrow, will be ready for another two weeks' drought. It is surprising to see what growth was really made during this dry spell. The plants seemed to gain but little in size, but the breaks are there, and now, after the rain, the foliage has swelled out and the plants look twice as large as they did two days ago.

A LEHIGH VALLEY SHOW.

The flower show in the Market House at Bethlehem, Pa., Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 10, was not only notable as being Bethlehem's first annual floral festival, but was the first of its kind held in the Lehigh Valley on such an extensive scale. It was also notably successful, for, as a local newspaper states, the building was "more than packed with an ebbing and surging tide of humanity." The entries, numbering over 200, surpassed the expectations of the committee in charge and more than filled the space in the big square allotted to the plants and flowers.

Two commercial florists, John E. Haines and Jacob A. Fries, had exhibits and each received a first prize of $15, Mr. Haines for the best professional florist's display of flowers, and Mr. Fries for the best professional florist's display of ferns and plants.

Mr. Haines' exhibit, a photograph of which is herewith reproduced, occupied a section to the right of the orchestra platform. The name "John E. Haines" was formed on lattice work in crimson carnations, with a narrow border of sweet alyssum at the edge of each letter. Suspended from the name were three pretty baskets of red and blue asters and sweet peas. The border in the lattice work was covered with Crimson Ramblers. The display consisted of palms and ferns for the background, large receptacles filled with carnations of every description grown by Mr. Haines, rubber plants, cannas just turning into bloom, fuchsias, maidenhair ferns, coleus, Rex begonias and gloxinias, the latter being so arranged as to show the rich purple and red colors to perfection. Nasturtium vines in full bloom were trailed along the front edge of the display, surmounted by Crimson Ramblers. Mr. Haines received hearty congratulations for his fine exhibit.

Mr. Fries had a display which was greatly admired. It consisted largely of fine specimens of palms, for which the Fries greenhouses are noted. These formed a pleasing background. Studded in front of the palm banks were rubber plants, variegated begonias and araucarias, and other potted plants. Very few flowering plants were in the exhibit, as the display was entered in competition for potted plants. The exhibit took up two large sections.

HOUSE DECORATING.

Flowers for the Table.

I will now cite a few different ideas that you can work from in table decorating.

There are as many ways of decorating a table for a wedding, a reception, party, dinner, etc., as there are tables in this country. Not that every decoration is different in the main idea, but the details are carried out a little differently.

When you decorate an open fireplace you usually do so because it is not in use and you want to cover the unsightly appearance of the opening, but when you are called upon to decorate a table the idea is not to hide the table, but to make it still more attractive, and this you do not do by crowding it with a large centerpiece or a number of small ones.

The artist must also consider the taste of the people to whom he is catering. A beautifully arranged centerpiece of valley would hardly appeal to the poorer, less educated classes. A large, showy piece of some sort will make more of a hit with them.

The color of the decorations in the dining-room should also come in for consideration. Some time ago I was called upon to decorate a table in a rather small dining-room, where the wallpaper was a decided yellow. Using a low vase with a large, flaring opening, I arranged in it a loose bouquet of spiræa and yellow iris. This produced a pretty effect, but purple iris would have killed the whole business.

A florist who wants to do decorating must carry an assortment of vases. Not necessarily a large assortment at first, or cut glass vases, but a variety to pick from. You will often be called upon to furnish your own vases. Whether to make a charge for this, is a question. Unless the vase should be broken, I would not charge anything for the use of it.

If you have a long table or rather a good sized table to decorate, and you do not wish to make a large centerpiece, a pretty plan is to make a small centerpiece or have a vase of flowers in the center and then have some quite small vases of flowers to correspond, near the corners of the table.

Smilax or other green run from the chandelier to the corners of a table is usually more of a nuisance than a decoration. I never can see any sense in tying the table to the chandelier, and that is just what you do in the above case.

When the guests are to be seated, be sure to keep your center decoration low enough to be seen across without stretching one's neck. When working in a very high room and on a large table, you may use a tall, slender vase and have the flowers arranged at the top so as to leave the view of the guests unobstructed and at the same time fill out the room.

Baskets always look well on a table when they are not too large. They may be either of a low type or a pretty handle basket.

Palms or small Scottii ferns, with the pots nicely covered, will trim the tables for a large banquet nicely where the expense is not to be too great.

With the above few hints and a few original ideas of his own, even the beginner should be able to turn out some pretty fair work. As in all other work, it takes much experience to become really proficient in our art.

STANDING WREATH.

The Elks of Michigan recently held a convention at Kalamazoo. Harry Fisher, who runs a flower store in that town, is a member of the order and sent his best wishes with a "Welcome" wreath, shown in the accompanying illustration. It was made entirely of white carnations, save for the lettering, "Welcome, Brother Elks," and was so highly appreciated that the convention adopted resolutions of thanks and while in town bought their flowers of Mr. Fisher.

FOX'S UPTOWN SHOP.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of the uptown shop, Fox's, at Twenty-first and Columbia avenue, Philadelphia. You want to know whether Fox's uptown shop bears any relation to the Sign of the Rose in the heart of Philadelphia? Yes; they are both owned and operated by Charles Henry Fox. As the Sign of the Rose expresses Mr. Fox's artistic ideas, so Fox's flower shop expresses his commercial ideas.

Charles Henry Fox established his florists' business at Twenty-first and Columbia avenue many years before he opened the Sign of the Rose. His idea in the first named shop was purely a commercial one. Plants were bought in quantity and sold at a good profit, but for what seemed to the purchaser to be a low price for cash. The customers were largely made up of the working classes, who came in the evening, read the price on the tags and paid for and carried off their purchases, saving much expense in bookkeeping and delivery. At that time it was the fashion to have bargain sales. Plants were offered at odd figured prices, somewhat as it was done in the department stores. Today, however, people have become tired of bargain sales and odd figured offers. The special sale is now popular, a plant usually offered at $1 being sold at 75 cents, and occasionally 50 cents, prices made possible by a retailer's purchase in quantity.

In the same way funeral designs are made up at popular prices. Those who desire a small or inexpensive design are satisfied by the wreaths, crosses, etc., shown them at Fox's. The conditions in the flower market have made it possible to buy short-stemmed flowers at low prices, and these flowers are quite as satisfactory in many funeral designs as higher grade stock and can be offered profitably at far lower prices.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Fox, the REVIEW will publish a series of photographs of funeral designs. The photographs, copyrighted by Mr. Fox, were taken from his original work, and will later be used in an album. We hope that they will interest our readers and perhaps be an inspiration for some of them to further advance in artistic work.

FREIGHT RATES.

On Greenhouse Material.

The John C. Moninger Co. has filed a petition with the Western Classification Committee, seeking a change in classification which will effect a reduction in the freight on greenhouse materials. In part they say:

"To points in western trunk line territory, and to points west of this territory, we have found by experience where we have been obliged, in making up carloads, to apply the L. C. L. rates of second class on the common unglazed sash, the L. C. L. rates of third class on the common pine moldings and the L. C. L. fourth class rates on balance of the list, that it makes shipping prohibitory, resulting frequently in loss of sales by us and loss of revenue by the transportation lines. To all these points we cannot successfully ship and compete with local dealers and the result follows that the man who is going to put up greenhouses builds them with locally improvised materials on which interested lines did not get a revenue or handle as freight. Far western points cannot be reached, as they use cedar, fir and other local woods for the houses, having the material made by local planing mills, whereas with a fifth class rate we could get the business. Our class of goods are the goods that the greenhouse man wants for his houses and if it were not for the excessive freight charges he would buy them rather than put up something inferior in construction and in quality of materials used. A fifth class rating on greenhouse materials would result in increased tonnage for the railroad lines and would tend to educate the people in the territory mentioned toward buying goods in this market. It would lessen their dependence on local industries that are not equipped to furnish the goods that a man wants, but which he is forced to buy on account of the excessive tariff on this class of goods. The application of a fifth class rate would enlarge our business, along with the business of several other firms in this market who are making and selling the same class of material.

"We give here two specific cases where shipments were made and these will show at a glance the difference between shipping as mentioned in the first part of this letter and shipping under the official classification.

"A carload of greenhouse materials made up as follows is to be shipped to Denver, Colo.:

| | Rate. |
|---|---|
| Lumber, 10,000 lbs | $ .97 |
| Molding, 3,000 lbs | 1.25 |
| Sash, 600 lbs | 1.65 |

| Glass, 10,500 lbs | .97 |
| Putty, 500 lbs | .97 |
| Pipe, 1,250 lbs | .97 |

OBITUARY.

Alexander Wallace.

The death of Alexander Wallace from heart disease June 17 at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., came as a great shock to the trade, for there were few members of the profession who had a wider personal acquaintance or who were held in higher esteem.

Mr. Wallace was born at Laurencekirk, Kincardineshire, Scotland, November 21, 1859. His early life was one of struggle against circumstances which would have daunted one less indomitable. At 3 years of age he was left an orphan and until he was 15 the kindliness of John Keppie, the village schoolmaster, was almost the only bright spot in his existence.

Mr. Wallace's first employment was with the Caledonian railroad and it was while in railroad employ in London that he acquired the mastery of shorthand, which proved of such great value to him in later years. At various times he was secretary to Thomas Thornton, an attorney at Dundee, in whose service he became well grounded in the principles of law.

Mr. Wallace made a first trip to America in 1882, but it was not until 1888 that he came to this country to make his home. Shortly after his arrival here he entered the employ of A. T. De La Mare, who at that time was conducting a printing office in New York city and had just started the publication of the Florists' Exchange. Mr. Wallace was without experience of horticulture or knowledge of the printing trade, but Mr. De La Mare's keen insight caused him to appreciate that here was a man more than ordinarily well equipped mentally and by nature for the work in hand. In the early days it was a case of every man turning to whatever most needed doing, but as the publication developed and a division of responsibilities became necessary, the editorial management devolved on Mr. Wallace and he more than justified Mr. De La Mare's early estimate of his character and abilities. Mr. Wallace grew with his work; for twenty years he applied himself to his duties and turned out a better and better product. He was endowed with a more than ordinarily retentive memory. All that he saw, or heard, or read was his for future reference, and as a reporter his work was of most painstaking and thorough character. He was possessed of a rare power of analysis, and it was his habit to go to the bottom of every subject before arriving at a conclusion. Under his editorial direction the Florists' Exchange early assumed a place high in the regard of the trade—an advocate of clean, sane, safe, conservative policies and enterprising in the gathering and dissemination of trade news. In his editorial labors Mr. Wallace performed inestimable service for horticulture, for, with his fingers on the pulse of things horticultural, his voice was early lifted in warning or encouragement, as the case might be. He was deeply studious by nature and his judgment, slowly formed, was rarely at fault.

Aside from Mr. Wallace's work in the office he found time for much other literary labor. The work by which he will no doubt be longest known is the volume entitled "The Heather in Lore, Lyric and Lay," published in 1903. This work was the result of several years of patient research through the great libraries of the world and is an exposition of the history of Scotland's flower, including all the literature, in both poetry and prose, which an exhaustive search revealed. He had an uncompleted volume entitled "Favorite Flowers of Robert Burns." Last year Mr. Wallace contributed a paper entitled "What Scotsmen Have Done for Horticulture in America" at the request of the Scottish Horticultural Association, which received an enthusiastic reception when presented before that body and which was widely circulated in the British horticultural press. Mr. Wallace was the author of the New York Florists' Club's souvenir book in 1900, published at the time of the S. A. F.

Alexander Wallace.

convention, and his work in the editing of the textbooks published by the De La Mare Co. has been of the highest character.

Mr. Wallace was a member of the S. A. F. and was appointed a member of its board of directors by Patrick O'Mara. He also was a member of the American Carnation Society, the American Rose Society and the New York Florists' Club. At the meetings of the latter he always was a prominent figure, both in the deliberate affairs of the organization and in its social life, for he was possessed of a rare voice and delighted the members with his rendition of the Scottish ballads, which were his favorites.

Mr. Wallace married Miss Rachel Marion Banta in 1893 and their home in Brooklyn was the brightest spot in all the world to him.

Of kindly, genial disposition, and with the faculty for remembering names and faces, Mr. Wallace gained a wide personal acquaintance in the trade and of the many who took pleasure in the grasp of his hand there is not one who will not feel that he personally shares in the great loss which has come upon his wife and his business associates.

Carl Anderson.

Carl Anderson, chief gardener at the Mountain Branch Soldiers' Home, near Chattanooga, Tenn., died June 12, having been operated on for appendicitis. A wife survives him. Mr. Anderson was 43 years of age. He had charge of the laying out of the grounds of the Mountain Branch Soldiers' Home and planting of trees, shrubbery, flowers, etc. He transformed the place from a gully-washed briar patch to as lovely a spot as can be found.

M. Cavanaugh.

The many members of the trade who have visited the establishment of the Robert Craig Co. at Forty-ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia, will regret to learn of the death of M. Cavanaugh, an old-time employee whose courtesy to visitors caused him to be widely known.

Allister David Rose.

Allister David Rose, 44 years old, died June 16, after a long illness, at his home, 116 Orange road, Montclair, N. J. Mr. Rose was born in Scotland, but came to America when a boy. He removed to Montclair nine years ago, where he engaged in business as a florist. He was a member of the Society of American Florists, of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, and was also a Mason and an Elk. He was a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Rose is survived by a widow and three daughters.

John Cammack.

John Cammack died at his residence, 2553 Brightwood avenue, Washington, D. C., June 15.

Mr. Cammack was born in Washington 75 years ago, and had lived there ever since. When a young man he engaged in the florists' business and followed it for years. He was a director of the Columbian National Bank and of the Washington Loan and Trust Co. He was also prominently connected with the Washington Railway and Electric Co., the Franklin Fire Insurance Co., the Columbia Title Insurance Co. and the Real Estate Title Insurance Co.

He is survived by his wife and two children, a son and a daughter. The daughter is Mrs. Anna Hardisty, of Washington, and the son is John Edmund Cammack, who is attending a college at Emmitsburg, Md.

Mr. Cammack was a member of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association.

Emanuel Hippard.

Emanuel Hippard, for many years a prominent member of the trade in Youngstown, O., died of paralysis June 16, in his home at 103 West Rayen avenue, in that city. He had been ill for more than a year, and during the last few days of his life he had suffered intensely. He was stricken in Jacksonville, Fla., six weeks before his death, while returning to Youngstown from a trip to Cuba. He was taken home a short time later in a serious condition, from which he never rallied.

Mr. Hippard's death had been expected for some time by the family and immediate friends; nevertheless, when the end came, it was a distinct shock.

Emanuel Hippard was born in Elizabethtown, Pa., August 6, 1845, and at the time of his death was nearly 63 years old. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having served in both the army and navy. He served in Co. G, 1st Pennsylvania Militia, and was a member of Tod Post, G. A. R.

For three years Mr. Hippard served as a sailor on the Wachusett, in the Union navy. He served in the 20th regiment,

Co. G, Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, from January 26, 1864, to July 13, 1865, when he received an honorable discharge.

November 4, 1866, he married Miss Katherine Auchenback, and one daughter was born, Mrs. C. J. Little.

Mr. Hippard removed to Youngstown February 28, 1882, and immediately began a business career which marked him as a man of ability in many lines. Shortly after his arrival there he purchased the property in West Rayen avenue, where the family now resides, and erected thereon a number of greenhouses. Later he constructed the large building now owned by Dr. Booth and opened a flower store. For ten years he conducted these enterprises jointly, with credit to himself and to the city.

About this time he purchased the farm where the greenhouses of John Walker are now located. These greenhouses were built by Mr. Hippard and conducted by him until a few years ago, when he disposed of them to Mr. Walker. A short time after establishing the plant at Crab Creek he opened in Federal street, in the room now occupied by the Templin Co., a second flower store. This was operated by Mr. Hippard for some time.

In recent years, Mr. Hippard had been engaged in the manufacture of a greenhouse ventilator, which he himself had invented and patented. The ventilator was manufactured in a small factory at the rear of his home, and he also was patentee of the Duplex greenhouse gutter and other greenhouse equipment.

About one year ago Mr. Hippard suffered two slight strokes of paralysis, and soon afterward he suffered a severe stroke. He was taken to a Cleveland hospital, and after leaving that institution his health appeared to be much better.

January 1, accompanied by his wife, he went to Cuba and Florida to spend the winter, hoping thereby to benefit his health, which was again beginning to fail.

After spending several weeks in Cuba and visiting many points of interest, they returned to Florida and were proceeding by short journeys toward home.

At Jacksonville, Fla., he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, and was taken to a hospital, where he remained until he recovered sufficient strength to continue the journey. After arriving home he rallied and for several days appeared to be recovering. A few weeks later his condition was pronounced serious.

Mr. Hippard is survived by his wife and one daughter. The latter is Mrs. C. J. Little, of Youngstown. The sympathy of many friends and neighbors is extended to the sorrowing relatives.

In his business relations Mr. Hippard was always a man of honor and was highly regarded. His word was good whenever it was given. He was prominent in many business enterprises besides those mentioned. The local lodge of Elks numbered him among its members. In this order he was the Second Exalted Ruler of Youngstown lodge. He was also connected with the grand lodge and was one of the oldest members of the order in the city. In the trade societies he always was active until failing health overtook him.

In his home life Mr. Hippard is described by those who knew him best as being ideal in his relations. He was generous, kind and considerate, and always strove to make those about him happy.

THE TRADE IN INSECTICIDES.

As Affected by the Proposed Law.

On Thursday, June 18, beginning at 10 a. m., there was an all-day session held in the American Institute building, West Forty-fourth street, New York city, by manufacturers, representatives of the entomologists, and some of the leading chemists who have charge of the state control of the insecticide laws, for the discussion of Senate Bill 6515 and House of Representatives Bill 21316, entitled "A bill for preventing the manufacture, sale or importation of adulterated or misbranded fungicides, Paris greens, lead arsenates and other insecticides, and for regulating traffic therein and for other purposes."

There were about forty persons present, and all business commenced promptly.

E. Hippard.

The Senate Bill and the House of Representatives Bill are the same, excepting that in section 7 there is a fourth clause added to the House of Representatives Bill, which was amended. Section by section was taken up. The bill appears to be promulgated by those connected with the Agricultural Department.

The first section provides that any violation is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not to exceed $500 or one year's imprisonment, or both, and if brought up on a second count, the fine is doubled, with the imprisonment clause in the discretion of the court. This section was adopted. Sections 3 and 4, the same.

Section 4, which provides for the examination of specimens of fungicides, Paris greens, lead arsenates and other insecticides, called for discussion looking for enlightenment. Under section 4 a motion was made to insert the word willfully (willfully violated), but the entomologists and representatives of the Department voted against that. In section 5 a discussion arose as to who should have the authority to start prosecutions, and a clause, "under authority of the Secretary of Agriculture," was inserted, so as to make it plain that in the national bill there was some head to its enforcement and not leave the initiative to any director of experiment stations or agent of any state, or the District of Columbia.

Sections 6 and 7 caused the most discussion. The intent of the promoters of the bill seems to be to concentrate unquestioned authority of oversight in the hands of the Department of Agriculture, and the manufacturers brought up various questions, all of which were fairly and frankly considered.

In section 6 the words "man or other animals" were stricken out, so as to confine the section to its legitimate purpose, that of affecting insecticides used upon vegetation. There was also a definition added, to the effect that the term "miscible oils" shall include all preparations of petroleum to be used in water. In section 7, after some discussion in which the actual work of the manufacturing chemist is compared with the laboratory chemist's small tests, the amount of arsenious oxide, $As_2O5$, was made fifty per cent instead of fifty-five per cent. The standard of lead arsenates is one of the things which are indefinite. There is a variation in the actual working of these things, from the commercial basis, where they are sent out literally by the tons. The question of making a commercial article match a chemically pure preparation for a special test, the quantity of water permissible, the actual working conditions of transportation, the evaporation of water by a leaky package—that is to say, the real "work-a-day" conditions, which all commercial articles are subject to, were talked over, as affecting any penalty, and the result of the talk was apparently some enlightenment. There was an expression of opinion by the professional entomologists that no construction was wished, nor the insertion of anything in the bill, which could in any way hamper fair trade.

The fourth division of the House Bill reads: "Any article which is intended for use on vegetation and shall contain any substance or substances, which, although destroying, repelling or mitigating insects, shall be injurious to such vegetation." This clause, which is not in the Senate Bill, was taken up, as it is a trap which might be used to the great annoyance and harm of anyone, for there are no substances commonly used but what, if a small overdose is used, will destroy vegetation, and as the paragraph read there was no explanation as to its construction.

To qualify this paragraph, the words, "by following the directions expressed upon the package," were added. With this amendment the section was adopted.

A question arose in regard to selling in foreign countries—that while the consular service of the United States was endeavoring to increase foreign trade, the demands of foreigners, which may call for something entirely different from what is used in this country, should not in any way be restricted.

A motion was made that the bill as amended, according to the secretary's notes, be adopted, and the same was carried.

A resolution was offered on the part of the manufacturers, to the effect that they thank the gentlemen in charge of this meeting, E. Dwight Sanderson, of Durham, N. H., and Prof. Smith, of New Brunswick, N. J., for inviting them to be present. BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Extreme summer heat seemed to have a good effect on business last week; at least, there seemed to be more life in the business than for some weeks. Many of the growers are now throwing out their plants, preparatory to getting ready for replanting. The result has been a general shortening up along all lines. This, with several weddings and commencements, kept everyone on the jump trying to get enough good stock for the orders.

The result of this was shown in the face of the commission man. Instead of hunting customers, they were hunting him, and in cases where he had taken advance orders he was doing a little hunting himself. But the rush was only for a day or two and things seem to have settled now for a regular summer grind; at least, that is the opinion of most of the trade.

Various Notes.

The vacation time is now here and a number of the boys have already started away. Some are fishing and camping. Others will visit other cities, to see the sights.

Hoo-Hoo.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The last week has been a somewhat strenuous one for most of the retailers and the commission houses as well. Carnations have been plentiful, but there has been a remarkable scarcity of roses, mainly of pink. The graduating exercises in the schools created a demand, such as the supply could by no means meet. Besides roses, there was a big demand for sweet peas, peonies, Beauties, iris, and, in fact, every available flower. The local commission houses report one of the best weeks in their history. A large quantity of greens has also been used up.

There seems to be little doing in the wedding line.

Various Notes.

C. W. Ward, passing through, participated in a fairly well attended meeting of the club June 17. Mr. Ward entertained the members present with a talk on various subjects.

Just what Fred Pautke had on for June 23, at Grosse Pointe, could not be learned, but it must have been a pretty respectable decoration, judging from the way he was buying roses, peonies, etc.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week's experience served to show the possibilities which underlie the market if things only would get the right swing and keep it. Every now and then there come a few days when conditions seem like old times, and with the quantity of stock now available a big total is run up without any special change in prices. At the first of last week the volume of business increased and it held until well toward the end of the week, with the result that many wholesalers reported an increase as compared with the same week last year—and a good many of them have not been able to report an increase for quite a few weeks. In some cases the increase was large, because stock is abundant and, when there is a legitimate outlet for it, it totals a big sum of money. The trouble has been all along that the legitimate demand took only a small part of the stock and the greater part of the receipts had to be cleared through the medium of job-lot sales.

Several wholesalers have called attention to the marked effect of weather changes, for it has been more noticeable this June than usual that cool days would bring a run of business, which would be shut off completely when the weather turned hot again. Of course the weddings and school closings have called for most of the flowers shipped out of this market, but in cool weather the weddings and commencements are accompanied by other social events calling for flowers, while these are shut off completely and there is nothing left but funeral work when the thermometer registers 90 degrees in the shade.

Monday, June 22, was the hottest June day the weather office has recorded in many years; it was 92 degrees up at the top of the post-office dome, and 96 degrees on the street. It was but natural that business dwindled away to almost nothing, but cool weather is predicted for the end of the week and revival of demand will follow.

Supplies are not as great as they have been, though they still are large in many lines. Beauties are abundant, but not many can be classed as good. The best are selling well and the poorest hardly at all. The supply of summer roses is and will be greater this year than last. Summer business steadily has been increasing and more and more growers are catering to it. Aside from the roses grown specially for summer cutting, receipts now are light, for most growers either are replanting or drying off. There is a first-class call for Kaiserin.

There are some excellent carnations, considering the season and the unseasonably hot weather. In fact, carnations average of better quality than they did earlier in the season, for the houses of poor stock have been thrown out. Prices, however, are low.

Peonies are selling well if good, because they are about the best flower now obtainable. The stock stored by the inexperienced people goes at the buyer's price, and on the 90-degree days the people who use this class of material would not even make an offer.

Candidum lilies have come from Michigan to further depress the market for Easter lilies. Valley, which has been in strong demand, is again abundant. Sweet peas are plentiful, but with short stems, and are badly affected by the heat; they are poor sale. Gladioli, daisies, Canterbury bells and other outdoor flowers are abundant and cheap. Green goods are moving fairly well.

Beginning July 1, all the wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m. daily.

A Large Funeral.

The largest funeral held in Chicago in some years was that of Gil W. Barnard, June 21. He was said to have been the best known Mason in the world and the funeral services at Medinah Temple were attended by thousands of members of the order; 1,000 knights in uniform escorted the body to the grave and there were 200 carriages following the hearse.

Naturally the showing of flowers was one of the largest ever seen in Chicago. W. J. Smyth had several of the largest orders, from the Masonic bodies, but all the leading retailers were represented by designs at the Temple.

Hildred's Store Changes Hands.

June 23 H. S. Morton sold the A. Hildred store at 3030 Indiana avenue to J. B. Opitz, who took possession immediately.

Mr. Morton has been in St. Bernard's hospital for a month and the doctors tell him he must have a change of climate. His first store was at 96 East Thirty-first street. This he will leave in charge of his sister. He also has a greenhouse establishment at Rockford, Ill., and, after spending a few days there, will go west for an indefinite stay for his health. J. B. Opitz is the successor to Phillips & Opitz, who bought out Mr. Morton's brother, Charles E. Morton, at 3626 Cottage Grove avenue. Since buying out his partner, Mr. Opitz has started another place, on Cottage Grove, opposite Oakwoods cemetery, so that he now has three establishments.

The Picnic.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual picnic of the Florists' Club, at Morton Grove, July 19. Trains leave the Union depot, Canal and Adams streets, at 9:30 a. m. and 12:40 p. m. Round trip tickets are $1, which includes admission to the grove. Children under 16 years of age, 35 cents. General admission to the grove for those who come in their own conveyances is 50 cents. Tickets may be had of any of the wholesalers.

many visitors. Among those who called at the REVIEW office the first of this week were: C. W. Eichling, New Orleans, who has a son, Phil, employed with H. C. Rowe, in the Palmer House; J. F. Rosenfield, peony specialist from West Point, Neb., who once lived in Chicago and now has three brothers here; H. G. Fleming, of Fairmont, W. Va., who is visiting relatives at Waukegan; A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., who is on his way home from California and who is stopping to visit the growers who are using his sweet pea seed.

Various Notes.

There are a good many geraniums around town, stock that was not ready at the time it was wanted; in May, when nearly everyone was short of geraniums in bloom.

Klehm's Nurseries are reported to have ordered a large quantity of stock of the peony M. Jules Elie for growing for cut flowers.

The Sprague-Smith Co. states that growers who need glass for repairs, etc., will be making no mistake if they pick it up right away. Factories are closing, but there are good stocks of greenhouse sizes still on hand. There may be no immediate advance, but there is almost no prospect of any further decline.

The W. W. Barnard Co. is contributing considerably to the supply of peonies, but is doing its own selling from store to store, as is done with florists' supplies.

Bassett & Washburn have 5,000 pots in the present crop of giganteum lilies. They are giving more than three flowers each plant and are coming along rapidly. There is another crop started for July.

C. M. Dickinson, at Hunt's, says the growers are now taking hold of the Wittbold bench in good shape. The sales of the clamp for erecting the molds, which is the patented feature, are now quite heavy.

Peter Reinberg has demolished the boiler shed just back of his residence and is extending the greenhouses to occupy the space. The heating of this range will hereafter be done from the boilers at the next stack south, giving him one less boiler plant to operate.

R. Mayer, who is operating the Reissig greenhouses at Riverside, will entertain the entire staff of the A. L. Randall Co., with their families, at his place Sunday, June 28.

George Reinberg expresses himself as well pleased with the June business. He has had a good cut from Moulton, Richmond and Killarney and is now getting quite a lot of Beauties.

Wietor Bros. have begun to cut from their young Beauties.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. says that June 22 the thermometer registered higher in its store than it ever has before. It was 87 degrees under the midday sun; 96 on the street.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is handling large quantities of first-class summer Beauties.

John Zech says he thinks the florists can all afford to take a day off and that the club's picnic ought to be on a week day.

Weiland & Risch have a new red seedling rose from which they now are cutting a few dozen flowers a day. The only apparent trouble is mildew on the foliage and they think they have a good thing in it.

August Poehlmann says that Cardinal, Mrs. Palmer and Killarney have done excellently during the recent hot weather. John Poehlmann says city business is quiet, but that shipping trade has been first-class all through June.

The George Wittbold Co. has been turning out some unique funeral work. Some fine wreaths have been made of Canterbury bells, odd but pleasing.

A funeral wending its way to Oakwoods June 21 attracted special attention because on the roof of the pall-bearers' van there was a fire department hose wagon, reproduced in red carnations. It was too big to go in any carriage, so they tied it on top of the bus.

That prince of good fellows, John Steinmetz, salesman for the W. W. Barnard Co., is enjoying a well earned vacation. He has gone fishing. Took his family along, so they can all sit under a shady tree and enjoy the rural scenery.

E. C. Amling says he is surprised day after day at the way the sales foot up. The demand is not strong, stock is of hot weather quality and prices are low, but he says sales foot up a much better figure than one would expect from the listlessness of the buyers.

Vaughan & Sperry are figuring on shortly adding to their space in the Flower Growers' market. They look for a good season next fall.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has had several large orders for daisies this week, for wedding decorations.

The E. F. Winterson Co. says the Massachusetts fern men do not seem to realize that nothing but their best stock can be sold in this market in competition with the Michigan stock.

The supply dealers will now proceed to have their pre-inventory clearing sales.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week was one of warm summer weather and regular summer business. But it was good summer business, at that. There was a good demand, and the supply was just about equal to it, with the exception of a few varieties of flowers. Sweet peas were in heavy supply, and the demand was not large enough to move even a good proportion of them. The price was away down in consequence, and scarcely enough was realized on them to pay for the trouble of picking. With the possible exception of such outdoor flowers as feverfew, candytuft, etc., there were no other oversupplies, but things were nicely balanced. Lily of the valley had quite a run, and several good orders had to be turned down. Longiflorum lilies were also good property and sold out well. Candidum lilies were in good supply and sold out well.

A few cold storage peonies are still coming in, but they are not keeping well this year. They bloomed in too hot a spell of weather this year, and they drop about as soon as you take them out of storage. Carnations are on their last legs, and what stock does come in is poor. A few more days and they will be a thing of the past till next fall, and when their quality is as poor as it is at present, we are glad to see the last of them. Roses, too, are sick looking, and those that are free of mildew are so small and pop open so quickly that they are not worth much. Beauties are still good, but even when cut very tight they hardly keep over night.

We are well stocked with green goods now. Smilax, Sprengeri and asparagus are in good supply. New ferns are coming from all directions. The Michigan and eastern ones are in and are of good quality.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the directors of the Florists' Society was held June 22. Owing to lack of interest among the members, the society did not do anything last winter. It had become just about impossible to get the members to come to the meetings, but now, with the approaching of the S. A. F., it was decided to try to stir things up and see if some interest could not be instilled into it again. Also, it has been the intention all along to extend to the S. A. F. an invitation to meet in this city on that society's twenty-fifth anniversary, which will be next summer. In order to carry out these plans, and make it possible for the florists of this city to entertain the S. A. F. in a manner befitting the dignity of the society, it was decided to collaborate with the Cincinnati League, an organization of business men of this city who make it their business to bring conventions to this city. From present indications it would appear that everything will move forward smoothly, and that Cincinnati will be in the field at Niagara Falls in August with a pressing invitation for the S. A. F. to meet in this city in 1909. The florists here appreciate the fact that the central location of Cincinnati will tend to make the meeting held here the greatest ever held by the society, and they want to take steps to insure every visitor having the time of his life and returning home with words of praise for Cincinnati and the Cincinnati florists.

The Market.

Conditions showed some improvement last week, thanks largely to school graduations and other exercises. Demand is now lighter and while prices have risen slightly from their lowest level, this is due more to reduced supplies than to increased demand. Roses are much more scarce; in fact, beyond some good Kaiserin and Carnot there are few decent flowers coming in. Prices on these show a little advance. Some good outdoor hybrids are still coming in, but with a continuation of the hot, dry weather, their season will soon end. Carnations are now small and poor. Some growers are sending in few, being preparing for their new crop. Peonies are about over. The late flowers have sold well, but the main crop varieties brought poor prices. Some good M. Jules Elie made $1.50 per dozen.

There are now plenty of outdoor sweet peas of good quality. Demand for valley, which has been fairly good, is now falling off. Several growers started bringing in asters last week. These, although small and short-stemmed, made $1 per hundred. For other flowers demand is limited. For window displays a good many gladioli and nymphæa are now being used.

Rose and Strawberry Show.

It taxed the resources of the main exhibition hall and one of the smaller halls to hold the exhibits June 20 and 21. Although only one class was provided for roses, there was a big display of these flowers. M. H. Walsh had over 600 fine blooms and took first and third for the best general display. W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen gardener, was second. Mr. Walsh had quantities of fine flowers of Frau Karl Druschki, Margaret Dickson, Ulrich Brunner, Mme. Gabriel Luizet and many other good varieties. There were also large rose displays from W. A. Riggs, J. G. Wright, Colonel Frederick Mason, E. L. Lewis gardener; W. A. L. Bazeley, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, George Page gardener; Mrs. E. M. Gill and others. T. C. Thurlow & Co. had a fine collection of peonies, a display of these also coming from George Hollis.

For fifteen bottles Campanula medium, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, was first, followed by William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener. For collection of delphiniums, the two preceding exhibitors changed places. Blue Hill Nurseries once more captured both first and second prizes for collection of thirty varieties of herbaceous plants with a grand collection. They also showed a large table of Campanula persicifolia humosa with double blue flowers, as good a variety as the white Moerheimi, awarded a first-class certificate. F. J. Rea had a large collection of perennials and several seedling roses. One named Ruby King received honorable mention. Farquhar & Co. received a bronze medal for an extensive display of Spanish iris. They also had a large collection of herbaceous plants, digitalis, peonies, sweet williams, etc. Bellevue Greenhouses, West Roxbury, A. E. Poetsch manager, showed a good collection of herbaceous flowers.

E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener, had a table of cattleyas. Mr. Ayer had fuchsias and allamandas; Harvard Botanic Gardens, Robert Cameron gardener, two excellently arranged tanks of aquatics.

The display of strawberries was the finest seen in Boston for years. In the class calling for four quarts of any variety the Theodore Lyman prizes went as follows: H. L. Crane, first with Barrymore; H. A. Clark, second with Marshall; George V. Fletcher, third with Golden Gate; Mrs. J. C. Philipps, fourth with Marshall; S. H. Warren, fifth with Golden Gate. For fifteen baskets, two quarts in each, George F. Wheeler, George V. Fletcher and F. E. Coburn were winners. For best new variety, Wilfred Wheeler led with Golden Gate. The leading strawberries in the show were Marshall, Golden Gate, Barrymore and Sample. For the first time in twelve years Marshall was beaten by the new variety, Barrymore. Golden Gate showed up grandly in several classes.

William Downs received a first-class certificate for a new forcing tomato of Farquhar & Co.'s introduction. W. J. Clemson had the best collection of vegetables, followed by F. E. Cole.

The next prize exhibition at Horticultural hall occurs July 19 and 20, when ten classes are allotted to sweet peas and a splendid show is assured.

The new schedule for the January and March shows of 1909 is ready. At the show January 16 a silver medal is offered for the best undisseminated carnation. The spring exhibition will last five days, the dates being March 24 and 28. Several hundred dollars more than in former years are offered in prizes and some attractive new classes are added. A silver medal is offered for the best new rose not in commerce. For the best mantel decoration prizes of $50 and a silver gilt medal, $30 and a silver medal and $20 and a bronze medal are offered.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have varied strikingly since last week's report. Wednesday and Thursday, June 17 and 18, were days of excellent demand and limited supply, the unusually cool nights following extremely hot weather reducing the output greatly. The hot weather of the days following last week and the early days of this week increased the supply, the demand falling off.

Beauties from the new planting have made their appearance. The flowers are an improvement on the old stock, but the stems are much shorter. There are still some excellent old crop Beauties to be had. This rose has been in demand, more so than any other.

Valley is the next most popular flower on the list, indicating that the June weddings are not yet over. Sweet peas have also sold well, but the supply has increased to such tremendous proportions as to make the marketing of the whole stock an impossibility. Still, all in all sweet peas have sold as well this June as ever before, and that is saying a great deal. Cattleyas are still fairly plentiful, but the demand has fallen off.

Some good carnations are to be seen, the average prices being much better than two weeks ago, owing more to the cutting off of the played-out stock than to any special demand.

Kaiserin leads the smaller roses, this splendid summer variety being again in full crop. Killarney comes next, with Bride, Maid and Liberty fair in spots only. Richmond is out of the race, until cooler weather. Lilium candidum has been in good supply, and sold well. The home crop is nearly over. Peonies can be had from cold storage. Easter lilies are rather scarce. Asparagus is especially good value in plumosus, but nobody seems to want Sprengeri. Smilax and adiantum are in moderate demand. Steamer sailings are of especial interest to many of our retailers this week.

The Closing of 104.

David Rust, receiver for the William Graham Co., closed the retail flower shop at 104 South Thirteenth street, Tuesday, June 23, at six p. m., not to be reopened. Mr. Rust selected this date in order to fill a large wedding order up the state, which was made up in the store on Tuesday and expressed to its destination. When asked concerning the winding up of the company's affairs, Mr. Rust said that he was gathering all the decorating paraphernalia and other effects of the company at Horticultural hall. When all are brought together he will have them catalogued and announce the date of a public sale. At this sale he will also dispose of the lease of his store at 104 South Thirteenth street, which runs until December 31 of the present year.

The closing of the Graham store marks an epoch in the flower history of this city. For something like a quarter of a century the Graham Co. has leased this store at 104 South Thirteenth street under various names, and carried on the retail and decorating business there, the father and two sons being at different times in the management. Mr. Rust further announced that progress has been made in disposing of the plants at Logan. There are still orchids to be marketed. The Olney place was closed by Mr. Rust some months ago.

have something to tell them shortly. Mr. Conner is always careful not to promise anything he won't do. The something appeared in the announcements under the head of "Various Notes" in the REVIEW, that J. B. Swayne, Kennett Square, would build certain houses, Lord & Burnham material, semi-iron construction. The REVIEW, being much on the alert, sent Phil to Kennett one day last week to investigate. The investigation disclosed four magnificent connecting houses, 28x200 feet each, built in the most approved style. The roofing material is in position, ready for glazing. It further developed on inquiry that these houses were owned and operated by the firm of Swayne & Powell, consisting of J. Bancroft Swayne and Clifford S. Powell. Their location is on the Baltimore Central, one-quarter of a mile from Kennett station, adjoining Mr. Swayne's mushroom-growing and Anglo-American spawn-producing plants. The object of the houses is to produce tomatoes for the eastern markets, with the possibility of mushrooms being added. It is doubtful whether there is a finer tomato-growing range in Chester county today. Mr. Swayne said that the houses would probably be planted about September 1.

The Market.

How can a market worthy of the name exist with a temperature day after day of 90 degrees and over? And yet Saturday and Monday, owing to the lessening of supply, better prices ruled, and, with the possible extra demands of commencement week, may be maintained until July. Beauties were scarce at 25 cents June 21. Brides and Maids advanced to 5 cents and carnations also appreciated, the best of them touching $2 per hundred. The midsummer prices of the June weeks are probably the bottom for the season. The better prices are only for the selected stock. The mildewed roses and the small and sleepy carnations are better kept at home. They only demoralize the market. Many of the street merchants are at the summer resorts. This outlet for any surplus grows smaller weekly.

Peonies are done. Valley is lower. The June weddings are about over. Apart from funeral and steamer trade, there will be nothing in the next two months to awaken the market from its lethargy. The wholesalers will close at 3 p. m. until September. Principals and employees are all planning for much needed change and rest.

Various Notes.

This week Thursday the Plant Growers' Association will enjoy its outing on Staten Island. July 1 the New York Florists' Club picnics at Wetzel's Point, and at the same delightful resort July 16 the Greek-American Association will celebrate its second anniversary, with George D. Nicholas as president and George Cotsonas as secretary.

The Cleary Horticultural Co. and Elliott & Sons wound up the season's auctions Tuesday, June 23, with large sales of palms, ficus, ferns and plants of every kind. Attendance and prices were satisfactory. This has been the most prosperous season these seductive orators have ever known.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, was in the city June 22, conferring with President Traendly on matters of importance concerning the meeting of the S. A. F. at Niagara Falls and the great flower show at Chicago in November. Mr. Traendly offers a cup valued at $100 to the florists' club carrying off the highest honors at bowling in the August competition, and Mr. Kasting says the best eight alleys in Buffalo have already been secured for the contest.

John P. Cleary had a birthday celebration Saturday, June 20, prior to his purchasing trip to Europe early in July.

The Brooklyn Retail Florists' Association held an important meeting Monday evening, June 21, at the Imperial, in that city. The membership of this society is growing rapidly.

Among the fat men much in evidence since the Taft nomination, visiting New York lately, was Edwin Seidewitz, of Baltimore.

Mr. Bolles, of Brooklyn, celebrates next week his seventieth birthday. He traces his genealogy back nearly 300 years.

Henry Luhrs, lieutenant at Myer's, on Madison avenue, and Miss Arabella Eisle, of this city, were married June 24 and the boss decorated for the occasion.

Leo Klein, of Long Island City, was rejoicing June 22 on the arrival of the stork with a son and heir.

B. Rosens, with his family, is spending the summer at his cottage at Rockaway Beach.

A. Warendorff and wife have moved to their home at Averne-by-the-Sea.

The funeral services held at the Washington Street Methodist church, Brooklyn, June 20, in memory of Alexander Wallace, were attended by a large gathering of his relatives and friends. Many of the wholesale and retail florists of New York and Brooklyn evidenced their respect by their presence and by the wealth of floral offerings. The New York Florists' Club and the different horticultural societies, to which Mr. Wallace belonged, all sent beautiful mementos of respect and sorrow. Universal sympathy is felt for Mrs. Wallace in her sudden and great bereavement. The trade has lost one of its brightest lights and

Bowling.

These are the days in New York when recounts are in fashion. Sad days for the mayor and Joseph Manda. The recount for the Traendly transportation makes Manda's average 154 17/18, so he loses the trip by an eyelash. Not to let the generous president escape, however, Fenrich has been coming on in the stretch and with only one game to bowl has an average for seventeen games of over 160. The rest of the club are out of the running because of absence, although Donaldson, Marshall and Schreiner are bowling strong and will doubtless complete the team that represents New York at the national convention. Several Chicago experts visited the club last Friday evening and did themselves and the city proud. Following are the scores June 19:

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was quite active in demand, but stock of all kinds is poor and consignments are growing smaller each day. The fag end of school closings caused most of the demand last week; social work is at its end and from now on we can only depend on funeral work. The weather has at last become hot and the long spell of rains come to an end.

In looking over the wholesale market June 22 we found plenty of Beauties of fair quality. All other roses are poor. Carnations are holding up well, but are becoming scarcer every day. Sweet peas are plentiful, but not of extra good quality. Gladioli are coming in and sell well. Good valley is still to be had. Only a few asters are now in. These should be in plenty soon.

Smilax, ferns of all kinds and plenty of good asparagus are to be had.

bride being the beautiful and accomplished daughter of J. F. Windt, 907 Bayard avenue. The happy couple left the same evening for a honeymoon trip through the east, to be gone two weeks. Both Mr. Osseck and his bride are well known in the trade here, who are with me in extending our congratulations and wishing them much joy and happiness.

The William C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. was incorporated last week, with a capital of $5,000 fully paid up, to carry on the sale of cut flowers at wholesale at 1316 Pine street, St. Louis. The incorporators are William C. Smith, W. H. Osseck and Christian Smith.

The wholesalers gave out their list of players who will compose their ball team June 22, as follows: George Schrefer, p.; Fred Alves, c.; Ed. Gerlach, 1st b.; Joe O'Rourke, 2d b.; L. Shippers, 3d b.; Al Gurnz, s. s.; C. Sanders, Otto Bruning and W. C. Smith, fielders; H. G. Berning, George Angermueller and C. A. Kuehn, subs.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber, their daughter, Tillie, and Linnie Meinhardt left last week for a four weeks' trip through the western states.

Frank Weber and J. W. Schuette, the only local representatives of the nursery trade from here who attended the Milwaukee convention, have returned and report a good time and a well attended meeting.

Theresa Badaracco, who is well known in the retail business here, is taking vocal lessons. Her fine soprano voice will some day be heard in grand opera. Miss Theresa reports a splendid trade during the season just closed.

Adolf Brix reports that he had a good business season, with a great many extra large funeral designs. He will again give a free flower show this fall on a much larger scale than last year. For a short vacation Mr. Brix will take a trip north next month.

The Horticultural Society's executive board, of which C. C. Sanders is chairman, held its regular monthly meeting June 16 at the M. A. C. Club rooms. Business pertaining to the fall show was transacted. As yet the location has not been selected. Chairman Sanders reports the meeting well attended and looks for a successful show this fall. The hall question is about the only hard problem they have to solve.

The Englemann Botanical Club held its regular meeting last week in the Central high school. The club will hold no meetings during the next three months. This meeting was fairly well attended.

The Kohr Floral Co., Oscar Heile and the Diemer Floral Co., all on South Broadway, say they are well satisfied with the business of the season. Design work has been as good as any year.

Around the wholesale district there is a great rivalry as to who is the best pitcher, George Schrefer, of the wholesalers, or Oscar Huetemann, of the retailers. Both are great ball players and the result of the game will hang on them. Both are in great form for the contest July 15.

The Florists' Club's trustees met last week in the office of W. C. Smith & Co., and mapped out a program for the big doings at the club's annual picnic July 15. A special effort will be made by them to have all the retailers as well as all the wholesalers close up shop a half day for this occasion. If this can be accomplished the largest gathering of florists and their employees will be out that day. Among the features will be the ball game and the bowling.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

NOTE there are more than two solid pages of European advertisements in this week's REVIEW.

HENRY W. WOOD will invite the Seed Trade convention to come to Richmond, Va., next year.

THE crop inspectors have been afield in the Michigan pea district for a week or more. The usual amount of roguing has been necessary, but conditions generally have been normal.

IT is reported that in the San Juan district of California sweet pea crops are not so short as in the sections further north. There are some sweet peas for seed at Los Angeles, but these, too, are poor.

THE radish seed crops in Michigan are making favorable progress. The high prices of the past season stimulated the planting of a good acreage and the prospect is for a much larger production than last season.

M. H. DURYEA states that the following members of the New York Produce Exchange have just been appointed by the president to serve on the committee on seeds for the ensuing year: Wm. Jacot, Marshall H. Duryea, Ernest Wehncke, O. W. F. Randolph, and Chas. Wimmer.

THE onion-set acreage at Chicago is short of last year's; one large grower particularly failed to get in as much seed as was contemplated, because the ground was too wet to plant until the date was so late as to make the crop doubtful. The weather conditions lately have been favorable and good growth has been made, in many cases overcoming already the lateness of the start. Generally speaking, prospects are good on the acreage planted. Reports from Louisville are of a normal acreage and crops doing well.

A. C. ZVOLANEK, Bound Brook, N. J., is en route home after spending a fortnight in the sweet pea districts of California. His specialty is a strain of sweet peas for early flowering under glass and he says that his orders for August delivery considerably exceed those of last year, especially from Europe. Last year he placed his stock seed all with one grower in California and got caught by the crop failure, so this year he gave several growers a part of the stock seed. Personal inspection has shown him that sweet peas are a decided short crop on the coast, but that several growers have some scattered lots that are turning out better than the average, and Mr. Zvolanek says he expects more seed from his stock than he got last year.

THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

A Successful Meeting.

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association is in session at the Hotel Pontchartrain at Detroit this week. The attendance is fair and close attention is being given at the meetings, although the weather on the opening day was uncomfortably hot.

Following time honored custom, the visitors were given an official welcome to the city, by Comptroller Frank E. Doremus. The address of President George S. Green reviewed the history of the last year. He referred briefly to the general conditions of the year and the work of the association, with a brief account of the effort to secure a modification of the so-called pure seed bill introduced in congress by Mr. Mann, with the details of which the trade already had been acquainted. The address showed that Mr. Green had put much thought on the situation and its discussion was postponed to an hour when it could be gone into more thoroughly than was possible so early in the session.

The report of Secretary Kendel showed a membership of 155. Receipts for the year were $2,019.44 and expenditures $1,036, balance $983.44.

Committee Reports.

The committee on the revision of the telegraph code was authorized to add to its membership representative men of the grass, flower and vegetable seed interests and proceed with the revision of the present code, or to prepare an entirely new one. M. H. Duryea is chairman.

Charles N. Page made a report on postal affairs and on motion of Mr. Wood the committee was instructed to draw up suitable resolutions setting forth the association's views in regard to a reasonable parcels post, Mr. Page to remain chairman of this committee.

Mr. Burpee's report as delegate to the National Board of Trade was ordered printed in the annual report.

The report of the committee on experiment stations referred to the published report of the Department of Agriculture.

The report of the delegate to the National Council of Horticulture was read by Secretary Kendel and a report of J. H. Burdett, the council's press representative, also was presented. On motion of Mr. Kendel an appropriation of $200 was made for the work next year.

Action on Presieent's Recommendations.

On Wednesday the committee on president's address reported as follows: On the recommendation to discontinue the committee on weights and measures, while we sympathize with the feeling which prompts the recommendation, yet in hopes that a solution of the problem may be found we advise continuing this as one of the standing committees to be appointed by the incoming president. The recommendations regarding a committee on obituary resolutions and delegates to the National Irrigation Congress having been already adopted by the association, we pass to that part of the address on the Mann pure seed bill and wish to congratulate the association upon the complete, concise report as to the work accomplished by the committee in charge under the leadership of President Green. outcome of the bill as reported to congress, the seed trade obtained a hearing and all have a better understanding of the situation. We approve the work of the committee thus far and recommend the adoption of the suggestion of the president as to combining the two committees, those on seed legislation and seed adulteration, and that the new committee consist of seven members of the association, and we recommend also that George S. Green be appointed by this convention as chairman of the new committee for the ensuing year, the remaining six members to be appointed by the incoming president.

New Members.

The following new members were elected:

American Seed Co., Detroit, Mich.
The Reeves Co., New York, N. Y.
Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, N. Y.
Nebraska Seed & Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb.
Gregory & Son, Marblehead, Mass.
German Nurseries & Seed House, Beatrice, Neb.
J. N. Hess, of Simpson Co., Maryland.
O. J. Barnes, Malone, N. Y.
Agnew Seed Co., Greeley, Colo.
Bromfield-Colvin Co., Bay City, Mich.
Sullivan Fruit Co., North Carolina.
Dr. Rosse, Kentucky.

Papers Read.

Dr. W. W. Tracy, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, read a thoughtful paper on "Theoretical and Practical Seed Breeding" which was greeted by much applause, but the weather was too warm for thorough discussion.

C. N. Keeney read a paper entitled "The Effect of Low Prices on the Production of High Grade Stocks." All are agreed as to the results, and Mr. Keeney simply gave specific examples of the effect.

Albert McCullough talked on "Fire Insurance for Seedsmen"; he had prepared no paper. He said the subject was one of vital importance, for the item of expense for insurance opens the eyes when the aggregate is figured in at the end of the year. He thought it wrong that the insurance companies should classify seeds at different rates in some states; in his opinion, this should not be. He said he found the impression in the minds of some insurance people that it is almost impossible to obtain a satisfactory adjustment of a fire loss in seeds. He said that insurance men looked upon seeds as a hazardous risk, which causes the high rate. He said too few seedsmen read their policies carefully, which they should do. Mr. McCullough suggested that, as interests are mutual, there should be coöperation in the matter of insurance and he made the suggestion that the association furnish an expert, when necessary, to satisfactorily adjust claims. After considerable discussion the chair was authorized to appoint a committee of three to put the matter in written form for action.

C. B. Smith, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, read a paper entitled "Farm Practice Investigations in Clover Seed Production" which created considerable discussion.

Mr. Crosby spoke for Dr. True, of the Department of Agriculture, on "Practical Education in Horticulture," which was listened to with much interest.

In a paper on "The Use of Forage Plants as Soil Improvers" H. W. Wood noted that crimson clover is the cheapest method to build up the soil in the south, cowpeas the next best, Whippoorwill the most popular cowpea.

EFFECT OF LOW PRICES.

[A paper by C. N. Keeney, of Le Roy, N. Y., read before the American Seed Trade Association, in convention at Detroit, June 23 to 25, 1908.]

Regarding the "Effect of Low Prices on the Production of High Grade Seed Stocks," we have simply to refer to a little recent history. Fifteen to twenty years ago a poor stock of Alaska peas was as rare as a good stock of the same variety is now. Up to that time prices had been good. There was money in Alaskas for the farmer, for the seed grower, for the seedsman and for the planter, but overproduction resulted in low prices, and low prices caused a lack of interest and a relaxing of that eternal vigilance which is the price of success in producing a good stock or in keeping it good.

The thrashing machines used in thrashing Alaskas were also used in thrashing Blue Imperials, Wisconsin Blues and other field varieties, and whenever a thrashing machine changes from one variety to another, it is pretty certain to carry a few quarts of peas in the machine and add them to the next crop thrashed. In this manner Wisconsin Blues were frequently mixed with Alaskas, and where extreme care was not exercised to take these out, regardless of cost, the stocks became mixed and a bad matter became worse through hybridization. This extreme care was not exercised, because the majority of buyers looked only at the price and would not pay the extra cost of keeping stock pure and true.

Impure Stock of Alaska Peas.

The fluctuation in supply and demand occasionally made seedsmen and sometimes growers eager purchasers and, before anyone was really aware of it, these inferior stocks, which gained a foothold during the low prices and the reign of indifference, permeated nearly all the stocks in the country. For the last five or ten years it has been pretty nearly impossible to find any Alaska stocks that were right, and this unfortunate condition of things is clearly traceable to the period during which garden peas were sold at field pea prices. Fortunately, the conditions were so very bad as to force a reaction, and a few people have been doing some very careful and efficient work in restoring Alaskas to their original purity. We are likely, therefore, to have much more satisfactory stocks of this important variety in the near future. Let us hope that we may be spared the misfortune of such low prices as may result in again demoralizing Alaska stocks. The asking of high prices does not necessarily prove the purity of the stock, but one thing is certain: The long continued prevalence of prices at or below the cost line is certain to result in inferior stocks.

Stratagem Peas Also Demoralized.

Of all varieties of peas known to the seed trade, there is probably not one that excels, in fine quality and delicious flavor, the old Stratagem, but the Stratagem is a bad sporter and, if neglected even for a single season, it suffers from rapid degeneration. The man who sells Stratagem peas at anything less than a high price sells them at an actual loss, if he devotes to them the time and skill necessary to keep the stock right. The eagerness to compete in the matter of price has resulted in selling to the general public such inferior stocks of Stratagem as to give the planters the impression that Stratagems are really a poor variety, while they are certainly one of the three or four "top notchers" in the entire list of peas.

So-called Stratagem peas have been sold at competitive prices which actually do not contain five per cent of true Stratagems. The planter, because he did not like the Stratagem sports, dropped the variety and now many seedsmen do not attempt to handle it at all. There are a few seedsmen, however, who have never handled cheap Stratagems and, when they could not furnish the real thing, would not attempt to furnish any, the result being that these houses have a steadily increasing demand for Stratagems and are building up a profitable trade in this excellent variety.

Other Stock That Fell From Grace.

The experience in the case of Alaska and Stratagem peas has been duplicated in many other varieties of seeds. Take, for instance, Red Valentine beans. A dozen years or more ago, one of our bean growers made a standing offer of 25 cents a plant for every flat-podded plant of Red Valentines which his customers could find in his fields, but the depression in the garden bean market which followed the large crops of 1896 and 1897 left no margin for growers to use in keeping their stocks up to standard, and even that fine strain of Red Valentines fell from grace through the hybridization carried on by bees and the grower's offer had to be withdrawn.

Fortunately, however, there are quite a few seedsmen who appreciate the difference between stocks that are fair and stocks that are fine and are willing to pay a reasonable difference in favor of fine stocks. This fact has encouraged the grower referred to to renew his efforts in producing a pure strain of Red Valentines that is all round-podded, and we understand the old offer of 25 cents a plant for every flat-podded plant found in this strain of Red Valentines has been renewed. It is, however, safe to assume that this work of restoring this very important variety to its best possible condition would not have been undertaken if all seedsmen were like the few who consider price only.

SOIL SURVEY IN CALIFORNIA.

Twenty-five field experts of the Bureau of Soils, Department of Agriculture, who have been engaged in making an analysis and survey of soils in California, have stopped work suddenly and returned to Washington.

Their work is hardly a third done, and so important is it for the horticultural interests of the state that the various chambers of commerce and agricultural and fruit associations are surprised and indignant over the action of the Washington authorities in summarily calling the field force east.

The stopping of the work is said to be due to friction between the Bureau of Soils and the Bureau of Plant Industry at the national capital, and Secretary Wilson is represented as having taken sides with the latter bureau.

Efforts being made here to ascertain the nature of the trouble between the bureaus, and to discover Secretary Wilson's ultimate intention regarding a complete soil survey in California, have so far failed.

The associations interested in the matter have sent numerous telegrams to the Department of Agriculture, to try to get some definite information. Telegrams have been sent to Senators Perkins and Flint, apprising them of the action of Secretary Wilson and requesting them to interest President Roosevelt in the matter, on account of its importance to the many and varied products of the state.

The Bureau of Soils has partially completed a soil survey and maps of the different soils in the Santa Clara and San Joaquin valleys. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is a shade better than it was last week. There has been quite a quantity of funeral orders and the closing of the schools has helped to use up large quantities of stock. A few good June weddings have fallen gracefully into the hands of the decorators, and if the public will be gracious enough to keep the good work up the florists will be very grateful.

The spring avalanche of inside stock has partially subsided. Carnations and roses are stiffening somewhat in price and the growers are bringing in much smaller quantities of them. Fancy carnations now net the growers $3 per hundred, and from $4 to $6 per hundred is the price asked for good Brides, Maids and Kaiserins. Beauties can be had at from 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen and good flowers are easily disposed of.

Sweet peas still continue to be the best of the cheap flowers and thousands of bunches are disposed of daily by the hucksters, as well as in the stores. Valley moves well and costs the retailers $4 per hundred. Lilium longiflorum is much scarcer at present than it has been at any time this year. The other varieties of Japanese bulbs can be expected in market in a few weeks.

Bride gladioli are about over, except in some cases where the bulbs were planted very late. The other kinds of gladioli are being brought into town in quite large quantities and sell well. A few dahlias have been shown by the florists, but we need not expect many before next month.

Smilax is scarce and asparagus of all kinds is plentiful and cheap. Other kinds of green goods move well.

The weather continues cool, with stiff afternoon breezes, and reports from all along the coast in this vicinity show cool weather also. This makes it much better for both the grower and retailer, as there has been no trouble so far either to produce good, stiff flowers, with heavy, clean foliage, or to handle flowers to advantage after they have reached the stores, or to pack and ship them with tolerable assurance that they will reach their destination in a presentable condition after the usual maltreatment by the express com-

Various Notes.

E. Gill, of West Berkeley, has thirty-five acres devoted this season entirely to the growing of roses. Over 200,000 plants were handled at this place last year.

C. W. Lewis is on a two weeks' trip to Portland, Ore.

Chas. Abraham, of the Western Nursery, reports a heavy trade for the month of June.

F. Ludemann is making extensive alterations in his nurseries near the Presidio.

SEATTLE.

Seattle nurserymen are carrying on an active campaign to secure the 1909 meeting of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association for Seattle, to meet in July during the Alaska-Yukon exposition. There are 150 members in the association, and correspondence undertaken by local members indicates that there will be little trouble in securing the recognition of Seattle for the 1909 meeting place. C. A. Tunnison, of Tacoma, secretary of the association, is working hard for Seattle, and in this he is assisted by other officers and members about the state and along the coast. The annual meeting this year is set for July 8 and 9, at North Yakima, and the meeting place for 1909 will be selected at that time.

Christen Sandahl, of the Puget Sound Nursery & Seed Company, says: "My correspondence with members indicates that we will have no trouble in securing the 1909 meeting. Members will bring their wives and daughters with them to Seattle and the party should comprise 300 or 400 people from along the coast. The ten or twelve nursery firms in Seattle are, I believe, all working for this meeting, and all I have talked with will tell the same story of encouragement."

MANSFIELD, MASS. — Frank F. Shepardson's boiler-house and its contents were totally destroyed by fire June 11. Part of a greenhouse was also damaged. The loss will probably reach $1,000, as there were fourteen tons of coal and many tools in the destroyed building.

MOORHEAD, MINN.—Two florists from Illinois, A. E. Miller and W. R. Briggs, have selected this place as the site for an extensive plant of greenhouses, to be erected near the Clay county courthouse and just south of the new Northwestern hospital. The firm will also have a vegetable garden in connection with the flower growing enterprise.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

NOTE there are more than two solid pages of European advertisements in this week's REVIEW.

JOHN W. ADAMS, of Springfield, Mass., whose fame as a nurseryman has spread far beyond New England, was 80 years of age June 20. He has spent just fifty years in the nursery business.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, reports the largest call for peonies it ever has experienced. Orders for quite a number of the best sorts already have taken all the plants they care to sell for September delivery. They say the inquiry indicates that the holders of good varieties do not need to consider reducing prices, no matter what cuts are made in prices of old sorts or untried lots.

INSPECTION IN OHIO.

Under the Ohio nursery and orchard inspection law every nurseryman or any other person in the state engaged in growing trees, shrubs, plants or vines for sale, must, before July 1, file application for the inspection of such stock with the Ohio department of agriculture. The disposal of uninspected stock, either by sale or gift, renders the owner liable to fine. These inspections are made by the division of nursery and orchard inspection, and free of charge when applications are filed before July 1, with N. E. Shaw, Ohio Department of Agriculture, Columbus.

SHRUB JOTTINGS.

For naturalizing purposes, Ribes aureum, the Missouri currant, which is found naturally from Missouri to the Rocky mountains, is well worthy of a place. It will grow in extremely poor ground, and where soil conditions are of this character it will thrive surprisingly well. The light, lustrous green leaves are covered with yellowish dots while young. The yellow flowers, which are quite showy, are produced in clusters in early spring, being open this year, in the vicinity of Boston, the first week in May. This shrub does especially well in shade. The brownish-black colored fruit possesses a fair flavor.

Philadelphus Lemoinei, a hybrid variety of mock orange, is one of the most showy, floriferous and beautiful shrubs grown. It is specially well adapted for small gardens on account of its moderate growth, rarely exceeding four to six feet in height. The pure white flowers, carried on short racemes, literally smother the branches. Plants of very small size bloom profusely and these would seem to be an excellent subject here for winter forcing if the plants were pot grown, like deutzias and lilacs.

There are a number of excellent named varieties of P. Lemoinei. Some of the best are: Avalanche, of very graceful habit; Manteau d'Hermine; P. erectus; Mont Blanc, large and showy pure white flowers in great profusion; Boule d'Argent, as its name signifies, a veritable ball of silvery whiteness; and P. speciosissimus. The flowers of these hybrid philadelphus were this season at their best June 8.

Deutzia hybrida Lemoinei is another of the many valuable hybrid ornamental flowering shrubs raised by Lemoine, of Nancy, France. It was obtained by intercrossing D. gracilis and D. parviflora and is decidedly better than either parent. It has greater vigor than the old Nursery Co., has associated with him his sons, C. M. Wild and A. O. Wild, and will continue the business under the old name of Wild Bros. Nursery Co. This unites two excellent peony stocks, that of the old firm of Wild Bros. Nursery Co., and the former firm of C. & M. Wild, peony specialists. We are better prepared than ever to execute your orders, and solicit a share of your patronage.

WILD BROS. NURSERY CO., Sarcoxie, Mo.

D. gracilis and the branches are of erect growth. It does not attain a greater height than five to six feet. The flowers are pure white, and produced in such abundance as to practically hide the foliage from view. We have had little trouble with it winter killing, although it suffers a little in severe winters, such as we experienced in 1903 and 1904. This is a much better deutzia than D. gracilis and will eventually displace it as a forcing variety. It can be readily propagated from soft cuttings in May or early June, in a frame or greenhouse. It was this year in full bloom May 28, about ten days earlier than usual.

WASHINGTON.

Business in the District.

Business has quieted down. The June weddings and the funeral work are the only things doing now. Last week was the grand finale, with the combined three high school commencements. Every florist had some work in the bunch and basket line. There were about 700 bunches. J. H. Small & Son had the palm decoration. This took place in Convention hall, the largest hall in the District. Gude Bros. had the decorations for the Business High School at the National theater.

Various Notes.

There was a nice turnout at the bowlers' outing June 18, at Chesapeake beach.

A surprise to the local florists was the funeral notice of John Cammack, who had been in the florists' business all his life, and his father before him.

The dedication of the new municipal building takes place July 4. Wm. F. Gude has been appointed chairman on decorations. The local florists are all to help. He called a meeting for that purpose for June 23.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held July 6. It will be an old time potting shed meeting on F. H. Kramer's place. There will be few absentees.

J. A. Phillips will close his Fourteenth street store for the season June 27.

The Washington bowlers entertained the club from Baltimore Saturday, June 20. The score follows:

TOLEDO, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade conditions as reported by the florists throughout the city have been good during June. Stock has been of exceptionally good quality, in spite of the fact that the weather has been hot, and there has been a good demand for weddings and commencements. The prices hold good.

There is rather a limited number of carnations, but sweet peas are still coming in large lots and sell well. Valley has been in great demand. The local gladioli, yellow daisies and marguerites have had a good call for table decorations.

Various Notes.

Frank J. Schoen had the decorations for the Maccabees' convention at the Valentine theater.

Mrs. John W. Schoen, mother of Frank J. Schoen, is dead. Mr. Schoen has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

Wm. Fenniger, of the Youngstown Floral Co., made a business trip to Indianapolis last week.

The floral offerings at the funeral of John Milner, son of one of Toledo's prominent business men, were the most elaborate that have been seen here for months. A large portion of these flowers was furnished by Mrs. Suder.

Miss Helen Patten was kept busy getting out bouquets and decorative pieces for the annual commencement of the high school. H. L. S.

MERIDEN, CONN.—Mrs. L. E. Savage has sold her store on West Main street to C. W. Blatchley, of Southington, and Miss Bessie Blatchley will be in charge. Miss Evers will continue as clerk. Mrs. Savage will retire from business, after several years of marked success.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade has been good for the last two weeks, with commencement orders, some good-sized funeral orders and a good many wedding decorations, which help to keep things going during the latter part of June. The last of this month brings us again to the good old summer time, when the shade of the old apple tree will be welcomed by a good many that can get away to enjoy it.

The bedding work is about over here now—just a few stragglers coming in for a few plants to fill in, etc.

Roses are showing the effects of warm weather and are coming in poor. They are also scarce, as a good many are replanting now. Carnations are coming in small and of poor quality, outside of Enchantress, which is holding up well.

Sweet peas are so plentiful that one can buy them at his own price, and the quality is fine.

Various Notes.

The club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, and will declare meetings off for July and August.

The picnic committee, which consists of Messrs. McKellar, Metzmaier, Hills, Reichert and Bauman, is busy distributing tickets and cards for the picnic, and all look for a large attendance.

Albert Knopf, of the Franklin Park Floral Co., leaves about July 1 for California, to be gone two years. He is compelled to go on account of ill health, and all wish him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. George Bauman had a stroke of apoplexy about three weeks ago and is in a serious condition, but she is improving somewhat at this writing.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some good roses and carnations. Its Enchantress are extra fine for the hot weather we are having.

E. Meztmaier reports business good, especially in design work.

Sherman Stephens reports more bedding at Greenlawn than ever before.

The Livingston Seed Co. is putting up the rafters on its new house, 50x200, of King construction.

William Graff is still in West Baden.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

We have no great reason to complain of the state of trade in the last two weeks. It has been as brisk as could be expected, with plenty of funeral work and wedding orders to help it along. The demand for roses seems to be greater than that for carnations, and, as the crops on roses seem to be somewhat short, it is difficult to find enough to supply the demand. While roses are used extensively in wedding orders, carnations are more popular with the funeral sprays and designs. Lily of the valley holds its usual popularity with the bridal bouquet and longiflorum helps out with the decorations.

Weather Conditions.

The weather during the last two weeks has been extremely hot and dry, making it almost impossible to work under glass or any place. The crops of all kinds in the fields have been suffering terribly for the want of rain.

These conditions held true until Friday afternoon, June 19, when a terrific wind storm blew up, followed by a heavy rain and hail storm. While the hail did not do a great deal of damage, the wind destroyed much property. It blew down large trees and telephone poles, carried hotbed sashes in every direction, and was instrumental in the breaking of lots of greenhouse glass. The fruit trees also suffered a great loss of fruit, which was shaken off by the strong wind.

This was the worst storm Dayton has witnessed for a great many years.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young returned last week from her trip to Des Moines. Mrs. Young reports that she had a fine time. On her return she stopped over in Chicago and made a few calls.

The Miami Floral Co. has been doing a splendid business on Lilium giganteum the last two weeks.

The plant of the Dayton Floral Co. was badly damaged in the storm of last Friday.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Outside of a few orders that June weddings generally call for, business has been poor since the first part of this month. Flowers are abundant in all gardens. Still, the aster did not turn out so well. The low price of the northern flowers makes them come here in close competition with our home stock. The weather is, so far, quite favorable to our chrysanthemums.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting June 18. The exact place in which to hold the flower show is not yet decided upon, but the number of empty stores around Canal street is an assurance that it will be easy to select a perfect location at the right moment.

James A. Newsham, having recently returned from Central America, where he had been collecting orchids, gave the society an interesting lecture about his trip. He has been very successful and is satisfied with the quantity and sort he brought back.

The annual outing of the society will take place July 8. The day will be spent in Mandeville, on Lake Pontchartrain.

Various Notes.

No preparations for specimen plants for our next flower show seem to have been made so far by many growers, but no doubt there will be an abundance of well-grown plants and flowers at the proper time, as the planting has been very large.

R. Lockerbie left James A. Newsham, having accepted a position in Columbus, Miss. M. M. L.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The usual summer dullness prevails. There is not much doing in the cut flower line. Funeral work is quite plentiful, with plenty of flowers to pick from. Roses and carnations are getting poorer every day and becoming smaller in size. Sweet peas are now coming in from outdoors. Indoor sweet peas are pretty well played out. The regular price is 50 cents per hundred retail.

Napoleon Lemay is going to make things hum next fall. He will have 5,000 ferns in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. He will not grow any carnations the coming winter. He reports good sales of aster plants at 15 cents per dozen, two dozen for 25 cents. W. L.

Brattleboro, Vt.—A. H. Harvey has had a highly satisfactory trade recently, having sold over 10,000 aster plants this season.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FOR TWO HOUSES.

Please give me information as to how many 2-inch pipes I need in a house 18x100 and ten feet to the ridge, to be used for growing carnations, near New York city. Please state also the number of such pipes that will be required in a house 15x100 and seven feet to the ridge, for roses and bedding plants. I intend to run a 2½-inch flow pipe straight up from the boiler under the ridge, and put the returns on the posts in the house.

How deep must I put my boiler in order to get good circulation? The boiler shed will be at the east end of the houses, which run east and west. C. P.

The carnation house figured to carry a temperature of 60 degrees should be provided with eight lines of 2-inch pipe. The riser for this house, if only one is used, should be 2½-inch, in which case one of the eight 2-inch lines can be dropped out. The rose house, which is narrower but which should be figured on a 70-degree basis, will require practically the same piping as the carnation house—a 2½-inch riser and seven lines of 2-inch pipe. The deeper the boiler can be placed, the better results, other things being equal. Do not neglect the elevated expansion tank, with direct connection with the main return close to the boiler. L. C. C.

PIPING IN NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

We are building a greenhouse, 24x88, to be used mostly for carnations. The house runs north and south, with side walls five feet high and a glass gable in the south end. There are benches three feet and a half wide along both sides and across the south end. In the center are two benches, each 5½x78 feet. The benches are all separated by 2-foot walks. The boiler-house is located near the northwest corner of the house.

We have ample boiler capacity and had figured on using 4-inch cast-iron pipe. What would you suggest in regard to piping the house under these conditions? If you do not like the 4-inch pipe, how would you heat the house?

C. G. G. & Co.

The length of your house and the remoteness of your boiler makes a long run for a gravity hot water system. Under these conditions I should hesitate to use a low pressure system with 4-inch cast pipe, and would prefer to take chances on using a single 3½-inch flow from the boiler directly to the house and to rise under the ridge, making the high point in the system under the ridge at the south end. There divide the flow by the use of 2-inch branches, one to each side bench, and install seven 2-inch returns under each outside bench and five 2-inch returns under each of the center benches, thus making in all twenty-four 2-inch returns. By this arrangement and a high expansion tank of larger capacity, connected directly with the main return close to the boiler, good service should result. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR CARNATION HOUSE.

I am building a new house, 24x46, for carnations, in the central part of New York state. I have always piped under the beds, but would like this one piped on the side walls. The two ends and north side are exposed. The south side connects with another house. My idea is to have one 2½-inch flow through the center to the east end, with six 2-inch returns across ten feet of the east end and along the north side; another 2-inch flow to the east end, with four 2-inch returns on the south side; another 2-inch flow across the west end, with five 2-inch returns. This is the most exposed part.

Will a Wilks 24x42 boiler heat this, or would it be better to buy the size larger? The height of the house to the ridge is eleven feet, with side walls four and one-half feet high. There is glass in both ends. I also wish to try ground beds for the two center ones. Any suggestions from you will be appreciated.

The radiation you have planned to install is very nearly correct for a maximum temperature of 60 degrees during severe weather. The radiation which you have planned exceeds 500 square feet. The boiler mentioned is rated to carry 450 to 600 square feet of radiation. It is likely that the 24x42 boiler will carry this house with safety at the carnation temperature. Should you at some future time desire to convert this house into one requiring a higher temperature and install more radiation, the boiler might not meet the requirements. To anticipate this, I believe I should install the next size, 30x42, which is rated to carry 600 to 700 square feet of radiation.

It is not necessary to use the three flow pipes you are planning to install, as one 3-inch pipe will do the work equally well. But in case you discard the two 2-inch risers, add two more returns, in order to provide the required heating surface. Do not neglect to use an elevated expansion tank of large capacity, connected directly with the main return near the boiler. I prefer the single flow pipe from the boiler to the far end of the house, carried under the ridge. With this arrangement and an elevated expansion tank, the circulation is nearly always good, provided the returns are well graded.

CAPITOL BOILERS

End Boiler Troubles

Capitol Boilers have won a standard reputation among florists for thorough and reliable heating, with fuel economy. Says one who uses the Capitol Boiler:

"The coldest night this winter, with the thermometer 4 degrees below zero, we did not show any pressure on the steam gauge, and the greenhouses were an even temperature. In our previous experience with other boilers, the fireman had to be constantly firing, while now our fireman only tends to same in the coldest weather every three or four hours. We feel the saving of fuel with the Capitol Boiler over our previous system will pay for the same in a very few years."

Then there is the Divided Section, which makes for quick repairs without interfering with the heating.

This is important to every florist. Send for our descriptive catalog, or write or call on any of our Branches or Sales Agencies. Capitol Boiler means good, solid money to the florist.

GENTLEMEN:—I have waited till we would have cold enough weather to have all the lines on, and the working of the system through your trap is perfect, as it carries the steam as hot at the end of the returns as it is when it leaves the boiler, after traveling more than 400 feet. I am greatly pleased that I put in your trap and will certainly recommend it to any florist who uses steam.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good the last week, considering the number of rain and hail storms we have had.

On Tuesday of last week one of the severest hail storms Colorado has seen in some years passed over the city from the northwest to the southeast, damaging the greenhouses and outside plants in its path. As it was purely local, some parts of the city were not touched, but such establishments as it did catch suffered heavy losses.

The Park Floral Co. was the heaviest loser, on account of having more glass, over 22,000 square feet being broken. In addition to this, about 16,000 carnation plants on the outside were all shot to pieces, as well as all other outside stuff. This firm estimates its loss at about $6,000.

Charles Benson was also quite a loser for the size of his place, having over 2,000 panes of glass broken. Other and lighter losses were at F. C. Maler's, at the City Park greenhouses and a few other places. Most of these carry hail insurance, but in most cases that will be the smallest part of the loss.

Roses, considering the weather, have been good, but there was not so much call for them, on account, probably, of the call for other kinds of flowers. Carnations still remain pretty fair and the quantity is abundant, but the demand for them has suffered from the stock of peonies and other outdoor flowers that are coming in.

Sweet peas are scarce and will be so for a while, as the hail cut up nearly all the early ones.

Various Notes.

N. A. Benson is fishing on the Gunnison river and having good luck, judging by the size of the fish he is sending to his friends.

The Scott Floral Co. is now in its new store, on Broadway. E. S. K.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The continued wet weather put a damper on business last week, and, except for the June weddings, there would not have been much doing in the florists' line. Peonies are at present a drug on the market, though there is good demand for the white and lighter pink shades. There is a marked scarcity of white roses all over. There is an abundance of Maids, Chatenay and Moulton, and a fairly good supply of Richmond and Liberty. A good crop of Kaiserin is visible everywhere.

Various Notes.

A hail storm the morning of June 22, in the southeastern part of the city, accompanied by a good deal of wind, caused some apprehension, but did no damage.

All the parks and lawns are planted, and the city presents a dressed-up appearance. Central park holds some artistic beds and fine decorative plants.

James Souden has taken over the store for himself, and hereafter it will be run under his name, without the "Co."

The florists take to fishing when the slack season arrives. John Monson and William Gray made a good catch over Sunday at a lake ten miles from town. Oscar Carlson and a party of friends caught 500 brook trout on a fishing trip last week.

The meeting of the State Horticultural Society was held June 23, at the State Experimental Station, and a peony show was held in the morning.

George Panus has closed up his department in the Minneapolis Dry Goods, and intends looking up a new location in the early fall. M. E. M.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

No more does the lilac show in Highland park hold the distinction of being the only floral exhibition of the year. It is not that the lilacs are less lovely, during their all too brief season, but that the park commissioners call the attention of the public to another exhibit, just as beautiful, and in every way warranted to call forth as much admiration as the famed lilacs. This is the peony show. There are 204 varieties in Highland park that were at the fullness of their perfection June 14. Because of the great variety and their widely varying claims to admiration, the park commissioners have each plant labeled, so that those desiring to reproduce in their own gardens some of the loveliness now exhibited will have no difficulty in getting the variety most admired.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

No doubt the 365 marriage licenses issued by the clerk of Milwaukee county June 1 to 20 had their effects on the flower trade, for we can again report that business last week was good. It is also noticeable that, as June is the month of roses, they are more called for than most other stock, especially the lighter shades. This can also be said of peonies, which came in heavily the last part of the week, selling from 2 cents to 5 cents.

The first part of the week found roses a scarce article, while carnations were plentiful all the time. Yet some extra good stock of the last named realized $3 per hundred. Prices are low all around, but with plenty of business no one ought to kick.

Since last Tuesday we have had genuine summer weather, and this has made most of the stock soft.

Lily of the valley still seems popular and moves briskly.

Various Notes.

Gust Pohl is cutting some fine sweet peas these days, which sell readily.

William Dilger, who is sending in some extra good iris, finds them a good investment.

Gust Rusch, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., says that the grower with plenty of good red carnations this week will realize good returns on them, as they will be quite in demand for the local commencement exercises.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is right in it with giganteum lilies forced from cold storage bulbs. This firm now has three of its new houses glazed.

Joe Pollworth left June 20, in his auto, for a trip to Oshkosh and vicinity. It is a pleasure and business trip combined.

Otto Sylvester, of Oconomowoc, Wis., was a visitor. He does considerable bedding work, and reports being well satisfied with business thus far.

There is not much left around Milwaukee in bedding stock. Almost every one reports having cleaned up.

The River Front Improvement Association has completed its work, the result of which, no doubt, will be noticeable in more ways than anticipated. E. O.

TALKS ON GREENHOUSE MATERIAL

No. 10.

You no doubt hear a lot of talk about the all-cypress greenhouse and have heard that it is out of date and strictly N. G. for the wide-awake florist. When you come to look the thing over you will find that there is nothing back of this talk and that the all-cypress house is THE house for the commercial florist. You can get more bench room, more growing space, the same amount of light and just as good plants, and make more money with the all-cypress house than you can make with any other construction on the market today. Of course it is advisable to use iron gutters if you are situated in a cold climate where you have heavy snows, but outside of this the cypress house has them all beat. The difference in the life of the cypress house and the iron frame is not worth mentioning, but we will leave this until another time. The Poehlmann plant is built on the cypress plan and it is the largest and finest commercial plant in the United States. You all know of the quality of their stock. Don't waste your money but get full value for it. Get our material and you will make money.

We will send you our 96-page catalog on request.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

A decided improvement in the demand for all kinds of flowers was noticeable last week. A great many school commencements, as well as some weddings, were the direct cause of the rush for stock. Roses have shown some improvement, but the Kaiserin still has the lead.

There has been an unusual call for lily of the valley and white sweet peas, it being impossible to fill all orders. Carnations are fast going to the bad with most growers, and a great many are throwing them out, making preparations for early planting.

Various Notes.

Miss Fannie L. Evans, secretary of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., is spending two weeks at the Portage Lakes, accompanied by Mrs. F. R. Williams and family.

Lars Anderson, of Rocky River, is sending in a fine cut of outdoor sweet peas, as well as quantities of good candidum lilies.

Knoble Bros. report having had a good run on commencement bunches last week. They also have some good weddings booked for the near future.

The Camp Conduit Co., of this city, has taken over the entire output of the Everlasting tile bench, formerly sold by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., and will make the bench in large quantities.

The F. R. Pierson Co. has been sending some fine Beauties to this market.

The F. R. Williams Co. has completed the new addition of eight houses, 25x300 feet. They are all planted in roses and carnations.

The J. M. Gasser Co. reports a very busy week, with quantities of wedding work as well as a large shipping trade.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

Feeding the Plants.

My attention having been called last week to two cases where feeding had already been resorted to, and with disastrous results, leads me to pen these lines.

The chrysanthemum is spoken of as a gross feeder; that is, a plant that will use an almost unlimited amount of plant food and be benefited thereby. This is true at certain seasons, but it is a poor policy to work on all the time. When the plants are set out in the beds, there should be food enough to keep them going in good shape for ten to twelve weeks. Thus, plants set out, say, about the middle of May should not need any stimulant before the middle of July.

It is a cardinal principle in plant-growing of any kind that the plant must be well rooted in either pot or bench before it is in a condition to assimilate plant food supplied in the form of a liquid, yet growers who should know better will give plants liquid shortly after potting, with the result that the soil sours, the roots will not work in it and the last stage of that plant is far worse than the first.

A light mulch of well-rotted manure will do no harm to the plants at any time, providing it is well rotted and not half green, but avoid the use of soda or any other chemical till you know that the plant is ready for it.

We will take up the feeding at the proper time, but to those who propose to feed their plants so early in the game as this my advice is, "Don't!"

Buds.

Much early planted stock is producing buds and it is, of course, useless to take these buds, as they are too early to develop. Nature takes care of the situation by sending out several shoots round the bud, which will continue the growth of the plant. It will be necessary to reduce these shoots to such a number of stems, one or more, as is proposed to be carried on to completion, but it is not a wise plan to do it before the shoots are several inches long, as it is not possible to determine that the shoot is not blind until it has made several leaves. I always remove the shoot immediately below the bud, because often it makes a few leaves and then produces another bud instead of growing right along. Some kinds give little trouble when they produce buds, while others have to be coaxed considerably to keep them in the straight and narrow way.

Pompons and Singles.

Though almost everyone is now familiar with the pompons, few people know much about the culture of the single varieties, judging by the number of inquiries being made right along.

Singles that are being grown continuously in pots, or that are planted in the garden with the idea of being lifted and potted, should be kept pinched in closely till the second or third week in July; then, if they have been pinched properly, they make beautiful, compact bushes, a perfect mass of flowers.

As to whether plants do better in pots than planted out in the garden, I prefer to grow them in pots if I can keep the pots indoors. If they have to go outside, I would rather plant directly into the ground and lift early in September, because most seasons the heavy thunderstorms get the plants waterlogged and leaf spot sets in and disfigures the plant. Singles taken from the sand now and potted along as needed into 6-inch pots make beautiful and profitable stock with a minimum of labor, no pinching or tying being necessary.

Both singles and pompons planted in the bench any time for the next two weeks will also well repay the time and trouble. While they do not make so long a stem as earlier stock, they are plenty long enough to use for cutting as sprays, and as the amount of labor expended on them outside of watering is almost nil, they can be sold cheap and still realize a good profit, as no disbudding is necessary.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

IVORY TO TWO STEMS.

Will Ivory mums planted in benches out of 2-inch pots during June, and pinched back about July 8, produce two good blooms per plant in good soil and well-ventilated houses? J. M. J.

Plants so treated will produce fair flowers, but not by any means top-notchers. The tendency too often is to expect too much from the chrysanthemum in a given time. If the plants were fairly large when set out in June, many of them should make a natural break early in July and two shoots could then be taken up, if necessary, and pinching would not be required.

If the plants had been tipped while still in the pots they would now have the shoots growing nicely and time would have been saved. Ivory is a dwarf grower and, if pinched late, the stem is short; otherwise, as stated above, the flowers will be fair if plants are helped along with some feed.

C. H. TOTTY.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

During the growing season, and until the young roots begin to approach the surface, cultivating should be closely attended to. Where the soil is light and friable this can be performed with the hand, but with soil of a stiff, clayey nature a small hand hoe is necessary. In using any kind of an instrument due care must be exercised so as not to go too near the neck of the plant, or deep enough to in any way injure the roots, one inch being deep enough if cultivating is practiced as it should be, once a week.

During hot weather, when young stock has to be watered frequently and large quantities used, the soil will require frequent stirring to break up the surface and keep it in good condition. In clayey soils, which are deficient in fiber, the crust will form after every watering and it should be broken up as soon as possible.

When the feeding roots approach the surface it is time to stop cultivating and apply a light mulch.

A little study and care in the preparation of the mulching materials will save a great deal of hard and unnecessary labor at the time we want to use it. By having it in proper condition, we may expect better results than if we are forced to use the crude and raw material in a hastily prepared state. There is also little doubt but that carelessness practiced in the collecting and preparing of mulching material is a fruitful source of supplying the insect pests which trouble us during the winter. Ribes.

SWEET PEAS DYING.

I would like to ask a question or two about sweet peas. I have always had good luck with my sweet peas and never had any trouble of this kind before. After they were hoed and the earth drawn up around the plants, in places all along the rows they started to dry up and die. I would like to know what the trouble is and how it may be stopped.
F. H. B.

If sweet peas are sown two inches deep in early spring, they should never have any earth pulled up to them when growing. We consider this practice, though it is recommended in many seed catalogues, a most harmful one, which does more than anything else to discourage sweet pea culture. The drying of the stems we have always believed to be largely a result of this earthing up, and we would advise you to discontinue it. However, this may not be the cause of your vines drying up. The attacks of the larvæ of the May beetle, coming in cow manure, are sometimes responsible; so, also, is growing the plants in the same soil year after year.

Another season we would suggest sowing the seeds two inches deep, not hilling up. Mulch before hot weather bakes the ground too much, and if grubs or wireworms abound, plow the land; then give it a dressing of kainite or gas lime late in the fall, harrowing the ground over afterward. Ordinary air-slaked lime will answer if you have no kainite or gas lime. C. W.

RAWSON'S SWEET PEA TRIALS.

During July W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, will have many visitors at their trial grounds at Marblehead, where a series of public exhibitions are being held this summer. Sweet peas are, of course, the great attraction during this month and Manager Maurice Fuld says they "are trying to interest the florists in the east to see these trials here. Many of them have not seen a great many of the sweet peas, and the Marblehead collection this year is even more complete than that of the California growers, as it includes a number of novelties such as have never before been shown either in England or America."

There are 160 varieties under name and each visitor is given a printed score card on which to record his impressions as a guide to future orders.

IVY CROSS WITH ORCHIDS.

The accompanying illustration, which is one of the series of funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia, shows an effective arrangement of orchids at the base of an ivy cross. In making up this design Mr. Fox believes it is best to have the cross detached from the base, securing them together when the work is completed. The object of this method is that the ivy leaves can be placed in position far more readily as well as rapidly when the design is flat on the counter than when it is upright. The placing of a few sprays of wheat among the ivy leaves is simply a suggestion of the harvest idea and is used only to accentuate the fullness of years. The color idea of orchids, lily of the valley, and Easter lilies is white. Phil.

THE STOREMAN AND RETAILER.

Thoughts for the Dull Season.

The quiet days of summer are approaching and to many of our retailers and their staff it will be a time of idleness and detriment, detriment because to waste the hours of inactivity caused by the lack of trade is a harm, to the employer as well as his helpers.

We do not all suffer from the forced lull in business that is coming on us, but many, too many, see only in the dull season something to complain of and make the life of their store men miserable.

Listen; soon we will hear the clerk "wish the boss would keep away." And that boss will exclaim, "Those fellows! I'll give them something to do. Get out the galax. How about straightening out the cellar?" etc., etc., with the result that the cellar is arranged to suit the most exacting, nay, even artistic mind, the galax is overdone and it is up to us to try to find something, anything, to "look busy" when the "firm" is around.

The time has to be put in and we, individually and collectively, should "improve the shining hour."

Taking a Review of the Past Year.

Our method must be governed by circumstances, but we should make the best of our time. To begin, what better than a review of our past season? Unfortunately, to many, the season just ending will carry with it a memory which we hope will not be repeated for numerous winters. "Frenzied finance" has left its toothmark on many of our prosperous retailers. But, pshaw! A toothmark will heal, and besides, we know that our next season will be one of our old-timers, anyway.

Don't you think that a serious review of our season's mistakes and successes would be of material benefit?

Let us be coöperative. Let us each, as individuals, from the owner to the message boy, think of our last season's work and pass in review those busy days. Do you remember that big day we had—that Christmas rush—that Easter scramble? Can we improve on our method of handling such trade again? Think, all think. Was our delivery system the best? Was our order system the most simple? How about our customers' cards? Were they all in the right boxes, none going astray? Can we improve on our present methods? These and many others are the kind of questions we should now ask ourselves. It will soon be the season to try new and changed systems, for the time hangs heavily on our hands, and we have ample opportunity to test the new ideas or, by so doing, prove the old ones.

Harmony and Co-operation.

Let us get together. Coöperation—that is the word, the keynote of all successful business systems, for we must cooperate for success. In our office work we see it proven. What the order sheet is to the day book, the day book to the ledger, so should our staff be—the general staff to the foreman, the foreman to the employer. It applies as truly where there is but one message boy, one clerk, and the owner, as it does to the largest establishment. There should be harmony and affiliation throughout.

Think it over. It will occupy some of that spare time, and cannot do much harm, anyway.

Owner or manager, if you have your place working in sympathy, you appreciate it and so do your associates. Now show your generosity by helping others. Help us. We would be pleased to hear from you, that others might benefit by your experience. We would like to hear if you have a system or if your coöperation is spontaneous and without method, the result, simply, of the willingness and desire of your assistants to further the interests of their house. That is the most satisfactory way, we believe, and we would like to hear just a word or two to help some of us who feel that there is not that feeling of sympathy most necessary to success.

Good Subject for Discussion.

Let us hear from both sides. We know that you who have secured harmony in your establishments will realize the great advantage your business reaps with freedom from discord, and perhaps you will wonder at the fact that with some there should be any lack of coöperation or any petty jealousy.

Let your ideas flow, and give us all a chance to better our environment. You will not be playing into the hands of the enemy, but may be the means of assisting in raising the standard of our flower men. And by so doing you may increase your own business through the knowledge extended to the less fortunate, who may, perhaps, through lack of cooperation, have been compelled, in order to secure business, to resort to "crepe chasing" and other such questionable practices—methods that do so much to lower the standard of our business. Let us hear from you, any or all, that we may enlarge our own views and that every side of the question may be treated to a little serious thought. It will help us all. To get a general opinion on the subject, and to have the calcium light of combined ideas turned on a few of the questions pertaining to our business methods, must be generally beneficial.

Business Methods and Principles.

Such questions are usually sidetracked or passed over as requiring no controversy, when in reality method and business principle are the most vital points in the betterment of the florists' trade.

We have as our customers the elite and the select of the social world. Why should not our business be the standard of perfection, when we control such an important luxury of the wealthy? Why not work at the root to try to improve our branches? The method of the executive head is responsible for the action of the assistants. Let us have a word or two from the clerks, the foreman and the manager, and perhaps we will be able to help place in a healthy state some of us who are slightly awry.

You know that one diseased plant on the bench is apt to extend its affliction. Why not try, in this approaching quiet season, to improve and make healthy those who are, let us say, not quite so fortunate as the majority? By so doing we will improve our own conditions.

Let us hear from you. F. C. W. B.

A RETAILER'S SUGGESTION.

Reading on the subject of gluts and how to dispose of them, I would like to have you publish my version, which is as follows:

Advertise carnations that cost approximately $1 per 100 for 50 cents per dozen, special, and with this special price make an offer to send one dozen carnations free to any address the customer may give, other than his or her own. One could grade over the stock and have a little better stock for the ones who put up the cash, and dispose of the surplus free of charge. In this way he would be doubling his money, less the cost of delivery and boxes.

Now, there are two points which one must consider. You are a creator of business. The party receiving the flowers will undoubtedly enjoy them and will in return want to make a present to the donor. There may be times when the flowers will be sent to some one who could not afford to purchase flowers, but the appreciation that they will show when they see the donor will make such a strong impression that it will be sure to cause this giver to send flowers oftener.

This serves as a means to keep the price up to a normal one and, being a special offer and the purchaser only receiving a dozen carnations for 50 cents, or whatever the price may be, he naturally would not hem and haw at the medium price, and I truly believe that if every brother florist would work hand and hand with the above system, it would be more profitable than lowering a price and only disposing of the choice blooms, while the greater amount of the stock left on hand goes to waste.

Alpha Elberfield.

CYCLAMEN.

I have some exceptionally nice cyclamen now in 4-inch pots. The seed was sown in October. Now for the trouble: They have begun to blossom, which I do not want them to do before December. They have plenty of root room. What can I do for them? W. C. T.

Your experience is by no means an unusual one. Frequently some of the seedlings will start to throw flower buds in June or July. Pick these out when sufficiently large to handle, and the fact that a few flowers have appeared thus early will not seriously affect their blooming qualities in late fall. Keep your plants either in an airy house, well up to the light, but shaded from strong sunlight, or, better still, in a coldframe where they can have a continuous passage of air at both the tops and bottoms of the sashes. Remove the sashes altogether on cloudy days and at night, unless rain threatens. A light shower will prove beneficial, but drenching downpours must be guarded against. Keep your plants in the frames until October, then move them into one of the houses. C. W.

DISEASED DELPHINIUMS.

Can you tell me what to do for my delphiniums? The leaves are covered with black spots. The disease spreads pretty fast. I have been thinking of cutting them off to the ground and burning the tops. What is your advice?

V. C.

We have frequently seen delphinium foliage attacked by a fungoid growth, such as you are being troubled with. Usually it affects the choice named varieties or those propagated from cuttings or root divisions more than seedlings, which latter appear to possess somewhat greater vigor. Even these, however, fall a prey to the disease. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture every week or ten days, from the time the shoots appear above ground until spikes are well developed, will to a large degree reduce the ravages of the fungus, but even this will not entirely prevent it. We would recommend change of soil at least once in two years, and it will certainly be wise policy to cut down and burn the affected shoots. You may not have the disease again for a number of years. It seems to require particular weather conditions to bring it into existence and spread it. C. W.

CALLAS.

How can callas be carried over, that are in solid beds, and used for cutting? Have been used one season. J. H. C.

Callas should be lifted now. Store them quite thickly in boxes of earth and stand outdoors. Water sparingly for a short time. When foliage has died down, take out and store the tubers in dry sand until wanted. C. W.

PLANTS BROKEN BY HAIL.

Will carnation plants which are badly cut up by hail be of any use for next winter? Many of the plants have fine stems left on them. Is there any danger of stem-rot on such stock? L. A. G.

It depends altogether on how badly your carnation plants are broken up by the hail, as to whether they will be fit to use for next winter or not. I would clean away all shoots and leaves that are broken off and let the plants stand. If they are well established and not broken too badly they will likely start anew from eyes which were dormant, and by housing time there may be an abundance of new shoots started which will make very fair plants.

As to stem-rot attacking these plants, I would say that I would not fear that very much. Hail storms are usually followed by cool weather, which is unfavorable to that fungus, and by the time the weather gets hot again these cuts and bruises will all be healed up. However, if you see any signs of it, or fear it may attack them, I would advise you to spray the plants with Bordeaux mixture. Get a gallon can from your supply man and apply as directed on the can. With an automatic sprinkler you can go over a good sized batch of plants in an hour or two and it may save you many dollars.

A. F. J. B.

CUTWORMS ON CARNATIONS.

We are sending you, under separate cover, an Enchantress carnation with a slug of some sort on it, just as it was picked from the carnation house. Will you please inform us how to dispose of this pest? Several buds were found which had been tunneled, evidently by this worm. D. S. M.

The specimen you sent was one of the common cutworm variety, which has been quite troublesome to carnation growers throughout the country this season. The quickest way to get rid of them, if they are numerous, is to poison them with a bait made of bran, molasses and Paris green. Take a small quantity of coarse wheat bran and mix with it enough New Orleans molasses to make it moist. Then add enough Paris green to make it deadly poison. Drop a little of this here and there, where you know the cutworms are. They are fond of this mixture and will devour it in preference to the carnations, and if the Paris green is of good quality it will soon end your cutworm troubles.

There is, however, on the market a lot of adulterated Paris green, which is no more effective than dust gathered up in the street. We ran across a box of that kind this spring and know from experience that this is a fact. A pure insecticide law is sadly needed, though of course it should be worded so that it would not work harm to honest goods through misunderstanding. A. F. J. B.

THE SEMI-SOLID BED.

In a recent issue of the Review Mr. Baur recommends semi-solid beds for carnations. Now, would he state how long he has been using that kind and how long a filling of soil lasts? L. G. G.

I notice that you have referred in the Review to semi-solid beds. Please inform me as to the best way of heating.

H. G.

As these two inquiries both relate to the same subject, I will answer both in one. We installed our first bed with cinder drainage in the summer of 1901. This was a 5-foot bed, 180 feet long. Across the walk was a raised bench of the same size and against each side of the 25-foot house was a 3½-foot bench. The semi-solid bed was planted to White Cloud and Elma, a light pink variety, while the raised bench was planted to White Cloud, E. Crocker and The Marquis. During the whole season the White Cloud on the lower bed were as good as, or better than, those on the raised bench. The Elma were better than we had them the year before, when they were on a raised bench.

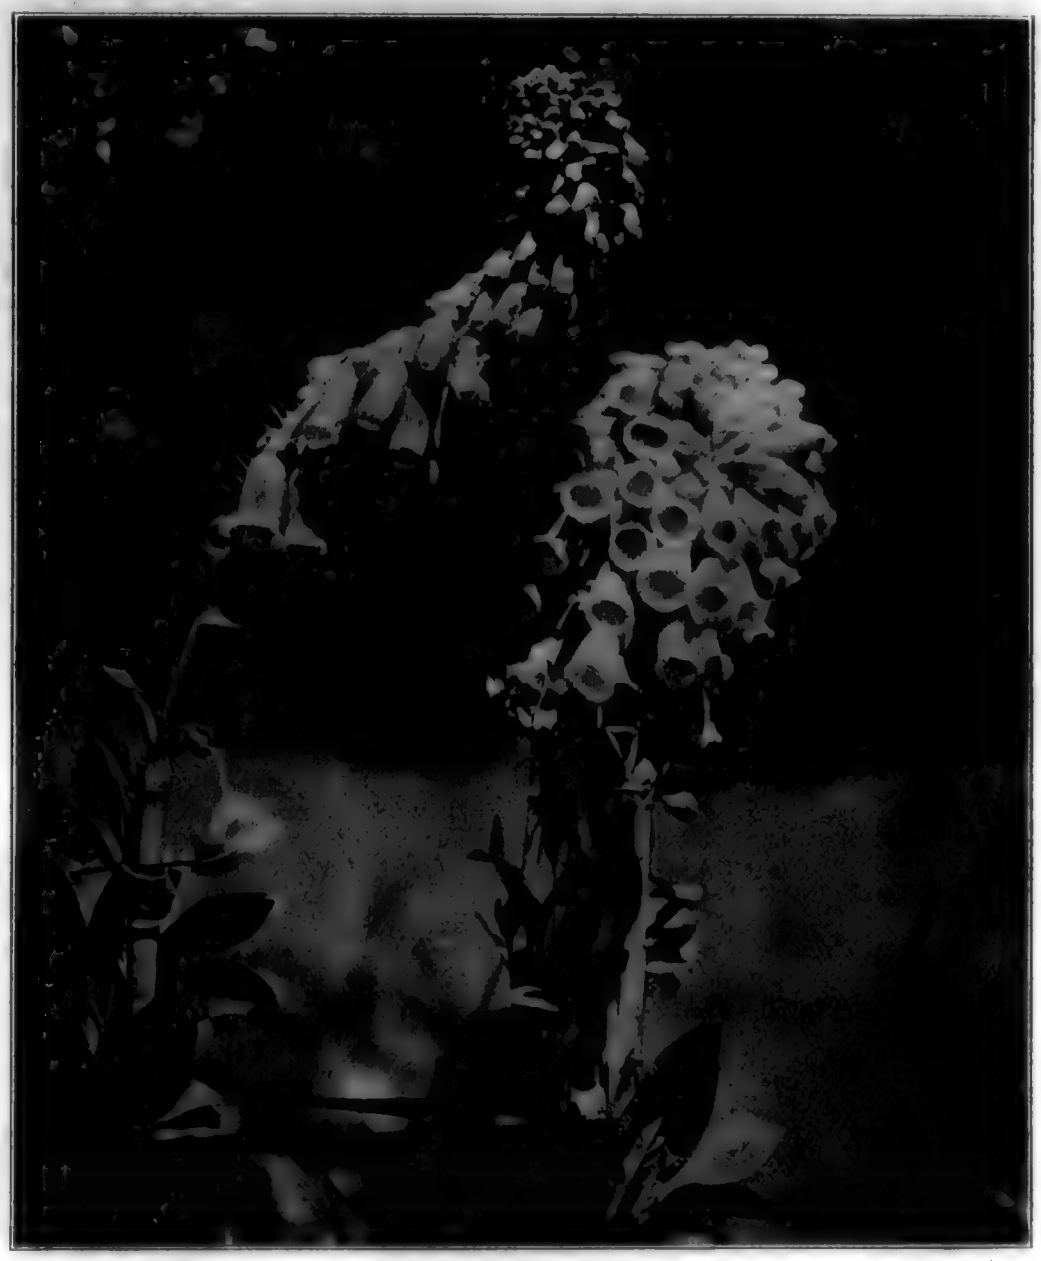
The next season we added several more beds of this kind and planted with other varieties, such as Lawson, Indianapolis, Mrs. Joost, Flora Hill, G. H. Crane, etc., and in every instance was the stock as good as, or better than, the same varieties had been on raised benches. So we installed this style of bed as rapidly as the raised benches gave out and needed replacing, and in all our new houses we have installed this style of bed.



Last year we experimented some with tile, to see whether they would make any improvement over our original style of construction. We buried three rows of 4-inch tile in the cinders, lengthwise of the bed, with the top of the tile even with the surface of the cinders. About every twenty-five feet we put in a cross tile, to connect the three rows with the outside. I am sure these tile did not make an iota of difference in the crop, either in quality or in quantity, and we noted the results carefully.

Now, it may be argued that these cross tiles were not numerous enough, but in answer to that I will say that the plants growing over or near the cross tiles and those near the ends of the beds showed not the least improvement over those farther away, nor over those in the other beds. If there were anything in this tile theory, the plants growing on or near the tile ought to show it, at least in a degree. If there had been even a slight difference in the plant growth, I would be willing to concede the point. And also, if the difference would amount to 5 per cent in favor of the tile bottom, I would hasten to put tile bottoms into every bed on the place. In short, as I have said before, we are convinced that we are making money by using our present style of beds.

Now as to the arrangement of the heating pipes. First let me say that you seldom find two growers who, when they build, will arrange the heating pipes just alike, even under the same conditions, unless the one is copying from the other. The idea is to get your pipes placed so that the distribution of the heat may be even all over the house, and also so that the circulation, and the drainage of the pipes of condensation, may be perfect. We run all our pipes in pairs, each pair making a circuit. One pipe is run overhead, being supported by the purlin posts, while the return pipe runs alongside of the north side of the bed and near the ground. This pipe is fastened to the posts holding the side of the bed. Each 30-foot house has four of these circuits and any one or all of them can be shut off by valves properly placed. This plan may be modified by any one who may prefer less overhead heat, by using one overhead pipe for two return pipes or by feeding entirely from the far end, from one pipe, etc.

Raise the lower pipe far enough from the ground so that, in working, the foot may slip under the pipe without coming in contact with the pipe. If placed so, they will be very little in the way. Do not be afraid of red spider along that side. We find not the least difficulty in keeping them away.

We use the soil only one season and refill every summer, just the same as with raised benches. We use only four inches of soil, so why should it last any longer than it would on a raised bench? I do think, however, that four inches of soil on this style of bed will last as long as five inches will last on a raised bench, because none of the plant food is washed away through watering. A. F. An Abnormal Digitalis.

AN ABNORMAL FOXGLOVE.

I am sending herewith a photograph of a plant growing on my place. It is a Digitalis gloxiniæflora. The photograph shows two spikes, which to me are unusual in this plant. Normally, the flower stalks are single, round stems, studded with the bells, but in this instance the stalk is flat, fully two and one-half inches wide, and, as can be seen, carries an abnormal number of flowers. The stalk to the left of the picture has the same characteristics as the other stalk, but is not quite so wide. Only the edge of it is shown. There are two normal stalks on the same plant, which do not appear in the illustration.

This plant has attracted a great deal of interest, but whether it has any special value, I do not know. It has a wonderful head of flowers, which the photograph does not show to advantage, as the picture was made for the special purpose of displaying the width of stem, but enough is shown to indicate the character of the plant. SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Springfield Florists' Club held its annual outing June 20 at Eicholtz park.

NAMES OF BEGONIAS.

We are forwarding to you today by mail samples of begonias, for which we would like to have you give us the correct names, if possible. We have received plants of Begonia Cuprea from a well-known Ohio firm, and plants of B. Haageana from Henry A. Dreer, and find that they are identical and would like to know which one of the two names is the correct one. W. B.

1. Ricinifolia.
2. Probably a seedling from a small, spotted-leaved variety.
3. Schmidtiana.
4. Wisetonensis alba.
5. Zebrina.
6. Diadema.
7. Argento-guttata.
8. Albo picta.
9. Probably a seedling from argenteo-guttata.
10. A miniature form of nitida alba.

I think B. Haageana is the other begonia you speak of having received from two sources. The firm sending it under this name is a reliable one.

W. N. CRAIG.

SANDUSKY, O.—On account of a general protest of the property owners in the neighborhood of West park, the new city conservatory will not be erected in that park, as had been planned, but will probably be located, instead, in Huron park. The residents on West Park street declared in strong terms that they did not want the new greenhouse erected on the park facing their property.

WOOD PRESERVATION.

Retarding Decay by Seasoning.

The simplest way of prolonging the life of timber exposed to the attack of wood-destroying fungi is to reduce the moisture content of the wood. The amount of water in green timber varies according to the part of the tree from which the wood is cut. The outer layers of the trunk are composed of sapwood, the cells of which contain large amounts of organic substances which serve excellently as food for the fungi. Moreover, sapwood always contains a large amount of water. It is the portion of the tree, therefore, most susceptible to attacks from fungi. Heartwood, which can usually be distinguished from sapwood by its darker or more reddish color, contains, on the other hand, much less moisture. It is therefore more durable than sapwood. But because its pores are stopped up by gums and resins it dries out much less rapidly than the more porous sapwood. In almost every case as much care should be taken thoroughly to dry out the heartwood as in the case of the moister sapwood.

By piling the timber so as to permit free access of air all around it, the moisture content of timbers of certain sizes can be reduced to about fifteen or eighteen per cent. Of course the climate has a great influence on the rate at which the wood dries out and the total amount of moisture it loses.

The moisture content of air-dry wood can be still further reduced by kiln-drying; and this is employed to a considerable extent, but usually for other purposes than increasing the durability of the wood. Moreover, either air-dry or kiln-dry wood has the power to reabsorb moisture when exposed to the atmosphere in damp situations, and so the benefits of drying, as far as durability is concerned, are only moderate. Yet the increased life which it gives is, in nearly all cases, more than sufficient to repay the added cost of seasoning.

The strength of partially seasoned timber, other things being equal, increases as the amount of moisture it contains decreases. Thoroughly seasoned timber of small sizes is sometimes three or even four times as strong as the same timber when green. Moreover, during the process of drying out, important but little understood changes take place in the organic contents of the wood cells, by which the wood is not only rendered less attractive to fungi, but is made more permeable and so better prepared for preservative treatment. All timber should be thoroughly seasoned before being exposed to decay.

An exterior coating secured by dipping a post in a thin solution of cement or other material that will harden on the post is not an effective protection, because in shrinking or swelling the wood forms cracks through which decay enters.

Retarding Decay With Chemicals.

By far the best method of checking the growth of fungi, however, is to deprive them of food. This can be done by injecting poisonous substances into the timber, and so changing the organic matter from foods suitable for fungi into powerful fungicides. It is a mistake to suppose that the germs of decay are inherent in the wood, and only need an opportunity for development to bring about its destruction. Several processes for the preservation of wood have been founded on the false assumption that it is necessary to destroy the "germs" in the interior of the timber. The impression doubtless arose from the fact that, after a stick of timber begins to rot, it is impossible to tell just where the fungus spores germinated and gained entrance into the timber. Moreover, the fact that the interior of the wood may have reached an advanced stage of decay before there are any external evidences of the fungi—such as fruiting bodies, or films of mycelium—tends to convince the casual observer that decay starts from the interior. Yet the wood-destroying agencies start from the outside. This explains the efficacy of certain paints which merely form a superficial coating over the surface of the timber, but which are poisonous enough to prevent the spores from germinating, or the hyphæ of most forms of wood-destroying fungi from penetrating into the unprotected wood in the interior. The ancients were in the habit of painting their statues with oily and bituminous preparations to preserve them from decay. The great wooden statue of Diana at Ephesus, which was supposed to have descended miraculously from heaven, was protected from earthly decay by oil of nard. Pettigrew extracted the preservative fluids from the heart of an Egyptian mummy that had resisted decay for over 3,000 years, and found that decomposition immediately set in. This showed that it was the presence of the antiseptics which prevented decay, and not a chemical change of the tissues.

NAGEL'S HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made in one of the houses of E. Nagel & Son, Minneapolis. Their glass is all devoted to the production of stock for their retail store, so of course a great variety of stock is being grown. Nagel & Son say they have had an excellent season. Business has been perhaps not so good as it would have been with a little more favorable general conditions, but all the stock produced has been sold and the average results have been satisfactory. Present indications are for a good season next fall and winter, for the northwest is looking forward to big crops this year and much of the farmers' money gravitates to the Twin Cities.

A TEMPLE SHOW GROUP.

A feature of the annual exhibition at London, known as the Temple show, is the numerous large groups of plants, such as are seldom seen at American exhibitions. One of these groups is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is Metrosideros floribunda, the bottle brush tree, or flaming bush of Australia, which is seen in small numbers as a Christmas plant in the principal cities of the United States. The Temple show is an event of May.

Asters.

Asters should receive good attention from now on. The earliest batches should be giving a few flowers by this time, not of as fine quality as will be seen six weeks hence, but now, when roses and carnations are daily deteriorating in quality, they will prove valuable, especially in funeral work. Keep the cultivator constantly at work among the little plants and even during dry weather it is surprising how fast they will grow.

With the passing of cutworms, which are more or less destructive each season in many places among asters, they have no immediate enemies to fight. On the first symptoms of aphis at the root apply a nicotine solution, or whale oil soap, at the rate of one pound to eight gallons of water.

The last sowings should now be gotten in without delay and advantage taken of showery days to transplant earlier batches.

Summer Lilies.

The lilies which have been grown especially for summer blooming will soon start to open their flowers. Stake up the shoots, if you have not already done so, particularly in the case of L. auratum, the large flowers of which will soon weigh it down. A light bench, abundant water supplies and shade from the sun's rays should be afforded.

During the hot months, when choice white flowers are by no means abundant, L. speciosum album is invaluable. The varieties roseum and rubrum can also often be used in design work. The powerful odor emitted by L. auratum is rather objectionable. It is better used as a piazza rather than as a house plant. Keep the yellow stamens picked out of the flowers. It is a pity to do this, but to keep the petals clean it is a necessity. By holding some of the plants back in a cold house, a longer succession of bloom will be afforded.

Speaking of summer lilies also reminds us of the fact that retarded bulbs must be started toward the end of July if wanted for winter blooming. The small sizes of speciosum can go in 5-inch pots, larger ones in 6-inch. Some growers plant in boxes six inches deep, with excellent results. The white speciosum will be found the most useful winter variety. After potting or boxing, place in a cool pit or under sashes, which are covered with shutters to exclude the sunlight and prevent the soil drying out. Leave the sashes tilted both top and bottom, to admit air.

Rambler Roses.

It may seem somewhat like repetition to again refer to rambler roses being grown for forcing for next Easter, but too often in the rush of spring and other work they are sadly neglected until other duties slacken, by which time it is too late to make up for omissions. If you are growing them in pots, by all odds the best plan for those to be forced early, keep the shoots securely tied up and be sure to use the spray nozzle so freely that red spider has no chance to secure a foothold. Keep these plants under glass for some weeks yet.

If you are growing your plants outdoors with the intention of potting up in late fall, as some successful specialists do, it is just as necessary, for the thorough ripening of the canes, not to let them ramble over the ground. Stake them up individually or erect a temporary fence of wooden posts and one or two strands of galvanized wire to tie them to. Remove the weakest shoots and allow the plant's strength to go into three or four strong growths rather than double the number of weaklings. A hosing overhead on the evenings of hot, dry days will be helpful in checking the attacks of aphis and red spider.

Palms and Ferns.

This is a season of rapid growth, and all plants which are kept under glass will now need frequent spacing to prevent their becoming overcrowded. With palms this is less apparent than ferns, but even with them growth is now being greatly accelerated and it may be necessary to spread some of them out a little. Be sure that there is sufficient shading on the glass. One or two clear panes may mean the ruin of valuable plants. Always keep a moist atmosphere and avoid coddling if you want stock which will do you credit later. You can grow plants rapidly by a sweltering process, but these will go to pieces quickly if used for decorative purposes. Palms which have the pots or tubs matted with roots should receive liquid manure once in ten days. To tone up foliage pale in color, use some soot or nitrate of soda, the latter in weak doses.

Ferns are now making rapid headway and it will be found necessary to pot on many of the smaller ones. Use a good proportion of leaf-mold with the loam for compost, but avoid manure, unless it be a little, old and well decayed, which will crumble up in the hands. Always use sand freely.

Shell snails are now troublesome on adiantums. Lay traps in the form of lettuce or cabbage leaves and examine these daily. Also scatter some air-slaked lime under the benches, as well as among the pots where they are proving destructive. The cooler you grow your adiantums, nephrolepis, pteris and other ferns, the more texture they will have. This applies to plants both planted out in benches and in pots.

Syringe Overhead Freely.

During the hot summer months, when temperatures are commonly 85 to 90 degrees in the shade or over, it is necessary to damp down the paths and under the benches quite frequently to keep a healthy, growing atmosphere under glass. It is also helpful to spray such plants as chrysanthemums, gardenias and others being grown under clear glass several times a day in torrid weather. There may be some who still labor under the delusion that foliage must not be wet when the sun shines or the leaves will be burnt. Such fables are laughed at by practical growers, who know that this syringing of the foliage is most refreshing to the plants during enervating days. Hard-wooded plants outdoors also greatly enjoy a thorough hosing at midday in hot weather, in addition to one in the evening. Of course, there are a few plants which will not stand wetting of the foliage without burning, if placed in the full sun. There are, however, varieties which require some shade at all times, such as gloxinias, gesneras and tuberous begonias.

Pruning Hardy Shrubs.

If not yet attended to, now that the spring rush is over is a suitable time to do necessary pruning on any of the hardy flowering shrubs, such as diervillas, spiræas, philadelphus, deutzias and others. Cut out any dead or weak wood, also any which has flowered heavily and contains no green growths. Give every encouragement to the new shoots, more particularly those coming from the base of the plants. A short time spent on this work will give you much more shapely shrubs next season and those which will flower more profusely.

All seeds should have been removed from rhododendrons, kalmias and lilacs. They greatly weaken the plants if left on.

Cultivate freely around all deciduous shrubs and see to it that rhododendrons have a heavy mulch of leaves to keep the roots cool and moist.

Trimming Hedges.

Now is a good time to give hedges, of the popular but reliable California privet, a shearing. Where it succeeds, there can be no better hedge plant than this, but in severe winters it cannot be depended upon. A much hardier plant is the Japanese variety, Ligustrum Ibota, but this does not make so dense and ideal a hedge as the California variety, so we presume people will persist in planting the latter.

Berberis Thunbergii is the best of all deciduous shrubs for a hedge. It is a mistake, however, to shear it in much, as thereby much of its beauty is lost. Allow it to grow as naturally as possible, merely shortening in the long shoots.

The present is also a good time to do some trimming on hedges of Norway spruce, hemlock spruce, arbor-vitæ and other evergreens. These should not be sheared like topiary specimens, but merely have the straggling shoots shortened back in such a way that no pruning is apparent.

Group of Metrosideros at the Temple Show, London.

General Outdoor Work.

The more constantly you keep the hoe or cultivator at work, the better your crops will grow. Quite a little hand-weeding will be needed, especially when there are young seedlings. Do not leave these in picturesque piles to adorn the landscape, but remove to the rubbish heap.

If your sweet peas are not mulched keep them clear of weeds and well hoed among. To make them bloom freely remove all seed pods as they form. If the weather is dry let a sprinkler run between the rows, changing it every three or four hours.

If asters show signs of aphis at the roots, pour tobacco water around those affected.

Keep the loam piles clear of weeds and if you have not yet chopped down and mixed up your compost for carnations and other crops, do so at once.

Remove ashes and other debris. Keep your front entrance neat and attractive. It pays to keep a good appearance, especially if you are catering to a home trade. The grower who persistently neglects to keep even his own lawn tidy need not be surprised if would-be customers pass him by for his neater and more up-to-date neighbor.

THE READERS' CORNER.

A Lesson From Experience.

We are sending to the Toledo market some fine sweet peas, of which we are justly proud. We have Burpee's new White Spencer and also the new Pink Spencer. We cannot see any difference between the new Pink Spencer and the old Countess Spencer. Florists prefer Dorothy Eckford to the new White Spencer, as the former is stronger stemmed and its flowers are of firmer texture. We have had only one or two Spencers with crinkled or waved standards.

A good motto for a florist is this: "Never count your chickens before they are hatched."

As we have only been in the florists' business about three years. I do not feel competent to furnish information valuable to others. The Review is a fine paper; I should not want to be without it. We have often read in the Review of the damage rats could do in a greenhouse, but we calmly slept all last fall while Mr. Rat's feet went pit-a-pat up and down the cellar steps of our greenhouse. Just before Christmas, when we were watching every carnation bud, he got in his work, and it was surprising how many buds and blossoms Mr. Rat could carry away in one night. "Experience is a dear teacher, but fools won't learn from any other."

An Inquiry From Havana, Cuba.

Some years ago I saw a machine in Kansas for weaving lath with wire so as to make a fence that can be taken down very easily. I would like to know where I can buy such a machine. Also in building lath houses for plants, I would like to know which is the better way to run the lath, north to south or east to west.

I have started in the wholesale florists' business here and would like to receive quotations on all plants that are suitable for tropical countries.

....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES....

Wilmington, O.—George H. Moores, proprietor of the Wilmington Floral Co., has sold out to H. E. Mitting, of Kokomo, Ind.

Liberty, Ind.—The firm of Tharp & Cully has been dissolved. Edward Cully, having purchased his partner's interest in the firm, will continue the business as heretofore, at the plant known as the City Garden, on North Market street.

Sterling, Ill.—Some months ago Robert Lundstrom, of the Sterling Floral Co., received a few choice orchid plants from a friend in South America, and the plants are said to be so rare as to be a feature of much interest in the greenhouses. The blooms began to appear on them June 20 and attracted many visitors.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—The florists' business of Herman Bros. has been incorporated under the name of Herman Bros. Co. Articles of incorporation were filed June 22.

Cumberland, R. I.—William Taylor, a florist of Lincoln, an adjoining town, was probably fatally shot June 24 when he attempted to assist Chief of Police Philip Bishop, of Lincoln, in arresting Louis Demalas, a Greek, 19 years old.

Richmond, Va.—The new greenhouses of Ratcliffe & Tanner will soon be finished, and this added glass, with other improvements that are being hurried to completion, will about double the firm's capacity for business. E. L. Tanner, who is at the head of the greenhouse department, returned recently from a two weeks' tour of the north, where he visited some of the large greenhouses and selected some species of orchids, palms, ferns, roses, etc., which have heretofore been little known in this city.

Derry, N. H.—W. J. Kingsbury advertised in the local papers that he would have an auction sale, June 20, of bedding plants and of tomato and cabbage plants, in order to clean out his stock, preparatory to making alterations in his greenhouse benches.

New Haven, Conn.—George Hunter returned June 18 from a year's sojourn in Australia and New Zealand. After staying several weeks in New Zealand, he had spent most of the remaining time in Australia. He reports his trip as a most enjoyable one.

Columbus, O.—At a meeting of the Columbus Florists' Club, June 24, Albert Knopf was presented with a beautiful locket charm engraved with a handsome floral design and the club monogram. Mr. Knopf is about to leave for California, to be gone for at least two years.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—Otto Hansen and E. E. Nordwall, former employees of P. L. Larson, have organized the North Floral Co., which has been incorporated with $10,000 authorized capital, and will build a range of houses. Otto Hansen is named president, in the articles of incorporation; J. H. Schaffner, vice president, and Elmer E. Nordwall secretary and treasurer.

Lowell, Mass.—James J. McManmon, whose grounds and nursery at Brookside are already noted for their attractiveness, has purchased from the proprietors of the Essex Co., at Lawrence, the land along the river bank fronting on his property. He intends to lay out the space between the river and the railroad tracks in a park, with lawns and various kinds of shrubbery and trees.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—The Nassau County Horticultural Society gave its first annual exhibition of roses at Pembroke hall, Tuesday evening, June 23. Medals were awarded for the best exhibits. These were presented by Adolph Jaenecke, of Floral Park, president of the society, and by C. H. Bertanzel, of the Wheatley Gardens, Roslyn. A silver cup was given by Ernest Pester, of Glen Cove.

Bar Harbor, Me.—The Mt. Desert Nurseries' uptown office and flower store, which last fall was moved directly across the street, is receiving extensive alterations and repairs. The front of the building has been torn out and a handsome set of plate-glass windows that extend nearly half around the building have been put in, while the block is being painted an attractive shade of gray.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Walter J. Hasselman was arrested June 22 on a warrant signed by Humane Inspector John Shine, charging cruelty to animals. Mr. Hasselman gave bond and was released. He will fight the case, which the Humane Society is interested in pushing. According to Inspector Shine, Mr. Hasselman caused Charles Fellows, an employee, to cut the throat of a bulldog which had seized Mr. Hasselman's fox terrier in a grip which it was evident nothing but death would release.

James S. Wilson and His Staff Upon the Occasion of His Leave-taking.

STROUDSBURG, PA.—Howard Stone's branch store, above Hotel Fulmer, has been closed for the summer season. During the summer the business will be carried on at 383 Scott street.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Mrs. James McMahon, the florist on Grove street, was married June 29 to James E. Kelly, formerly police commissioner. It is said that Mr. Kelly met his fate several months ago while ordering flowers at Mrs. McMahon's store.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Karl P. Baum, son of Charles L. Baum, was married June 25 to Miss Agnes Idelle McCampbell. The couple will return from their wedding trip about July 15, when it is expected that their new residence, at Smithwood, will be completed and ready for their occupancy.

IRONWOOD, MICH.—The greenhouses and stock of R. Lutey were damaged by a storm which raged here for an hour on Thursday evening, June 18. The extent of the loss is not definitely known, but is believed to be heavy. Showers of hail were borne on a forty-mile gale from the west, and most of the west windows were shattered in the residences of this locality.

CORNING, N. H.—W. J. Cheney has sold to Dr. F. H. Starr, of West Pulteney street, the two front greenhouses at 256 West Pulteney street, for removal to the Reynolds property near by. The work of removing the greenhouses has already been begun. Dr. Starr has arranged with Eugene Dusenberre, of Geneva, a nurseryman, to conduct an up-to-date florist's establishment, using the glass from the older greenhouse in the new structures.

TESTIMONIAL TO J. S. WILSON.

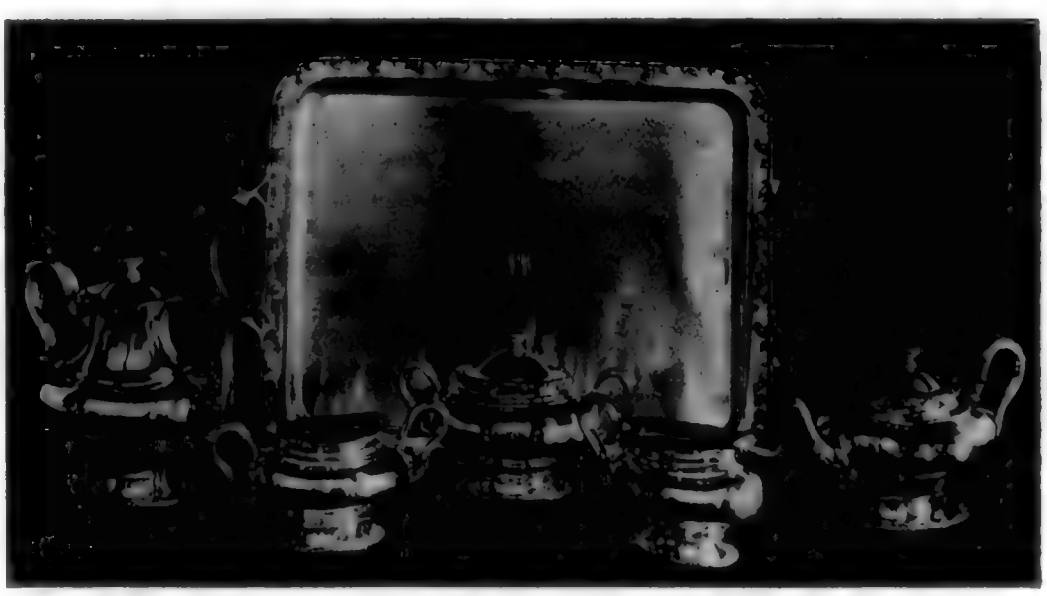
On Wednesday evening, June 24, the employees of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., had a great surprise in store for James S. Wilson. The surprise was the presentation of a silver service of six handsome pieces, each piece monogrammed, as a farewell gift to Mr. Wilson, who had resigned the management of the establishment, to take effect July 1, to manage his own greenhouses at Des Moines, Ia. Accompanying the gift was a most appropriate card, giving the following sentiment:



"We bestow upon you this small gift as a token of our appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us, and all join in wishing you the greatest success in your new undertaking."

The card bore the signature of sixty-eight employees, many of whom had been with Mr. Wilson for many years. After the presentation and when Mr. Wilson had "come to" he went out into the greenhouses, where the boys had all gathered, eager to see the effect of their good will, and amid great cheers made a fine speech, which was loudly applauded. The happiness of giving and receiving was surely mutual.

It has been stated that Albert T. Hey, of Springfield, Ill., will be Mr. Wilson's successor.

A VALUABLE HYBRID PEONY.

Through the courtesy of M. René Rouhard, of the nursery of the Museum of Natural History of France, I have been able to see what promises to be a valuable break in peony hybrids, says a writer in the Gardener's Chronicle (London). In 1900 Mons. L. Henry crossed Peony Ville de St. Denis with the new Peony lutea, and the resulting cross has now flowered for the first time in Paris. It produces flowers both on the terminal and the lateral shoots, thereby following the habit of Peony lutea. The flowers produced on the terminal shoots are large, well formed, double, and yellow in color; but that on the lateral shoot is as interesting as it is beautiful. The shape it has assumed is that of a large, double, yellow begonia, tipped with rose, and on the first examination it can hardly be distinguished in shape from the latter flower. If only this form can be definitely fixed, we shall at once obtain a valuable and original addition, in shape as well as in color, to our herbaceous peonies. The Jardin des Plantes is to be sincerely congratulated upon the success of the first attempt of this cross.

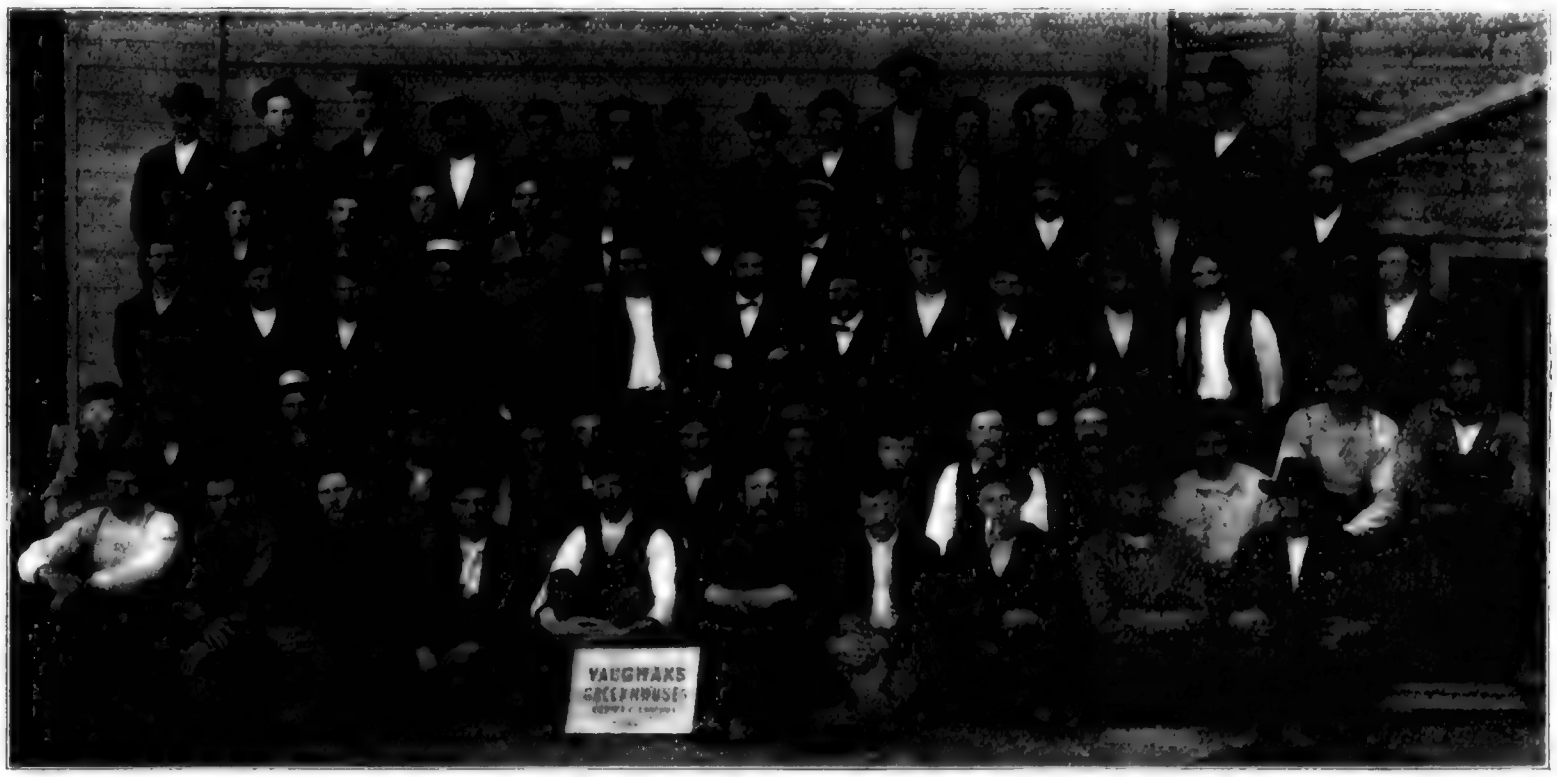
Tanner, who is at the head of the greenhouse department, returned recently from a two weeks' tour of the north, where he visited some of the large greenhouses and selected some species of orchids, palms, ferns, roses, etc., which have heretofore been little known in this city.

Derry, N. H.—W. J. Kingsbury advertised in the local papers that he would have an auction sale, June 20, of bedding plants and of tomato and cabbage plants, in order to clean out his stock, preparatory to making alterations in his greenhouse benches.

New Haven, Conn.—George Hunter returned June 18 from a year's sojourn in Australia and New Zealand. After staying several weeks in New Zealand, he had spent most of the remaining time in Australia. He reports his trip as a most enjoyable one.

Columbus, O.—At a meeting of the Columbus Florists' Club, June 24, Albert Knopf was presented with a beautiful locket charm engraved with a handsome floral design and the club monogram. Mr. Knopf is about to leave for California, to be gone for at least two years.



Fort Dodge, Ia.—Otto Hansen and E. E. Nordwall, former employees of P. L. Larson, have organized the North Floral Co., which has been incorporated with $10,000 authorized capital, and will build a range of houses. Otto Hansen is named president, in the articles of incorporation; J. H. Schaffner, vice president, and Elmer E. Nordwall secretary and treasurer.

Lowell, Mass.—James J. McManmon, whose grounds and nursery at Brookside are already noted for their attractiveness, has purchased from the proprietors of the Essex Co., at Lawrence, the land along the river bank fronting on his property. He intends to lay out the space between the river and the railroad tracks in a park, with lawns and various kinds of shrubbery and trees.

Glen Cove, N. Y.—The Nassau County Horticultural Society gave its first annual exhibition of roses at Pembroke hall, Tuesday evening, June 23. Medals were awarded for the best exhibits. These were presented by Adolph Jaenecke, of Floral Park, president of the society, and by C. H. Bertanzel, of the Wheatley Gardens, Roslyn. A silver cup was given by Ernest Pester, of Glen Cove.

Bar Harbor, Me.—The Mt. Desert Nurseries' uptown office and flower store, which last fall was moved directly across the street, is receiving extensive alterations and repairs. The front of the building has been torn out and a handsome set of plate-glass windows that extend nearly half around the building have been put in, while the block is being painted an attractive shade of gray.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Walter J. Hasselman was arrested June 22 on a warrant signed by Humane Inspector John Shine, charging cruelty to animals. Mr. Hasselman gave bond and was released. He will fight the case, which the Humane Society is interested in pushing. According to Inspector Shine, Mr. Hasselman caused Charles Fellows, an employee, to cut the throat of a bulldog which had seized Mr. Hasselman's fox terrier in a grip which it was evident nothing but death would release.

James S. Wilson and His Staff Upon the Occasion of His Leave-taking.

STROUDSBURG, PA.—Howard Stone's branch store, above Hotel Fulmer, has been closed for the summer season. During the summer the business will be carried on at 383 Scott street.

WHITMAN, MASS.—Mrs. S. A. Moir will continue to conduct the store in the Snow block, which she recently fitted up. The store here was not included in the sale that she made of her Brockton establishment.

ALLIANCE, O.—The storm Friday night, June 19, did considerable damage at the greenhouses of the Lamborn Floral Co. Nearly 150 of the large panes of glass were broken, and many valuable plants in the beds outside the green houses were destroyed.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Mrs. James McMahon, the florist on Grove street, was married June 29 to James E. Kelly, formerly police commissioner. It is said that Mr. Kelly met his fate several months ago while ordering flowers at Mrs. McMahon's store.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Karl P. Baum, son of Charles L. Baum, was married June 25 to Miss Agnes Idelle McCampbell. The couple will return from their wedding trip about July 15, when it is expected that their new residence, at Smithwood, will be completed and ready for their occupancy.

IRONWOOD, MICH.—The greenhouses and stock of R. Lutey were damaged by a storm which raged here for an hour on Thursday evening, June 18. The extent of the loss is not definitely known, but is believed to be heavy. Showers of hail were borne on a forty-mile gale from the west, and most of the west windows were shattered in the residences of this locality.

CORNING, N. H.—W. J. Cheney has sold to Dr. F. H. Starr, of West Pulteney street, the two front greenhouses at 256 West Pulteney street, for removal to the Reynolds property near by. The work of removing the greenhouses has already been begun. Dr. Starr has arranged with Eugene Dusenberre, of Geneva, a nurseryman, to conduct an up-to-date florist's establishment, using the glass from the older greenhouse in the new structures.

TESTIMONIAL TO J. S. WILSON.

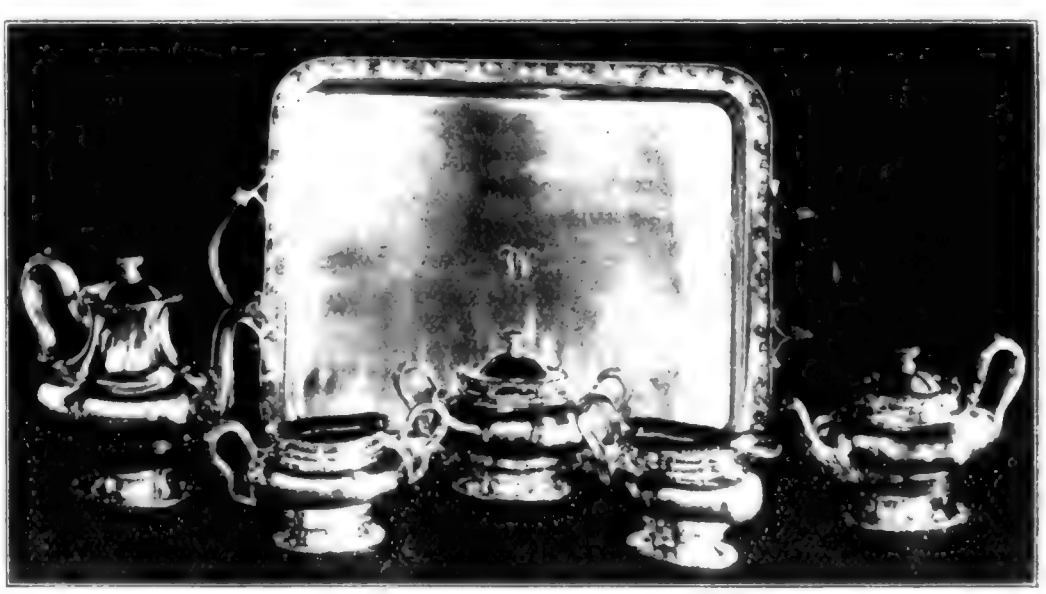
On Wednesday evening, June 24, the employees of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., had a great surprise in store for James S. Wilson. The surprise was the presentation of a silver service of six handsome pieces, each piece monogrammed, as a farewell gift to Mr. Wilson, who had resigned the management of the establishment, to take effect July 1, to manage his own greenhouses at Des Moines, Ia. Accompanying the gift was a most appropriate card, giving the following sentiment:



"We bestow upon you this small gift as a token of our appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us, and all join in wishing you the greatest success in your new undertaking."

The card bore the signature of sixty eight employees, many of whom had been with Mr. Wilson for many years. After the presentation and when Mr. Wilson had "come to" he went out into the greenhouses, where the boys had all gathered, eager to see the effect of their good will, and amid great cheers made a fine speech, which was loudly applauded. The happiness of giving and receiving was surely mutual.

It has been stated that Albert T. Hey, of Springfield, Ill., will be Mr. Wilson's successor.

A VALUABLE HYBRID PEONY.

Through the courtesy of M. René Rouhard, of the nursery of the Museum of Natural History of France, I have been able to see what promises to be a valuable break in peony hybrids, says a writer in the Gardener's Chronicle (London). In 1900 Mons. L. Henry crossed Peony Ville de St. Denis with the new Peony lutea, and the resulting cross has now flowered for the first time in Paris. It produces flowers both on the terminal and the lateral shoots, thereby following the habit of Peony lutea. The flowers produced on the terminal shoots are large, well formed, double, and yellow in color; but that on the lateral shoot is as interesting as it is beautiful. The shape it has assumed is that of a large, double, yellow begonia, tipped with rose, and on the first examination it can hardly be distinguished in shape from the latter flower. If only this form can be definitely fixed, we shall at once obtain a valuable and original addition, in shape as well as in color, to our herbaceous peonies. The Jardin des Plantes is to be sincerely congratulated upon the success of the first attempt of this cross.

Testimonial Presented J. S. Wilson by Employees of Vaughan's Greenhouses.

SOIL STERILIZATION.

I desire some information in regard to sterilizing soil for indoor use. I have a bin, 5x14x40, for compost and intend to inject steam through six runs of 4-inch tile to heat it. Kindly advise if the plan is right. What temperature should it reach before letting cool? Any suggestion will be gladly received. Can we use about half sod compost and half soil out of bench? J. H. C.

While I have never tried drain tiles for sterilization purposes, I see no reason why they should not answer perfectly well. Perforated iron pipes are most generally used, these being made up into frames ten to twelve feet long and eight to ten feet wide. The Sargent sterilizer is also much used. It consists of an iron frame four or five by eight or ten feet, provided with perforated teeth a foot apart and ten to twelve inches long, these teeth being thrust into the soil and steam turned on. The first method requires a low pressure of steam, fifteen to twenty pounds, and a large volume, the latter a high pressure and smaller volume. The soil should have a temperature of 185 degrees. You can use half sod and half bench soil, but the former is to be preferred. C. W.

OBITUARY.

George T. Sambrook.

George T. Sambrook died at his home in Watervliet, N. Y., June 21, after an illness of about six months. Mr. Sambrook was born in England 70 years ago, but came to this country when a young man, and had resided in Watervliet for fifty years. For forty years of this time he had been in the florists' business. He was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in the Ninety-third New York Volunteers, and was seriously wounded at the Battle of the Wilderness. Three sons and a daughter survive.

William B. Leeds.

William B. Leeds, the American financier and former Rock Island railroad magnate, who died in Paris June 23, deserves a place in the mortuary record of the Review from the fact that he was once a florist at Richmond, Ind., his native place. He was born in 1861 and was in the florists' business in Richmond for some five years, under the name of Leeds & Co., of the Cascade Rose Nursery, purchased from A. K. Williams and founded by E. Y. Teas. He was much interested in plants and flowers and had worked up a fine catalogue trade; E. G. Hill was foreman for him until 1880. Mr. Leeds was a mere lad when he took up the florists' business, a young man of charming personality, but not at that time foreshadowing his later success except in the wonderful enthusiasm which he put into the work at hand. He finally went into bankruptcy in 1883 and soon after took up railroading under General Superintendent J. F. Miller, on the Richmond Division of the Pennsylvania railroad, and rose to be one of the country's leading railroad magnates and financiers, being estimated to be worth $35,000,000 at the time of his death.

Robert Boeck.

After waiting anxiously all night for the return of Robert Boeck, 62 years of age, Hyde Park, Cincinnati, Mrs. Boeck made a search June 26 and found her husband's body in a cistern under the floor of a greenhouse. Death is believed to have been accidental. Mr. Boeck disappeared early the previous evening. His wife believed he had gone on an errand and did not worry over his absence until late in the night, when she became alarmed at his failure to return. It is believed that the boards covering the cistern mouth gave way under him as he walked over them. As the cistern is not more than five feet deep and five feet in diameter, it is thought that in falling he struck his head, causing unconsciousness, and that he drowned while in that condition. About a year ago Mr. Boeck was severely injured in a runaway accident. He became entangled in a rope with which he was leading a horse and the animal dragged him several hundred feet.

Mrs. George Williams.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends goes out to George Williams, of the Taunton Greenhouses, Taunton, Mass., in the loss of his wife, which occurred June 23, the interment being June 26.

Mrs. Rhinehart.

The death is reported of Mrs. Rhinehart, mother of Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, Pa., who is well known as a grower for the Philadelphia market, where much sympathy for her is expressed.

John Wilkinson.

At the age of 80 years, John Wilkinson died of erysipelas, June 18, at his home in Mittineague, a suburb of Springfield, Mass., after a sickness of four weeks. This was the first time he had been confined to his bed for over twenty years.

He was born in England, where he learned his trade of nurseryman and florist. At the age of 25 he came to America and entered the employ of Homer Fort, who had a private greenhouse at the south end of Springfield.

After a few years he built a range of greenhouses near his former employer's place. Soon afterward he started a store on State street, now owned by N. F. Higgins, the florist. After five years at this stand he opened a store at 331 Main street, but, not finding this latter stand profitable, he removed to Agawam and engaged in the violet business. Later he erected a range of greenhouses on Plainfield street and seven years ago he removed to Mittineague, taking the greenhouses of H. Wilson Smith. These he conducted, with the aid of his son, until his death.

Although troubled with rheumatism, he was always able to keep at his work, which he seemed to love. As a close neighbor remarked, he hardly took time to eat, but hurried back to his work as though he enjoyed his flowers more than his meals. He was always pleasant and kind to everyone.

A peculiar incident in relation to his death was that three days later H. Wilson Smith, who formerly carried on the same greenhouses, died of consumption at his home, adjoining that of Mr. Wilkinson.

The funeral was held Sunday, June 21, from his residence, with interment in Oak Grove cemetery. There were many floral tokens of sympathy from his business friends and neighbors.

He is survived by his son, William, who will continue the greenhouse business.

Marcus Ellis.

Marcus Ellis, the senior proprietor of the Ellis Bros. Co.'s greenhouses, at Keene, N. H., died at his home Saturday afternoon, June 13, of a heart trouble, at the age of 62 years.

Mr. Ellis was a son of Enoch and Marcia Ellis, of Royalton, Vt., and was born in that town September 1, 1845. He was educated in the public schools and at Royalton Academy, and when 19 years of age removed to Keene, where he afterward lived. He entered the iron foundry of his half brother, the late Moses Ellis, of Keene, where he learned the trade, and went into partnership with his brother, remaining there until 1880, when he left that business to take charge of the greenhouses which he had established with his brother, Albert, in 1874, the firm being Ellis Bros., florists and seedsmen. Albert Ellis went to Wichita, Kan., a number of years ago, but Marcus continued the business under the same firm name. Four years ago Mr. Ellis suffered a shock of paralysis, which left him in a much enfeebled condition, and later he took into partnership Frank Chapman, and formed the Ellis Bros. Co., which still continues.

January 1, 1874, he married Miss Kate C. Goodnow, who survives him. Besides his widow, Mr. Ellis leaves four children, Carleton, of New York city; Gertrude C., who has taught school in Shelburne Falls, Mass.; Ruth E. and Theodore G., of Keene. He is also survived by two brothers, George, of Royalton, Vt., and Albert, of Wichita, Kan.

David Gindra.

David Gindra died at his home on Delafield street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 20. He was the oldest florist in that vicinity.

John W. Minott.

John W. Minott passed away at his home on Summer street, Portland, Me., June 23, after an illness of nearly ten weeks. Mr. Minott was born June 26, 1834, a native of the West Indies, and followed the sea the greater part of his life until he settled in Portland and started the florists' business thirty-two years ago. He was always one of the leading citizens of his city and a host of friends will be grieved to learn of his death. Mr. Minott leaves a widow, Eliza D., and two adopted children, Frank L. Minott, of Portland, and a daughter, Mrs. H. I. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions showed some improvement last week, there being a good call for graduation and other exercises as well as weddings. A quieter market now rules and midsummer dullness, with few ripples to break it, is probable for some time. White roses have been in good demand and appreciated in value as a consequence. Kaiserin is the dominant variety. Some fair Liberty is seen, but Richmond is poor. Killarney keeps its position as the leading pink rose. There is still a good supply of carnations, but the quality leaves much to be desired. Sweet peas from outdoors are now abundant and sell as well as anything on the list. Valley moves more slowly. It has had a good call for several weeks.

Lilies are not abundant, but are ample for all calls. A few speciosum have made their appearance. Asters are not yet plentiful and have quite short stems. Gladioli are scarce, but there are plenty of cornflowers, stocks and other miscellaneous flowers, for which demand is light.

Various Notes.

The early closing movement will commence in many of the flower stores this week and employees will start on their vacations in a number of cases.

Edward MacMulkin has had a number of large wedding orders of late and reports an excellent June trade.

The sports committee is at work securing premiums for the club picnic at Pine Banks park, Malden, on July 29. A reduction in the number of athletic events is favored by many.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is busy on additions to his greenhouses.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, reports the best trade in geraniums and other bedding plants since he was in business.

Four big pay exhibitions are being planned for 1909 at Horticultural hall, with a number of smaller ones sandwiched between them.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is being kept busy these days picking tomatoes, of which he has a fine crop in his houses.

Members of the New England Dahlia Society are predicting an exhibition in Tremont Temple, Boston, in September, the like of which has never been seen in America.

A number from Boston and vicinity visited the annual rose show of the North Shore Horticultural Society June 23 and report an excellent exhibition.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual rose and strawberry show of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held in a large tent on the lawns of the Essex County Clubhouse, Manchester, June 23 and 24, and was a pronounced success in every way.

Roses were finely shown. For the best table of roses, arranged for effect, by ladies only, Mrs. George E. Cabot, Patrick Corrigan gardener, won the gold medal offered by W. E. Doyle. For fifty blooms, teas or hybrid teas, Mrs. James McMillan, F. F. Brasch gardener, won the Farquhar silver cup. The same exhibitor won a gold medal offered by Samuel Knight & Sons for the best table arranged for effect. For six hybrid perpetuals, Mrs. A. G. Thayer, J. McGregor gardener, was first, and William Swan second. The same exhibitors won for three blooms. For twenty-five mixed hybrid perpetuals, William Swan was first and Mrs. A. G. Thayer second. For best basket, arranged for effect, Miss Mary Bartlett was first and William Swan second.

For collection of delphiniums, William Swan captured the Highwood cup with an excellent assortment. For group of foliage and flowering plants, Mrs. Lester Leland was first and William Swan second, each securing a fine silver cup. William Swan easily secured the silver cup offered for twenty-five varieties of perennials, also a special for twelve distinct hybrid perpetual roses. Mrs. Lester Leland had the best display of gloxinias and William Swan the finest achimines. Mrs. James McMillan led in the sweet pea collection class.

Breck's special prize for vegetable collection went to Mrs. Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener, Rawson's special being won by Mrs. Gordon Abbott. For best and largest collection vegetables, Mr. Salter was again in the lead, Mrs. Lester Leland second.

W. W. Rawson & Co. had an extensive collection of sweet peas in 100 varieties, which received an award of merit. Mrs. E. S. Grew, A. E. Parsons gardener, captured a special for Frau Karl Druschki roses. H. A. Dreer had a fine tank of water lilies.

James McGregor, gardener to Mrs. A. G. Thayer, sailed from New York June 27 on a visit to Scotland. A number of friends visited him June 25 to wish him bon voyage and presented him with a handsome suit case.

W. N. CRAIG.

LAURIUM, MICH.

A. M. York, who has his headquarters at Hancock, has made plans for the remodeling of his branch store here, at the corner of Third and Osceola streets. The main entrance of the remodeled establishment will be at the corner, while a glass front, facing Third street, will be put in and extensive alterations in other parts of the building will be made.

The store will be managed, as heretofore, by Mrs. Nordquist, who will give up her millinery trade. The remodeled store will be one of the most up-to-date establishments of the kind north of Chicago.

Allow me to say that

is a very welcome guest and its coming is always awaited with interest. I cannot understand how anyone in the trade can do business without it. To those who are in doubt I would recommend, "Try The Review."

Respectfully,
A. D. ZIMMERMAN.
Ottawa, Kan., June 22, 1908.

ST. PAUL.

The fifth annual flower show of the Minnesota State Rose Society was held in the exhibition room of the St. Paul Dispatch building, Fifth and Minnesota streets, Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 30.

The following members of the trade were appointed to act as judges: Olaf J. Olson, August S. Swanson and Fred Nussbaumer, of this city, and John Monson, of Minneapolis.

RICHMOND, IND.

Word received from E. G. Hill, who was called to Paris some weeks ago to be a judge at the international rose show, indicates that the stock sent by the local florist will not be eligible this year, owing to the fact that the plants were only sent abroad in March and it is understood that the plants must be in France one year before they can be entered in the competition. This is probably done to allow the rose bushes to become acclimated and therefore grow their choicest blooms.

Mr. Hill will remain in Paris for two or three weeks and is not expected to return to Richmond before August 1.

WASHINGTON.

Excepting a spurt now and then, there is not much doing, and hardly enough stock to do with at that. Some fairly good Beauties are being shipped here from the north.

The local florists decided to use bay trees and spruce for the decoration for the Municipal building. Trees and palms will be used on the balustrades and spruce to cover the soil, to give a lawn effect. This is to be finished on the evening of July 3 for the celebration July 4.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Thos. F. Buchanan, gardener to Grant Hugh Brown, at Brownleigh Park, Goshen, N. Y., has a splendid lot of Cardinal nectarines and Crawford's Early peaches in full crop, grown in pots in an orchard house, part of a large range built by the Lord & Burnham Co.

Alex. Bonnyman, gardener to J. M. Fuller, Warwick, N. Y., had charge of the decorations at the swell wedding of Miss Fuller last week. It was conceded to be the finest seen in this locality.

The Yuess Gardens Co., Newburgh, N. Y., is breaking ground for an additional house, to meet the increasing demand for cut flowers.

A. Gilbert, of Middletown, is the latest addition to the professional ranks. He has a snug place, with good land.

Frank X. Dienst, of Middletown, N. Y., is busy throwing out and replanting carnations. Enchantress is a leader. He reports increasing business.

PLANTING STRAWBERRIES.

At a university experiment station it was desired to start a new plantation to furnish fruit the following year. An old strawberry patch which contained some excellent varieties had just finished bearing. The plants which were most prolific were marked with stakes, and a plot of ground was carefully prepared beside the old patch. At the first signs of rain the marked plants were lifted, with the spadeful of earth adhering to them, and carried to the new ground. About 1,000 plants were transplanted in this manner. They grew rapidly, so vines covered the ground by winter and they bore bountifully the next spring.

A moderate rainfall distributed through the summer is required to make the plants thus treated grow rapidly. This method of planting has many distinct advantages. It permits of the careful selection of prolific plants; hence in improvement by selection it is valuable. It gives the plants more time to grow than those set in the fall; it gives more time to cultivate and destroy all weeds, allows the gardener to start his new plantation after the old one has borne and permits the old patch to be plowed under and the weeds destroyed before maturity.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

IF the ground where you intend to plant peonies in September is not well drained, don't fail to get at it during the summer.

THE National Council of Horticulture concluded its season's series of press bulletins June 24 with the statement that it is hoped to continue the service next year.

THE Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., states that, in spite of the generally dull times, it has installed more Skinner irrigation than in any previous year. A number of contracts of good size have been secured and the volume of mail orders is steadily increasing.

How about the window-boxes you filled for your customers? Are the plants in need of food or water now that the roots pretty well fill the soil? Why not take a look at a few of them to see how well you did your work and what treatment your customers are giving the plants?

POSTAL RECEIPTS FOR MAY.

Postal receipts at the fifty largest postoffices in the country for May, which have just been tabulated at the Postoffice Department at Washington, show a loss of 4.79 per cent, as compared to the corresponding month of the previous year. The total postal receipts for the fifty postoffices aggregate $7,072,464 for the month, as compared to $7,429,007 for May, 1907, a decrease of $356,542. All but seventeen of the fifty offices on the list show decreases.

It is thought to be significant that most of the seventeen offices showing increased receipts are located in the west, an indication that the business depression was less severe in that section than in the east.

AN EXPRESS DISCOUNT.

Edward Reid, the well-known wholesale florist of Philadelphia, who has large shipping interests in the south, noticed the other day that the express companies allow a discount of twenty-five per cent in weight on certain specified commodities requiring ice to keep them in proper condition during transit. This list includes trees for setting out, branches of pepper trees, bulbs, cacti, celery and celery plants, cut ferns, decorative greens, holly, cape jasmine and mushroom spawn, but for some reason it does not include cut flowers. The discount is to cover the weight of ice.

Mr. Reid asked his express agent whether he would allow him a discount of twenty-five per cent in weight on his shipments of cut flowers. The express agent at first seemed inclined to look favorably on so reasonable a proposal, but on consulting his classified list said he found that it could not be done. Mr. Reid asked for a copy of the classified list to take home. This was declined, but he was finally allowed to copy the list in the express company's office.

Mr. Reid believes that cut flowers have been inadvertently omitted from this list, because while the express agent claimed that the list is made up solely of necessities, and that cut flowers, being a luxury, are not entitled to be on it, a glance at the above items shows that many of them are no more necessities than are cut flowers.

Mr. Reid has written to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington calling its attention to this discrimination against cut flowers, and asking that the matter be rectified. He believes that it is the duty of every wholesaler and shipper in the country to protect his customers, saving them any unnecessary express charges, and to this end suggests that the Society of American Florists take up the matter at its annual meeting next month and appoint a committee with instructious to secure the admission of cut flowers to the classified list on which the twenty-five per cent discount in weight for icing is allowed.

The Great Central Market.

At the end of last week there were three days of active business, if at cheap prices, but this week begins with demand light. There was fine, cool weather for the week of the school closings and an immense amount of stock was handled, not so much locally as shipping. The volume of sales June 24 to 26 ran into a quite respectable sum of money. This week the commencements are over, and most of the weddings, so that the market is down to the usual summer basis.

There is a brisk demand for good roses, for these are scarce. Not only have most of the growers started the work of getting ready for next season, but there is more mildew than usual at this season, probably due to widely fluctuating weather conditions and a desire for fuel economy. It seems to be the same way in other cities and many are the telegrams calling for good roses, and intimating that nothing else will do. There is an abundance of Beauties, but only a few of them can be called good except by comparison with the others. The old crop runs largely to long stems. The young crop is better in quality but short in stem. Killarney is in excellent shape with most of the growers and is the best rose on the market today. Kaiserin holds its place as the best summer white, but it is not a good shipper. Bride and Maid are in many cases too poor to be useful and, while the best roses sell briskly at strong prices, the poor Maids and Brides are difficult to sell at any price.

Carnations are remarkably good. Some really first-class stock is seen and all carnations now are averaging of better quality than is the rose crop. Receipts have been considerably reduced, but there still are enough carnations for all requirements.

Peonies from cold storage are selling well. A large part of those put into storage by inexperienced people have been disposed of, either by cheap sales or going into the discard. Those now left are largely in the hands of the two oldest and most experienced firms, and are coming out in fair shape, although not so good as usual, due, it is thought, to the weather conditions at the time they were cut. Nevertheless, these peonies are now the best flowers of any sort to be had and they sell briskly at what the shippers say are satisfactory prices. The supply is likely to last at least another fortnight.

Valley has become almost a glut; there are oceans of it. The pressure of Easter lilies has subsided a little, but there are plenty. Auratum and candidum lilies are abundant. Water lilies are selling a little better, not higher but faster, for window decorations.

The outdoor sweet peas are coming in a flood, and June 29 the receipts were several times what the market could consume at profitable prices to the growers. Much of the stock is first-class; there simply is too much of it. Shasta daisies also are overabundant and all the items of miscellaneous flowers sell slowly because of large supply. Green goods are no longer in special demand.

All the wholesale houses are now closing at 5 p. m., and those who want stock shipped in the afternoon should bear in mind that the day is an hour shorter than heretofore.

The June Business.

The June business turns out to have been more satisfactory than was at first thought possible. There are, of course, a variety of reports, but a majority of the wholesale houses say their aggregate business for the month was not far different from that of last year, which was an excellent one. Of course, prices were considerably lower than a year ago, but supplies were larger, and on days when the demand assumed old-time proportions a large volume of sales was possible. Those houses which do the largest shipping business had the best of the June demand. Locally there was little call for commencement flowers, local retailers having done little but wedding and funeral work during the month, with an occasional order for some social affair, but nothing from the public schools. The shipping demand was strong, but it called only for select goods, either first-class roses or first-class peonies and a few carnations.

Drainage Canal Hits Trade.

A big force of graders is now working on the north channel of the Chicago drainage canal, south of Church street and one mile west of Evanston. Few residents of Chicago are aware of the location of this great and important addition to Chicago's drainage system. There are the haziest kind of impressions as to the line of a wide and deep canal that will pass good sized ships through to the exclusive retreats of Evanston and Wilmette within the next five years or less. Only one who has picked out the engineer's stakes of the canal on a tramp from Lawrence avenue to Wilmette has any true idea of the location of this new canal now building.

Several florists have property lying in the path of the canal north to Peterson Nursery, where a strip 600 feet wide is cut almost diagonally through the center of the property, taking sixty-five acres of land out of the best part of the nursery. The drainage commissioners offer Mr. Peterson $65,000 for his land, but have not yet met his views as to the damage due him for the effect on the rest of his property; he asks some $135,000 on this score. Arbitration is likely to be arranged for this week, to avoid legal expenses and delay.

The canal people take the east half of the property of A. V. Jackson & Sons, mushroom growers, for which, it is said, $600 per acre compensation has been offered.

The channel follows the slough out of Peterson's woods, leaving the slough halfway between Bryn Mawr and Peterson avenues. The center of the canal is the center of the crossing of Peterson and Kedzie avenues. Along Kedzie to Devon the channel veers slightly to the west, but from Devon to Church street in Evanston the big waterway will run as straight as the crow flies. For over five miles, standing at Devon avenue, one may within the next few years watch water craft traversing the once great prairies west of the north shore suburbs.

New Year's.

Wholesale florists and Chinamen are alike in one respect: they each have a little private New Year's day of their own. The wholesaler begins his year July 1 and many of them are busy casting up the year's record. Needless to say, all are hoping for better things in the year to come, but to many the year's record does not look so bad as they thought it would. Some find that the increase in the first six months has offset the falling off which many found in the last half of the year. Increased supply has been the factor which has made a good record for some of the commission houses, for prices unquestionably have been lower than in 1907, and the grower has stood the brunt of it. Most of them are hard at work preparing for the new season. It has been impressed upon them that the man with the best quality has the call on whatever business is going in times of large supply and, if present intentions bear fruit, the quality of stock produced for this market next season will be better than it ever has been before.

One especially pleasant feature of the season's business is the fact that the decrease in the flower trade has not been nearly so great as in most lines; flowers can no longer be classed among the luxuries, if this season's experience is of any value.

Various Notes.

L. Bauman & Co. are now located in their new building on Chicago avenue, where they have large warehouse facilities and plenty of room to grow. They retain their salesroom at 76 Wabash avenue.

A. L. Randall and family went to their summer home at St. Joseph, Mich., June 29.

At 9 o'clock on the evening of June 26 a Fourth of July balloon fell in the narrow space between the Stollery residence and the greenhouse establishment of Stollery Bros., setting fire to the establishment when everyone was away from home except the children. Ten-year-old Percy Stollery got out the greenhouse hose and extinguished the fire before the fire department arrived.

Mrs. W. E. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's store force, is on her annual vacation, and Joe, the shipping clerk, is also away this week.

far it has not been so good a season as last year, but they say they did not expect it to be, and now peonies are selling excellently, because there are few other good flowers to be had.

Both John Mangel and O. J. Friedman have had metal pans put in the window for aquatic displays during the summer.

N. J. Wietor leaves July 5 on his annual fishing trip in Wisconsin and probably will be accompanied by John Sinner.

C. W. McKellar is receiving some fine Cattleya Gaskelliana, but says the demand has fallen off. He also is receiving gardenias.

E. C. Amling says that if the latter half of the year is as good as the first six months he will have no reason to complain. He says that increased supply has enabled him to increase his business, as compared with the same period of last year, in spite of the lower prices which have prevailed.

John Poehlmann says he is satisfied with the June business, for it has turned out about as last year, in spite of several dull days in the month. He says the demand for good roses is stronger this week than any time in June.

Charles Northrup, who has a well established reputation as a grower of sweet peas, is sending large quantities of his specialty to Kennicott Bros. Co. The time was when he had the early market for outdoor sweet peas practically to himself.

Miss Martha Gunterberg, who conducts a flourishing commission business in the Flower Growers' market, went to Fairmont, Minn., July 1 for a visit with relatives, expecting to be absent several weeks, during which Sinner Bros. will handle her stock.

One of the week's visitors was W. H. Trimble, president of the Trimble Greenhouse Co., at Princeton, Ill. They opened a store in the business center this spring and have had a fine trade.

Louis Wittbold and family have been spending a few days as guests of Mrs. Wittbold's parents in the country.

Vaughan & Sperry say asters are expected in force in a few days.

It is reported on good authority that one commission house jettisoned 2,000 dozens of the early crop of peonies, which, in hopes of stronger demand, went into cold storage with poor keeping qualities.

The democratic committee to pick the organization slate for the August primaries named Peter Reinberg for president of the county board, but he declined the honor. Mr. Reinberg has made so good a record in the city council that he is looked up to as one of the leaders of his party and his friends are anticipating the day when he will permit his name to be used at the head of the city ticket.

Last week was a hot one. Two or three days the thermometer touched par in some warm corners and the official record was 97 degrees. This took the tuck out of everybody and everything, so that the cut flower market could not help but join in the general lassitude. The school commencements used up the surplus, especially cleaning out the daisy and carnation departments.

Immense quantities of Crimson Ramblers reached the market in sprays of great beauty, but the demand for these was small. The best Beauties have held at 25 cents and Maids and Brides at 5 cents, the number of good ones being limited.

The good carnations grow less in quantity daily and bring fair prices, but the common stuff is still abundant and almost unsalable. The market is flooded now with sweet peas, phlox and outdoor roses. Gladioli are here from the south and shipments are increasing. Soon summer rates for these will prevail. Gardenias are perfect. John Scott distributed, to all in attendance at the growers' outing last week, flowers that would readily bring $10 a dozen in the winter season. The last of the peonies were fine stock and brought readily $1 a dozen. The Cottage Gardens Co. was still sending some fines ones as late as June 26.

In herbaceous stuff there is an abundance. Sweet peas are showing the effects of the long drought. Gladioli are ten days ahead of last season and the Long Island stock will be here in large quantities by the middle of July.

The green goods men have an abundance of pond lilies arriving daily. The call for orchids has been persistent and large quantities have been shipped to other cities. From now until September there will be enough of everything and to spare.

Great quantities of valley, orchids and roses were used last week by the friends of ex-President Cleveland, and nearly all the best designs were sent by New York florists.

The Plant Growers' Outing.

The first annual outing of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association took place Thursday, June 25, at the Huguenot Inn, on the ocean shore near Huguenot, Staten Island, and was a great success. The members of the association and their friends to the number of sixty took the Staten Island ferry at 10:30 a. m., and after a 10-mile trolley trip through the island and an auto ride to the beautiful resort chosen for their reunion, sat down at 1 o'clock to a shore dinner that was a credit to the association and the hotel.

There were present: President Anton Schultheis and Mrs. Schultheis, Vice-President F. L. Atkins and Mrs. Atkins, Treasurer Herman C. Steinhoff and Mrs. Steinhoff, Secretary W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., and Mrs. Siebrecht, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dreyer and Miss Dreyer, Mr. and Mrs. Duckey, Mr. Lehnig and Miss Lehnig, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marquardt, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. man of the outing committee, with his own carnations, while Julius Roehrs presented every lady with an orchid, and John Scott decorated the men with his choicest gardenias.

A splendid dinner was served at 7, quite the equal of any of the club's dinners in New York, and after an eloquent welcome by the president, Anton Schultheis, he put upon Fred Atkins the duties of toastmaster, a position Mr. Atkins filled with rare unction and success. Interesting addresses were made by Miss Mills, the able president of the Hinode Florist Co., and by Messrs Craw, Whilldin, Julius Roehrs, Sr., Louis Dupuy, F. H. Dressell, A. L. Miller, Secretary Siebrecht, Herman Steinhoff, John Scott, Alfred Zeller and Paul and Henry Dailledouze. Mr. Atkins and Mr. Schultheis both made interesting addresses, the keynote of all the speeches demonstrating harmony, loyalty and stability.

Various Notes.

The eighth annual outing of the New York Florists' Club took place Wednesday, July 1, at Wetzel's Grove, Point View, L. I., the same convenient and delightful resort where the club has picnicked so often and so successfully. There was a good crowd and every arrangement was perfect.

The Rickards brothers have both been visiting their patrons in New Jersey and New England and bring back optimistic views on the outlook. Will Rickards will represent the ancient house of Bridgeman's at the convention.

R. G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, and family returned last Friday from a week's outing in the Oranges. Mr. Wilson, who is president of the Brooklyn Retail Florists' Association, says the society has already 200 members and is growing weekly. He intimates a similar association will be established in New York by the retailers, the two working in harmony.

The referee in the bankruptcy of Hicks & Crawbuck, 76 Court street, Brooklyn, sold at auction, June 30, the stock and fixtures of the firm.

Mr. Hanfling, of the firm of Russin & Hanfling, returned last week from Europe and announces the selection of many novelties in the supply line and an enjoyable trip to his old home.

Samuel Woodrow, the plantsman, is making a successful trip through New England.

Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, are taking turns at their usual outings, one in his fishing smack adding to his stock of fish stories and the other shortly to begin his summer holiday at his old home in Rochester.

Joseph J. Levy, of John Seligman & Co., with his family, leaves next week for a sojourn in the mountains and resorts of Sullivan county.

Rudolph Asmus had the misfortune to fall and break his thigh last week. The accident is a most serious one and will put Mr. Asmus on the shelf for many weeks.

William Duckham, of Madison, will make his annual visit to Europe this week.

Frank Millang and family have moved to their summer home at Yorktown, N. Y., on the shores of Lake Katonah.

McKenzie Westwood, of the firm of Mengham & Westwood, 422 Columbus avenue, with his family, has gone for a visit at his old home in Canada and afterwards for Plattsburg, N. Y., on Lake Champlain, to be away until September 1. The new firm has had a satisfactory start.

The Dailledouze brothers, Paul and Henry, known everywhere as "the heavenly twins," leave this week for a trip to Denver, Yellowstone, Portland, Alaska and southern California, and it will be months before they return home. They will visit all the western florists in their travels.

L. B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Co., was a guest at the plant growers' outing last week, and voiced the interest of his house in the progress of the society and his readiness to do his share in increasing its capacity.

Miss Zeller, daughter of Alfred Zeller, of Flatbush, met with a painful accident June 25, falling downstairs, but fortunately escaped with severe bruises.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, leaves this week for his annual visit to Europe. His sons will manage the big plant in his absence and have added a steam launch to their other ambitious ventures.

Mr. Schumacher, of Pankok & Schumacher, Whitestone, L. I., is now in Germany.

Trepel, in Brooklyn, had the high school order, the rules this year making uniformity requisite. Enchantress carnations and field daisies in shower bouquets were largely used in all the schools.

J. H. Troy, who is a genial Irishman and not Englishman, as I was guilty of calling him a couple of weeks ago, is just completing the planting of over a mile of rhododendrons in Central park, the gift of Mrs. Russell Sage. Over 23,000 plants were used, and over $40,-

Bowling.

The New York bowling club completed its competition for the Traendly transportation prize June 26, and J. S. Fenrich was the fortunate winner of the reward, with an average for the eighteen test games of a fraction over 160. The other representatives of this city in the convention competition will be selected from those who have attended the club's meetings faithfully and have made the best average scores up to August 1, to which date the club will continue its Friday evening contests. Last week's score was:

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is quiet, yet with quite enough going on to keep the wholesale houses and retail shops fairly active for part of each day. The market conditions are rather curious. The extremely hot weather experienced during May and June has had its effect on local stock, to such an extent that really choice flowers, home-grown, are scarcer than one usually sees them at this season of the year. Their place has been taken by a wave of eastern-grown stock, notably Beauties and Killarney, for which there has been an excellent demand. While this eastern-grown stock is not always satisfactory, it is a godsend to the local market at this season. The flowers, being grown in a cooler clime, are larger and better colored than is possible under our broiling sun, and, thanks to careful packing, usually reach here in excellent condition. The high school commencement, a fashionable wedding or two, and some out-of-town affairs have created an excellent demand for these roses, as well as for Kaiserin and valley.

The demand for cattleyas has fallen off. Carnations are really scarce, stock that can truthfully be called choice being rarely seen. Peonies from cold storage are over. Double blue cornflower is a factor. Sweet peas are on the wane, owing to the heat and to the dry spell. Summer flowers have made their appearance in quantity, achillea, candytuft, gaillardia, coreopsis, pyrethrum, hardy phlox, and double white petunias being obtainable in quantities. They are not selling particularly well, but their presence helps fill out many orders. Asters have made their appearance, but not in a way to create a stir. Water lilies are fairly plentiful.

An Empire Wreath.

There is national interest in the funeral of ex-President Grover Cleveland, at Princeton, N. J., June 26. For this funeral Pennock Bros. received an order for a wreath to be made of cycas leaves, oak leaves from the tree in Princeton College grounds, and orchids. In order to have the wreath in perfect condition, it was made on the grounds. Seventy-five natural cycas leaves were used in the wreath, which was six or seven feet long, a bunch of 200 orchids being fastened at the bottom. Charles W. Kahlert, who saw all the flowers on the porch at Westland, expressed the opinion that this was the handsomest floral offering sent for Mr. Cleveland's funeral.

A Trip to New Jersey.

It has not been chronicled that Joseph Heacock, George Redles and C. S. Wertsner spent two days and two nights in the wilds of Jersey a short time ago. The object of the trip was to secure yellow cypripediums and rattlesnake skins. The route lay over the Pennsylvania Railroad to Jersey City, thence over the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western to Branchville, near Culver's Lake. The trio enjoyed a glorious tramp over the mountains, with a magnificent view from the top, and many snake stories, but nary a cyp or a rattler did they see. It was near indeed to leaving time when a countryman, learning of their quest, told them that his chum had mowed a whole row of yellow cyps off that morning to make room for a water-pipe, leaving just one. A special expedition was at once arranged to find that one yellow cyp, and I rejoice to relate the countryman proved conclusively that he was not a member of the Ananias and Sapphira Club, of Memphis, Tenn. (whose badge, you know, is a lyre), for there was the yellow cyp in its prime. I wish I could tell you that a rattler crept out from behind the water-pipe and that his skin was triumphantly carried home, but, though a newspaper writer, I am not yet on the waiting list of the A. & S. C., and I am obliged to confess that it took a specified number of pennies, it may be 250, to induce that countryman to part with his rattler skin, which was borne triumphantly home and exhibited to many admiring friends.

Wedding Decoration.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had an extremely handsome wedding decoration at Torresdale June 27, which Edward Habermehl was kind enough to describe for the benefit of REVIEW readers. The mansion was so large that the Messrs. Habermehl deemed it best to use Hydrangea Otaksa with the palms and ferns, there being no fear of dwarfing the proportions of the rooms. The color scheme was in pink and blue. Pink hydrangeas and blue hydrangeas were used in masses in the rooms on the ground floor, open to the wedding guests. Long strings of Asparagus plumosus were freely used. The bridesmaids' bouquets were of pink hydrangeas and cibotium ferns. The maid of honor had a combination bunch of pink and blue hydrangeas, something rarely seen. The mantels were banked with Killarney roses of exceptional quality for this season of the year, the flowers being large, well colored, and borne on long stems. The bridal breakfast table, which was circular and laid for twenty-seven guests, was decorated with Kaiserin Augusta Victoria roses, lily of the valley, and Adiantum Farleyense. The guests' tables, seating five or six hundred persons, on the lawn outside, were decorated with pink sweet peas. Mr. Habermehl said that the effect was fine.

Japanese Iris.

Automobiles, carriages, saddle horses and even four-in-hands were gathered at the Andorra Nurseries last week to bring guests invited by William Warner Harper to view the Japanese iris show. The show was one of the prettiest bits of scenery, surrounded by nature's setting, that it has ever been my good fortune to see. It is difficult to describe adequately. Fancy a moderate sized, circular piece of ground, nearly level, ensconced on the hilltop. In the center of this plot a beautiful display of many-colored irises, some growing, others in pots among growing plants. Nearly surrounding this a superb background of noble trees, divided from the floral theater by blooming plants of Chrysanthemum segetum and ferns on a gently sloping bank. Throw in a Japanese summer house, a stream, a rustic bridge, a fountain and walks, and you can form some idea of the exquisite beauty of the iris show at the Andorra Nurseries.

It was a departure—something different from the usual run of shows, something evidently appreciated by the flower lovers near and far. Samuel C. Moon came all the way from Morrisville to see that show and stated positively that every nurseryman should do such educational work. The Garden Club of Philadelphia, an exclusive association of ladies who stand for what is best of floral taste, came fifty or sixty strong and were loud (I use this word in its most refined sense) in their praise.

The enterprise of the Andorra Nurseries was further shown by a wonderful roadway, said to be two miles long, winding in and out through the nursery, so that visitors to this or other shows will naturally see the specimen trees and shrubs as they come and go.

Various Notes.

Arthur Cowee, of Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, N. Y., has kindly consented to speak before the Florists' Club at the July meeting, on gladioli. Mr. Cowee is a specialist who has been wonderfully successful, and his talk will be looked forward to with lively interest.

E. W. Goehring, of Frankford, a pioneer in the placing of peonies in cold storage, has decided that this was not the year to retard many of these flowers.

Edwin Lonsdale is said to have been seeking inspiration on the hills above the Wissahickon June 27.

M. Rice & Co. have received their first shipment of the new business year via the steamship Armenia.

Stewart Miller, who is with Edward Reid, left June 26 for the south in charge of an especially important shipment of choice flowers which Mr. Reid was unwilling to intrust to the express company.

DETROIT.

The Market.

With the month of roses over, business has decreased considerably, an occasional good funeral job being about the only thing to break the monotony. June seems to have somewhat exceeded expectations; the first part of the month was quiet, but toward the end it brightened up. The custom of sending flowers to the pretty girl graduates, and to the boys as well, is becoming more popular every year, and it is up to us to help it along.

Stock is plentiful and of good quality, considering the hot days we have had. Brides and Maids are small, but the color is good. Carnations are also small.

Sweet peas are holding on well. Those of a distinct color, as pink, lavender, red, etc., sell more readily than the variegated ones.

The local commission houses report a good month.

Various Notes.

Arthur Linke, Jr., of Alpena, Mich., was in this city recently to consult an eye specialist. While riding home from the depot in the dark, with a large box of flowers under his arm, he was thrown to the pavement, resulting in an injury to one eye. It is feared he will lose the eye.

A postal has been received by the writer from Wm. Hielscher, mailed at Portland, Ore. Mr. Hielscher left for the extreme west some time ago, in company with his mother, to visit several of his sisters.

Henry Fruck, gardener to the Berrys, of Grosse Point, sailed from Hoboken last Saturday for Germany, where he will spend several months at Carlsbad, in the hope of building up his health.

Hubert Pierce, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, was married to Miss M. Waltz on the evening of June 30. Miss Waltz comes from a family of florists, being a sister of Mrs. Taepke and Mrs. Flammer. Two of her brothers are also engaged in the same calling. Miss Waltz was in a retail store for some time.

The popular slogan of the Detroit Board of Commerce, "In Detroit Life is Worth Living," has been worked out by the park board employees in Grand Circus park. Much credit is due the park commissioner and his able staff of assistants for the manner work has progressed in the public parks this year.

B. Schroeter's plant is receiving thorough overhauling this season. Two houses were practically built over. A new house is also under way. Moninger's material is being used throughout. Mr. Schroeter is a firm believer in the policy of having modern houses.

An early closing wave has taken this city by storm. Most of the stores are displaying signs to this effect in some conspicuous place. Mr. Brown, who is located on Woodward avenue, the main

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business was pretty fair last week, especially the first part of the week, when quite a few of the last of the season's weddings were worked up. There was also a great deal of funeral work and, from reports, the June business was as good as in any previous June months. Now come the two dull summer months, when the retailer can refreshen his place, the wholesaler make alterations and the grower rebuild his houses for next season's business.

Our market has little fancy stock coming in at present. All the wholesalers have plenty of everything in season, but it cannot be classed as firsts, unless it be in Beauties. Other roses are soft and off color. The same can be said of carnations and sweet peas. Gladiolus spikes are coming in fine and sell well at present. Asters are scarce as yet, but they, too, will soon glut the market, as usual. All outdoor stock is in plenty, as well as smilax, asparagus and other green stock.

Various Notes.

Mrs. F. H. Weber, with a party of friends, left for Europe last week. Mr. Weber will follow this week and meet his wife at his home in Germany. They will be gone six weeks. Many of their friends in the trade are wishing them a pleasant trip and a safe return home.

Mrs. Kratz, wife of Charles Kratz, florist at Lindenwood, died last week. Mr. Kratz was well known in the trade, who extend to him their deepest sympathy.

John Kalisch, of William Kalisch & Sons, took a trip west for his vacation early last week. Before leaving he was married to Miss Studeman. The family was not aware of these plans until he and his bride had reached Denver, when a telegram announced the marriage. Congratulations will be in order when they return home.

Herman Gross, brother of Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, was married last week at Kansas City, Mo., to Miss Alice Murphy. Henry Wolfsberger accompanied the groom to Kansas City and acted as best man. All flowers used for the wedding were sent from the Gross place. The decorations at the house were arranged by Henry Wolfsberger, assisted by fifteen young lady friends of the bride. Mr. Wolfsberger, who is still a young man, with all the comforts of home, left for home after the wedding ceremonies without any leap year proposals. He says he was born lucky.

C. Fusch, of Milwaukee, lately with N. Zweifel, has taken the position vacated recently by Pierre Schneider, that of foreman for the Oakland Floral Co., Kirkwood, Mo. Mr. Fusch was also at one time foreman for the Bentzen Floral Co., and is reported a first-class man for the place.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is sending to this market a fine cut of fancy gladiolus spikes, which are in steady demand. F. W. Ude, Jr.; William Winter, Hugo Gross, F. Vennemann, A. Scheidegger, A. G. Ahner, the Oakland Floral Co. and others at that place are also sending to this market sweet peas and carnations. Kirkwood is becoming more in evidence every year as a growing center for this market. Nothing but carnations, violets and sweet peas are grown here the year around. It is also the home of the everblooming tuberose, originating with Luther Armstrong, the oldest florist of Kirkwood.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, reports that he attended the nurserymen's convention at Milwaukee recently, as the firm has gone extensively into the nursery business. On his way home he stopped off at Chicago and left orders for two new houses, to be built this summer.

Norman J. Coleman, ex-president of the American Association of Nurserymen, and D. R. ington avenue to the Free bridge at Chonteau avenue. Most of the property along the river front is owned by the Henry Shaw estate. The recent high water did much damage to the buildings along the front and they will have to be condemned. The city, therefore, could come into possession of this property at little cost, as the directors of the Missouri Botanical Gardens and Tower Grove park compose the Henry Shaw estate.

subs. Oscar Huetemann, the captain, says his team will win hands down.

Walter Retzer, vice-president of the St. Louis Seed Co., reports that business is keeping up well. The high water and the recent long spell of rain have helped them greatly in disposing of their surplus stock, as many had to plant over the second time, owing to washouts. Mr. Retzer expects to make a short trip west this week.

The return of our baseball team, the St. Louis Browns, in the lead for the championship, made quite a lot of work for the florists Sunday, as the players all received floral designs in all shapes. If we are benefited in any way we hope they will remain on top.

Next week, on Thursday afternoon, the July meeting of the Florists' Club will take place in Bowman's hall. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year will take place. The present officers have done their duty well the past year and we hope the new set will do equally well. The trustees will distribute the tickets for the picnic to the members. President Young is looking forward to a large attendance. S. A. F. matters will also come up for discussion, with special reference to transportation.

ELBERON, N. J.

The third rose and strawberry show of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held Monday, June 15, at Elberon hall. The classes of roses and strawberries were well filled and quality was much better than last year. There was good competition in all classes and the principal prize winners were: James Kennedy, G. Young, A. Bauer, B. Wykoff, A. Grieb, S. Sachs and C. G. Karney. A. Grieb's vase of campanula and J. Kennedy's vase of Phlox Miss Lingard received high commendation. Cultural certificates were presented to J. Kennedy, A. Bauer and B. Wykoff. The judges were W. D. Robertson, A. Rickards and B. Wood.

Edward Tatro has the foundations nearly completed for some additional greenhouses, which he intends to erect in the near future. In preparation for these building operations, he has been busy for some months filling in the low land along the river banks, so as to place his entire range of houses beyond the reach of the floods to which this region is subject.

Only a short time ago Mr. Tatro erected a number of greenhouses, which he has now chuck full of flowers. He is raising his own American Beauty roses, and after this summer, for the first time in the history of the town, it will not be necessary to import these flowers.

The new houses will be located north of those recently erected and will be similar to them in size and general construction.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

MAX HILDESHEIM, of the Imperial Seed & Plant Co., Baltimore, Md., will sail for Europe July 8, to make a two months' business trip through Germany, France and Holland.

A TENERIFFE exporter of onion seed says the farmers are always more or less apt to "mistify" seed crops, and that it is unsafe to buy stocks one has not a full knowledge of.

THE commission boxes of flower seeds were quite generally cleaned out of nasturtium, sweet peas and morning glories, the demand in many localities running largely to these three items.

THE prospect for the crop of onion seeds in California has not been materially affected by recent weather conditions. A fair yield is anticipated, but it must be considered that the acreage is short.

JUNE was a much better month than May, so far as weather conditions go, both in the eastern and middle western seed growing sections, and went some little way toward minimizing the effect of the late start.

UNDER the management of Walter Mott, the Yuess Gardens Co., Newburgh, N. Y., will exploit the wholesale end of its seed and bulb department, catering specially to florists, as well as seek to expand its mail trade with the public.

PACKING of peas in New York state is now under way. Reports from many quarters indicate that the output of early varieties will be short. Advices as to the outlook in Wisconsin are conflicting, some reports stating that the pack will be short, while others indicate that it will be of a fair average.

PETER BROWN, Lancaster, Pa., reports pansies yielding a specially good crop of seeds this year. He says the sale for home-grown pansy seeds is increasing steadily each year, and a number of growers are now doing a large business in it, in spite of the larger quantities of European seed that are imported.

GEORGE S. GREEN, who came to the presidency of the American Seed Trade Association when his personal qualities were little known to the garden and flower seed interests, has made a record for breadth of view, close analysis, moderation and toleration which stamps him as one of the broad-gauge men of the trade. His year at the head of the association was one of the most important in its history and his selection to lead the work for a national pure seed law is a guaranty that the matter will be ably handled, in whatever way it may next appear.

PRESIDENT GREEN'S VIEWS.

The Question of Seed Legislation.

At the convention of the Seed Trade Association at Detroit last week, President George S. Green set forth his views on seed legislation at some length, and after careful consideration. That part of the statement regarding the events which led up to sending a committee to Washington, and the hearing, is omitted because previously reported, but the conclusions drawn by Mr. Green are here given in full:

The Present Status.

At the close of the hearing we were assured that no further action would be taken upon the bill at that session of congress, and that our arguments, together with letters received by Mr. Mann, would be made a part of the records of the committee.

In this connection, I wish to acknowledge the courtesy and fairness which were shown us at Washington. Our arguments were heard with patience, ample time was given us, and I could see no evidence in any quarter of an intention to injure the seedsmen as a class.

The full account of the proceedings at the public hearing has been printed as a public document, and at my request copies were mailed to all members of our association.

It should be fully understood that the revised bill printed as a part of my statement on pages 34, 35 and 36, simply embodies the changes in the original bill suggested by our committee to Mr. Mann, and that none of these suggestions have been formally accepted by the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It should also be understood that the original bill is still on the calendar of the House of Representatives on the original report of the committee, and might be called up for action at the next session of congress without any modifications whatever.

I believe, however, that Mr. Mann will probably ask to have it again referred to the committee and that important changes will be made in it before it is again submitted to the house.

Need of Preparedness.

This brings to us the necessity of being ready to meet in a practical and efficient manner the question of national legislation regulating the importation of and interstate commerce in seeds.

Opinion among our members is doubtless divided as to the possibility of framing wise legislation on this subject, but I regard it as highly important that we show in some manner our interest in this subject and our earnest desire to maintain a high standard of business integrity in our trade. I believe that if we take the attitude of opposing all regulation, we shall lose an opportunity to assist in shaping a law which will be helpful rather than hurtful to honest dealers, and which may prove highly beneficial to the agricultural interests of our country.

I believe, furthermore, that if we should be shortsighted enough to oppose all national regulation of our business, it would only hasten the day when nearly every state will have a seed law on its statute books. These laws would probably vary one from another to such an extent that interstate business in seeds would be very seriously crippled, whereas a well-worded, just and effective national law would doubtless serve as a model for state laws which could easily be framed to conform to its conditions and thus restrict interstate business but slightly.

Must Work for Progress.

I feel confident that national legislation to prevent the importation of seeds used solely as adulterants and of low-grade seed containing large percentages of weed seeds, and to correct other abuses in the trade, is inevitable. It is in line with the great projects for the betterment of trade conditions and for the conservation of natural resources to which the present administration at Washington has practically committed the American people. If we try to stop this flood of public opinion with our little dam, we shall only find the water flowing over the top of it, and the whole works will go out with much damage to ourselves and to others, but if we work harmoniously with the people at Washington for the improvement of American agriculture, adding our practical business experience to their technical and legal knowledge, and thus secure a just and helpful law, which will really tend toward the planting of better seeds, we shall have the consciousness of having worked for progress rather than against it.

Unfair Competition.

There is a feeling on the part of some of our members that we are being discriminated against unfairly in the attempt to pass any law. When we consider the many abuses connected with some other lines of business which the law has never attempted to reach and the high average standard of morality and business uprightness among seedsmen, this view is perhaps a natural one, but I cannot altogether sympathize with it. The fact that the purchaser of seeds has frequently no means of knowing the real character of the goods he is buying is a temptation to the unscrupulous and the dishonest. It permits the growth of mushroom competition, which is an injury to the honest seedsmen as well as to the buyer of the unreliable goods.

We should welcome the opportunity to place our business on a higher plane, to eliminate dishonest competition and to help to save the soil of our country from the invasion of foreign weeds. We should have enough patriotism to give our hearty support to any measure which is really for the general welfare and which does not work an injustice to individuals. I am of the opinion that our business can soon be adjusted to a moderate and well-considered law, which does not require us to do what is manifestly impracticable, but which will prevent the importation of seeds unfit for seeding purposes, and will also provide for the punishment of deliberate and intentional adulteration of seed.

Reasons for Opposing Mann Bill.

The natural conditions attending the production of seeds, the tendency of plants to depart from fixed types, the production of sports, cross-fertilization of seed, the possibility of erroneous information from growers—these should all be carefully considered in making a law holding dealers responsible. The broad principle of equity that a man should be held to account only for his own intentional misdeeds should be made part of any such law.

I have opposed the original Mann Pure Seed Bill for the following principal reasons:

First—It provides heavy fines and prison penalty for offenses that may, and in practice undoubtedly would occur through errors or omissions of employees in improperly marking and packing or handling seeds; thus making innocent men criminals in the eyes of the law. This is repugnant to the American spirit of fairness.

Second—The law does not clearly provide for the exception from its provisions of seed while in transit or held in storage for the purpose of cleaning or grading, or while in process of cleaning or grading or held in storage after cleaning or grading, before being offered for seeding purposes. Such exception is absolutely necessary to avoid complete disorganization of existing methods of distributing and handling field and grass seeds.

Third—The third provision of Section 3, regarding the importation of seed containing dead seed, would absolutely prohibit the importation of many important varieties of vegetable seed, the best obtainable qualities of which in certain years contain over twenty-five per cent of dead seeds, which cannot be removed by any known process of cleaning; the same fact applies to clover and other field seeds, nearly all grades of which contain naturally more or less dead seeds, the percentage varying with crop and harvest conditions where the seeds are grown.

Fourth—The fourth provision of Section 3 would practically prohibit the bulking of various qualities of seeds, for the purpose of making uniform grades, because many merchantable and valuable parcels of seeds contain considerable percentages of dead seed and weed seed, and no dealer would feel safe under this section, as now worded, in bulking together a number of parcels of natural seeds, since the addition of a single bag of comparatively low vitality, or containing a comparatively large percentage of weed seeds, might be construed to be adulteration, even though in the process of cleaning the average quality of the entire bulking of seed had been greatly improved. This paragraph should certainly provide a penalty only for deliberate adulteration with intent to defraud the buyer.

Fifth—The bill undertakes to prohibit the export of certain grades of seed for which there is a demand abroad, and it is against public policy to restrict such export. Such a restriction would tend to cause the exporter to select only the highest qualities for export and thus retain the lower grades for domestic use.

Sixth—The natural and inherent conditions attending the production and distribution of grass, clover and field seeds are so totally different from those attending the production and distribution of vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs, that I believe that these two classes of trade should be separately provided for in any well-considered legislation, either by means of separate laws or separate paragraphs.

It seems to me that it should be pos-

LILIUM HARRISII

WE OFFER A SELECTED STOCK OF THE ORIGINAL TRUE HARRISII FOR EARLY FORCING.

These bulbs have been grown from the original pure Harrisii, and will be found to be splendid stock for early forcing, for which purpose Harrisii is so valuable. We have had the stock inspected, and are assured that it is almost absolutely pure and almost entirely free from disease. This is not stock picked up indiscriminately from different sources, but is grown from one stock and will be found very superior to the ordinary Harrisii usually offered, both in regard to freedom from disease and purity, and not the late type now so often furnished.

Lilium Harrisii has been deteriorating slowly for years, and in order to get back to the true type of the original Harrisii, we have had our stock grown from the original pure stock and it will be found very superior to the Lilium Harrisii usually offered. While the stock is A-No. 1, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices asked for indifferent stock.

We have only a limited quantity of this stock to offer, so it will be advisable to place orders without delay in order to insure securing this stock.

sible to eliminate the objections to this bill and yet preserve its evident intent to benefit American agriculture.

Subject Urgently Important.

It is urgently important that the subject of seed legislation receive the best attention which it is in our power to give it, and in this connection I strongly recommend that the two standing committees on seed legislation and on seed adulteration be consolidated into one committee. This will avoid any question of divided authority or responsibility. I trust a strong committee will be appointed, and I think that this committee should be authorized to secure legal advice at any time when they may deem it necessary, and that arrangements should be made so that they could draw upon some fund which would provide for all necessary expenses in connection with their work.

I also recommend that an earnest effort be made to secure a joint conference of this committee with representatives of the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and experts from the Department of Agriculture for the purpose of working out a fair and just law.

Integrity of the Trade.

In expressing a willingness to work toward the making of a law for the regulation of our business, it must be understood that we unhesitatingly assert that our trade now shows without such regulation a high average standard of integrity. Each year the average standard of quality demanded by the buyer of seeds and supplied by dealers tends toward improvement, regardless of any law. This improvement results partially from an awakened intelligence on the part of buyers, but very largely also from the constant efforts of dealers to improve the quality of the goods they offer for sale. This tendency will persist and may safely be depended upon to gradually correct all but the grosser forms of fraud and misrepresentation.

Perfection will not come because of the passage of any law, but only as the gradual and natural development of human character and human needs.

Criminal law is made primarily "to hold the wretch in order," and so far as possible it should be confined to its legitimate province. It is but a crude instrument at best to replace the honor and integrity among men which make modern business possible.

Hence we think that an untried law covering a new field should only be aimed at flagrant, wilful and deliberate wrong-doing, and should not contain provisions tending to hamper and disorganize a highly useful and necessary business.

Appreciation of Co-operation.

In conclusion, I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the able assistance which has been given me during the past year by many of the members of this association.

I am grateful for the active interest which has been shown by the Executive Committee and for the efficient team work of the committee and other seedsmen who attended the hearing at Washington. Differences of opinion have naturally arisen, but they have been adjusted on the broad basis of consideration for the general welfare of the organization. With such a spirit, we may look forward with confidence to the future usefulness of our association, not only as a means of furthering our individual interests, but of promoting the general welfare of American agriculture.

THE DETROIT CONVENTION.

The Closing Day.

The weather was much cooler than on the previous days, bringing out a larger attendance at the business session. The report of Lester L. Moore, delegate to the National Irrigation Congress, was placed in the record.

The committee on fire insurance was announced as follows: J. C. Vaughan, Albert McCullough and M. H. Duryea.

The report of the obituary committee extended the condolences of the association to the families of the late Everett B. Clark, of Milford, Conn.; Albert Plant, of St. Louis, and D. M. Ferry, of Detroit. The loss of Mr. Ferry was keenly felt by the members, and therefore officially recognized, even though that gentleman was not a member of the association.

A letter was read from G. B. Vay, delegate to the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

C. N. Page read a letter from the manufacturer of a device for perforating postage stamps. The United States postoffice rules along these lines also were read. The idea is to prevent the stealing of postage stamps. It seems that this is an important item with some of the large firms, in one instance a firm having lost many hundreds of dollars. By perforating the stamps, so as to make them easily identified, this can be prevented. It was agreed that the manufacturer be sent a letter of thanks.

A letter was read from Wm. Meggat, the first honorary member of the association.

The question of the revaluation of imports by the customs appraisers was talked over. Many members were of the opinion that some of the tariff laws are unjust and should be revised to meet modern requirements. Merchants who contract for goods several years in advance are compelled to pay duty on the same at the market value at the time of shipment. The whole matter was finally referred to the committee on tariffs and customs, which was authorized to take such action as is thought best.

F. W. Bolgiano was given a vote of thanks for his splendid work at Washington. This was a rising vote.

The secretary read a number of letters from various places extending a cordial invitation to the association for its next meeting. Among these were Atlantic City, Put-in-Bay, Ohio, and Portland, Ore. The secretary of the Board of Commerce of Niagara Falls was present, to invite the association to make the Falls the meeting place in 1909. H. W. Wood, of Louisville, invited the association to meet in his city in 1909. A straw vote was taken on the question, about one-half the votes cast being in favor of Niagara Falls. This matter is now in the hands of the executive committee to decide. The above vote is merely a pointer for them to go by.

Election of Officers.

Officers were elected at the final session, June 25, as follows:

President—Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.
First Vice-President—J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.
Second Vice-President—M. H. Duryea, New York.
Secretary and Treasurer—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.
Assistant Secretary—Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago.
Executive committee—George S. Green, Chicago; Charles Dickinson, Chicago; Howard M. Earl, Philadelphia; C. M. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.
Membership committee—Albert McCullough, Cincinnati; Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington.

After the introduction and brief address of the newly elected president, J. C. Robinson, on behalf of the members, presented M. Green with a large silver berry bowl as a slight token of appreciation of his efforts during his term of office.

A feature of the session was a letter from the National Prosperity Association of St. Louis, in which the secretary called attention to the continued improvement that has been made in business conditions, remarking:

"The United States is large enough to carry on a presidential campaign and successful business at the same time. It will not be necessary to wait until 1909 for an improvement in business."

President Green said: "Just write the prosperity men a letter and tell them that we seedsmen are doing business and then some."

A letter was received from A. T. Ferrel & Co., Saginaw, inviting the members of the association and their friends to visit their place in Saginaw in a body on Friday, June 26. It was apparent that the invitation came too late, as most of the members had already procured their tickets for home. It was

The Disclaimer.

In an executive session there was a long discussion of the disclaimer and its use, in which, as usual, a variety of opinions were shown to exist, but the result was the adoption of a resolution reaffirming the disclaimer as originally adopted at the Rochester meeting and urging all seedsmen to employ it on all packets and printed matter in identical language.

BRUNTON GOES TO WOOD.

Henry W. Wood, president of T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va., has engaged Frank Brunton, expert seed grower, horticulturist, landscape gardener and florist, to take charge of the new model seed farm being established at Milford, on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railway, in Caroline county. Mr. Brunton served five years' apprenticeship with one of the leading seed and nursery firms in England. He is a graduate of the Royal Horticultural Society Gardens in agricultural chemistry and plant breeding. He was superintendent of the Shady Hills Nursery, in Newport, R. I., and has laid out as well as planned some of the finest estates in the north. For the last two or three years he has been in Texas. Unfavorable seasons and a cyclone which carried away his home and came near killing his wife and children caused Mr. Brunton to leave that state.

SWEET PEAS IN ENGLAND.

The present outlook indicates that there is going to be a big shortage of seed unless something happens quickly, says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal (English). Reports from California promise a short crop, and over here things are far from rosy.

Autumn sown seed proved a failure in most places, and the spring sown, especially certain varieties, came up badly, and slug ravages only added to the trouble. As if this were not bad enough, drought has for several weeks aggravated matters. The varying rains that have fallen have done little good, while they have given the weeds a strong send-off. Were it not for the weed trouble, we could easily turn out a cheap sample of home-grown seed. The cost of hand-weeding, however, debars its possibility, and this season has compelled growers to dip deeply into their pockets for labor. One grower tells me charlock is smothering his plants, for it seems to revel in the drought. The peas, however, are making scarcely any movement, and buds are opening rapidly. This is bad business, for when 12-inch plants begin blooming the chance of a good crop is remote. Under glass growers have found it a task to keep things going. The terrific heat prior to Whitsun literally frizzled the flowers and plants, too.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week was simply a continuation of the oversupply of flowers and a poor demand. Now and then there would be a little spurt or some variety of flowers would be cleaned up at a fair price, as was the case with lilies, but then things would settle back into the same old rut and the buyers would turn stock down even when you would offer it at starvation prices. The fact is simply that there is no business, and so we cannot expect to sell goods. And really we ought not to expect much now, as July and August are the real summer months. We can expect to have two very quiet months, but after that I believe that the business will start up with the arrival of the mum, and be good. Such being the case, it will not take us long to forget the past spring business in the realization of the return of good times.

We of Cincinnati are expecting an unusually good demand this fall, owing to the number of strangers who will be attracted to this city by the campaign for president that will be conducted here by William H. Taft. We expect that it will stimulate the demand for flowers a good deal and I do not believe that we will be disappointed. With this prospect in view, we can rest easy during the coming two months, taking our vacations and doing whatever we can to make the time go by as quickly as possible.

As I have stated, this market is well supplied with flowers and when you are not too particular as to quality you can get about anything you want. Lilies were about the only exception and good ones were a little scarce.

Club Meeting.

One of the results of the meeting of the trustees of the Florists' Society at E. G. Gillett's last week was an invitation from J. A. Peterson for the society to hold an outdoor meeting at his home in Westwood on Friday, June 26. So a meeting was called for that date, to which all the florists of Cincinnati and vicinity were invited. Some twenty-five persons were present and, after taking a trip through his greenhouses, where Mr. Peterson's various specialties were seen in all of their perfection, the party assembled in his large dining room. Refreshments of various kinds were served here and then the meeting was called to order. Inasmuch as the board of trustees elected last year had never qualified, the old board was considered to be still in office, so Wm. Murphy took the chair, with C. J. Ohmer as secretary.

The first business before the meeting was the election of officers for the coming year. The election resulted in the choice of the following: President, J. A. Peterson; vice-president, C. E. Critchell; secretary, C. J. Ohmer; treasurer, D. Rusconi; trustee, Gus Adrian.

These officers were duly qualified and at once took their seats. A call for applications for membership brought out six. The rules being suspended, they were made members at once. They were as follows: Max Rudolph, Wm. H. Gear, R. A. Murphy, Casper Sunderman, Geo. E. Tromey and Chas. Brunner..

A committee was then appointed to take full charge of our annual outing, July 23.

E. G. Gillett then brought up the proposed invitation for the S. A. F. to hold its 1909 convention in Cincinnati, this being its twenty-fifth anniversary. A vote was taken and it was unanimously carried that the Cincinnati Florists' Society extend to the S. A. F. a most pressing invitation to meet in this city in 1909, and that a delegation be sent to the approaching convention at Niagara Falls to do all in their power to accomplish this result. The board of trustees had good reason to be elated over the amount of enthusiasm displayed by the various florists present. Not only did every one of them promise to do all in his power to bring the convention to this city and then to work toward its success, but they volunteered financial assistance in a manner which bids fair to prove that if the S. A. F. decides to visit our city in 1909 they will be treated to a convention the like of which has never been witnessed before. Not only do Cincinnati florists hold this out as an inducement to influence the members of the S. A. F. to vote to come to Cincinnati in 1909, but they also call attention to the geographical location of the city; how it is in the very center of the floral industry of the United States; how it will pull delegates from the east and west, from the north and south alike, and thus bring together a more varied interest than ever before.

I might go on almost indefinitely enumerating the various reasons why this convention should come here in 1909, but I believe those stated above, when properly placed before the coming convention, will win the delegates to our cause in a body. We want the vote of every delegate and we want all members of the national society to feel that they want to come to our city, and then, finally, we want them all to come. Cincinnati has a reputation for hospitality and you can bet your life that we are going to live up to it.

The meeting adjourned at a late hour, with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Peterson and their family for their splendid entertainment.

At six o'clock the proceedings of the society were rested for a while and Miss Weber, accompanied by Miss Peterson, sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," in honor of our late ex-president, Grover Cleveland, whose funeral services were then being held.

The next meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club rooms, Saturday, July 11, at 8 p. m. It is expected that this will be a largely attended meeting, as much business of importance will come up.

EUCALYPTUS FROM SEED.

Much complaint has been heard from California growers who would raise eucalyptus from seed. This is due, in some cases, to the fact that there seems to be considerable difficulty in getting the seed to germinate at all, and in other cases, when the plants have made their appearance above the seed bed, it has been almost impossible to keep them from damping off.

The Eucalptus globulus, the common blue gum, seems to be the variety mostly grown here and it is principally with this that the trouble has been. Gums are popularly supposed to be of the easiest culture, but I find that gardeners who have not had much experience with them often make an utter failure of several batches of seed and then the season is too far advanced to do anything for another year.

As to the first trouble I have mentioned, that of the refusal of the seed to germinate, a few words of caution and advice may be in order. There is little danger from getting old seed, as the eucalyptus seeds are very long-lived and I have had much better success in planting seed that I had gathered the year before than with seed a few weeks cleaned. I conclude from this that the seed is not thoroughly ripe until it has stood a few months after being cleaned.

This has been especially noticeable when but little care was used in picking the seed pods from the trees. It is always best to select the seed from the oldest pods. These are always found on the larger branches and are much heavier than those on the younger growths. Seed collectors do not make any difference, however, and as a consequence the planter usually gets a quantity of seed a large portion of which has been taken from young, unripe pods. This explains why such a small percentage of gum seed often shows itself after being planted, and I have found, therefore, that much better success can be had by keeping the seed at least a year before planting it. Such seed, when planted fresh, usually comes up weak and puny and succumbs to an early death.

Presuming that the planter has well ripened seed and has his beds in good shape for planting, the next important item is soaking the seed. This should be done in water that is just a little too hot to keep the hand in. Throw the seed in and let it remain until the water gets cold. Then mix it with dry sand and it is ready to sprinkle on the bed. Cover it with fine sand to the depth of a quarter of an inch and pack it down well. See that there is plenty of ventilation and shade, and keep the seed box constantly moist until the plants show themselves, usually in about a week. There is little danger of too much moisture, provided the ventilation is good and there is plenty of shade.

After about six weeks the young plants are ready to transplant into flats. Here, again, many plants are lost, principally from the too sudden change in temperature. If the grower cannot keep the plants in the same atmosphere where the seed was sown until the young plants have become established in their new surroundings, it is always better to shift the seedlings into the selected place and keep them there for a couple of weeks before any transplanting is done. This will save many thousands of them, as the delicate little seedlings must be handled very carefully if success is to be expected.

To transplant a lot of seedlings from a bed in a greenhouse and put them outside in a shade house, or in a much colder greenhouse, is usually fatal. Keep them, if possible, for a couple of weeks in the same temperature in which they were grown, and if this is not feasible, on account of want of room, put the seedlings themselves in the place where the plants are to stand after they are transplanted.

After two weeks the flats are easily filled in, should there be any missing, and after they have stood for two weeks more they can then be brought outside in the open and will be large enough to dispose of the following winter and spring.

I have found no difficulty whatever with seedlings damping off when I have had thoroughly ripened seed and when the principles of thorough ventilation, plenty of moisture and not too radical

VICTORIA, B. C.

A good demand for bedding out prevailed this spring and most of us cleaned up well. Red geraniums and Salvia splendens were in great request. Some firms had a stock of the new double lobelia, Katherine Mallard, but no fancy prices could be obtained for it.

June 19 was the date of the annual rose show of the Victoria Horticultural Society. It was a success in all ways. No prizes were offered to the trade, but the Oakland Nursery, Lansdowne Nursery and Flewin's Gardens all put up creditable exhibits. The two last named also showed perennials. Among the amateurs H. Beavan took a medal for the best single bloom of a tea rose, with a grandly colored Comtesse de Nadaillae. It reminded me of blooms seen years ago at the Crystal Palace. Mr. Dowler obtained the medal for the best hybrid perpetual, with Frau K. Druschki, and Mr. Warburton got the hybrid tea medal with C. Testout. He also obtained a medal for the best twelve blooms, any varieties. Many new roses were in evidence. The famous Betty was in several stands and pleased every eye. Many orders were booked for it. Mrs. D. McGee was well shown. Hugh Dickson and Dean Hole also stood out strongly.

Tomatoes have dropped in price this year. Last season we were realizing 25 cents per pound at this time. This year they have been 15 cents for two weeks.

The Fairview Greenhouses are building again this season.

J. T. Higgins, who recently sold out his place on Fort street, will erect a 100-foot structure on his new location on Foul Bay road. E. A. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

A hot wave has struck San Francisco and vicinity, and this is the first warm weather we have had this summer. It has not, as might be supposed, affected the quantity of flowers brought into town, however, because we have just finished cutting the spring crop and the only effect the warm spell has is to weaken and blanch what stock is coming on in the bud. As a matter of fact, there is a dearth of good stock at the present time. Fancy roses are scarce and fancy carnations are not plentiful. Small flowers on short stems are the rule, and anything that is really good finds a ready sale.

Sweet peas are plentiful and are beginning to show the effects of the excess of heat in the shortening of the stems and the flabbiness of the flowers.

Peonies and Bride gladioli are out of season. The other gladioli are being brought into town in large quantities, and find ready sale at from $2 to $4 per hundred. Coreopsis, gaillardias, dahlias and other hardy outside stock move slowly. Valley is scarce, but it is in poor demand. The same can be said of Lilium longiflorum.

A few early, short-stemmed varieties of asters have made their appearance and are being used in funeral work, which, by the way, is the principal item of income of the retailers at present. The closing of the schools made quite a showing for the last few weeks, however.

Over on the Alameda county side the retailers claim they have been quite busy, considering the season, and the only complaint registered was the inability of some of the stores to get enough white stock to fill funeral orders with. There has been a plethora of this class of work during the entire month of June, according to the retail dealers of Oakland and Alameda.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

A LARGE colony of fine summer homes is being developed at Libertyville, Ill., a short distance from Chicago. Considerable landscape work is already under way, with much more in prospect.

EFFORTS are being put forth to make the meeting of the American Association of Park Superintendents at Minneapolis August 11 to 13 the best ever. The association has not heretofore met west of Buffalo. An elaborate program of entertainment is being prepared.

W. H. WYMAN, proprietor of the Bay State Nurseries, at North Abington, Mass., is clearing a tract of fifteen acres of land. A gang of forty men, in charge of H. B. Russell, is employed on the job. Mr. Wyman owns about 170 acres of land in the neighborhood.

AT this season the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, sends out a man in an automobile to inspect all the planting done during the spring season. The inspector makes a record of the facts in every case and, where conditions are not right, not only calls attention personally to the care that is needed but later writes a letter to the customer explaining what is necessary to make the stock thrive. In this way many complaints from neglectful people are forestalled and new business secured.

RHODOTYPOS KERRIOIDES, commonly known as the white kerria, is a handsome and distinct shrub, growing four to five feet in height. The green, lustrous leaves are oval and are in themselves attractive. The snow-white flowers were this year fully expanded May 15. The berries which follow the flowers remain on the plants all winter. This shrub is by some considered doubtfully hardy. In severe winters it has killed back a little, but no more than many other shrubs which are classed as ironclad sorts.

HIBISCUS SYRIACUS is quite hardy, but not perfectly so north of New York. There are many named varieties, single and double, and of colors from purple to lavender, and from deep pink to almost pure white. It flowers from midsummer to fall. It does not do well in dry soils and should be mulched about the roots in summer to prevent evaporation, and also in the fall with well-rotted manure. If the soil is poor, dig in the mulch around the plant and then put more manure on top.

ACER NEGUNDO AUREUM ODESSANUM is one of the best. The growth of the plant is satisfactory, and the bright golden yellow color of the foliage remains fresh-looking the entire summer, properties which, when this ash-leaved maple is planted in suitable positions in park or garden, make it particularly valuable in giving light to the picture similarly to the light parts of a painting, as will be understood by every capable landscape gardener, says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal (England). In general, plants having variegated foliage should be sparingly employed if the repose of a landscape is to be retained.

STATE OF THE MARKET.

It is said by Rochesterians who attended the annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Milwaukee, that there was more inquiry for nursery stock and less for sale than in many years. It was apparent that the nursery firms of the country were holding their stock for sale on the market, anticipating an enormous trade next fall and spring. Discussions at the convention disclosed the fact that the increase in demand for ornamental trees, shrubs, shade trees and the like, is getting beyond the capacity of the nurserymen to meet.

SHRUB JOTTINGS.

Calycanthus floridus, better known perhaps under its common names of sweet shrub and Carolina allspice, is not nearly so much grown as it ought to be. It is true that in exceptionally severe winters, such as we had in 1903 and 1904, it is cut down in the more northern states, but it starts from the bottom with such vigor that it soon makes a presentable shrub again. While not suitable for massing effects, or even promiscuous planting, this is a good shrub to use. It makes a nice individual shrub on the lawn. Its foliage is fine and glossy, but its great charm lies in the pineapple-scented, chocolate-colored flowers, which this year opened June 10, and last for several weeks in good condition. This shrub rarely exceeds six feet in height and succeeds well either in sunshine or partial shade.

Deutzia crenata candidissima is a splendid shrub, which comes into flower when the syringas are on the wane. During severe winters it is sometimes killed back severely, but it soon recovers from this and for shrubbery use or as an individual lawn specimen it is excellent. It is also well adapted for cutting, and the double, pure white flowers are serviceable for design work. In fact, any florist doing a retail trade should certainly have one or two plants in his shrubbery. This variety is of erect and more vigorous habit than Lemoinei or gracilis, attaining a height of eight to ten feet. It will thrive well in any good garden soil. The variety Pride of Rochester is double white, but has the back of the petals tinged with rose, while D. crenata flore-pleno rosea has one or two of the outer rows of petals rosy purple in color. These shrubs were in fine bloom near Boston this year June 29.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The weather has been hot for the last few weeks, which has affected all kinds of stock. We have had the usual demand for weddings and graduations, which helped to move off some of the stock, with the exception of carnations, which have been a glut on the market for some time. Good roses have been in demand, but almost impossible to get hold of, being small and full of mildew, which makes it impossible to get anything out of them. Sweet peas are plentiful and do not seem to go as well as formerly. Hard times may have a lot to do with this, although we don't hear much complaint so far.

Bedding stock went off in good shape and is practically all sold, and from the prospects there will be little going on for the next two or three months.

NEWARK, N. J.

On Monday afternoon, June 15, this city was swept by one of the fiercest storms that have been experienced here for many years. The wind, which was almost a tornado in its velocity, wrecked buildings and tore down trees. Olympic park, which was directly in the path of the storm, was damaged to the extent of about $3,000.

A quarter of a mile of fence was torn up and hurled over the Hausmann Bros.' strawberry patch, destroying the fruit.

Hausmann's farm suffered much. Several hundred coldframe sashes were stacked up near a barn, and in an instant the gale sent a large number of these high in the air, hurling them among the strawberry fields and grape vines, smashing many dollars' worth of glass and frames.

The damage to the crops is considerable, especially to the flowers that are grown for the Newark market. Half an acre of sweet peas was laid flat.

NEGAUNEE, MICH.

Work was begun June 23 in the erection of the additional greenhouses for the Cleveland Cliffs Co. The contractor in charge is Andrew Lindquist. The site chosen is the vacant space south of the old Mackinaw depot, between Gold and Silver streets, as the piece of ground occupied by the present houses was not considered large enough for the necessary additions. The grading for the foundations and for the shrubbery gardens was completed a week or two ago.

The new range will consist of six houses, each 21x115, and the material for these is furnished by the Foley Mfg. Co., of Chicago. A new office and boilerhouse are also included in the plans.

JAMESTOWN, O.—Henry C. Fenker will build another greenhouse this season. He says he feels quite encouraged at the end of his first year in the business. He sold all his bedding stock three days before Decoration day.

The Market.

Intensely hot weather, a deluge of flowers, many of them of poor quality, and an indifferent demand is the situation at present. Last week saw good calls for graduation and wedding bouquets, but, even with these, prices slumped to quite low figures on nearly all lines, the buyers rather than the sellers fixing the prices. Both roses and carnations are selling low and are poor. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities and sell fairly well. Dahlias have made their appearance in the markets, but are poor. Smilax is scarce, but asparagus of all kinds is plentiful and cheap.

Various Notes.

C. Gregorius, of Park Heights avenue, had a fine lot of giganteum. They averaged four flowers to a plant and every one out of 500 came perfect.

Charles Hamilton, of Mount Washington, was elected a member of the club at the last meeting. He has a large place and does a wholesale as well as a retail business. C. M. Wagner is manager for him.

Halliday Bros. have started to plant their carnations inside, as they believe in early planting.

William Terry, of Owings Mills, has given up his stall in the Lexington market and expects to wholesale all of his goods.

E. A. Seidewitz has extended his water system so as to be able to water all of his stock which is planted in the open ground. Q.

Boothwyn, Pa.—John Frigar is erecting a fine conservatory at his country residence, near this place.

Sleepy Eye, Minn.—There was heavy hail here June 23. No great damage was done to greenhouse glass, but soft-wooded stock outdoors was badly cut up.

SEEDS.

COBURN'S SELECTED PANSY SEED.
BEST MARKET STRAIN GROWN.

Our seed is saved from about 12,000 plants, carefully selected, when in bloom, from the 500,000 we grow for our spring sales.

Each plant is carefully selected, color, size, form and substance being taken into consideration, and the proportion of each color is properly balanced.

As a result of over 25 years' work along these lines, we feel justified in claiming to have the best strain of pansies on the market, and we invite trial and comparison.

Growing our stock in this manner, we have only a limited amount of seed to spare, and in order to distribute as widely as possible, we offer it in packets of 1000 seeds. Price $1.00 per packet (only one to each customer).

SCHOOLS OF LANDSCAPING.

In the Gardeners' Magazine (London) there recently appeared an exhaustive discussion of the facilities offered in several countries for securing an education along the increasingly important line of landscape architecture, from which the following is taken:

"It is in the United States that one finds a model precedent which may be of great assistance, and it will surprise many to find how seriously the question of education in the art of landscape gardening is considered in that go-ahead country. It is, in many respects, an ideal land for the development of gardening of all kinds, owing to the individual wealth and public spirit of the inhabitants—to competition in luxury—to the sylvan resources of the country, and to the new and vast spaces available for treatment.

"The capacity of Americans to concentrate and specialize makes them rivals always to be respected, and there is little fear that impracticable schemes of education will be found at their best universities. Americans use the phrase 'landscape architect' in place of our term 'landscape gardener,' but in the references which follow the English expression is substituted.

"Definite instruction in landscape gardening is given at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; at the University of Illinois, Urbana; at Columbia University, New York city; at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston; and at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. Some tuition in landscape gardening is offered by many of the horticultural and agricultural schools and colleges, but I do not know what weight is to be attached to it. A typical example of this group is to be found in the Massachusetts State Agricultural College at Amherst.

"The course offered at the famous University of Harvard is decidedly the most complete and important obtainable in America. The official register of the university deals with and illustrates the importance attached to the question fully.

"A pamphlet issued in 1907 states that 'the object of the courses of education outlined, is to provide instruction in the elements of technical knowledge, and training in the application of principles of design, which together form the proper basis for the professional practice of landscape gardening.' A student may obtain professional training in landscape gardening in Harvard University, including both elementary and advanced work, or having had the necessary preparation in another college or scientific school, may proceed at once to the graduate courses. By registering in Harvard College a student may elect courses which will be counted for the A.B. or S.B. degree, and prepare him for the concentrated professional study in the Graduate School of Applied Science."

Greenhouse Heating.

DEFICIENT RADIATION.

I have four greenhouses and, being a little shy on radiation, should like to know how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe it will take to heat each house. One is 15x60, and is for geraniums; one is 20x60, to grow carnations; another one, 20x60, is in palms; and the fourth, 15x25, is used for carnations. We never have lower than 4 degrees below zero.

W. E.

If this plant is to be heated with hot water at 180 degrees, the houses 20x60 feet, for geraniums and carnations, can be heated by installing a 2-inch flow and sixteen 1¼-inch returns in each house. The palm house should be more heavily piped. A 2½-inch riser and eighteen 1¼-inch returns will serve for this house. The house 15x25 feet should have a 1½-inch flow or riser and fourteen 1¼-inch returns, to provide a safe amount of radiation.

HOUSE FOR VIOLETS.

How many 2-inch pipes will be needed to heat a house 21x40 feet, to grow lettuce, radishes or violets, using hot water. The house abuts on others to the north and east, but the west side and south end are exposed. I want to use 2-inch pipe because I already have the pipe.
J. D.

The house 21x40 feet can be heated sufficiently for lettuce, radishes or violets by nine runs of 2-inch pipe, a riser and three returns on the most protected wall and a riser and four returns on the exposed wall. That is assuming that the water is maintained at 180 degrees.

CAPACITY OF FLOWS.

How many returns will a 3-inch flow and a 2½-inch flow take care of, using hot water?
B. B.

A 2½-inch flow pipe will supply heat for 600 square feet of radiation, i. e., 960 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, while a 3-inch pipe will supply heat for 900 square feet of radiation, or 1,440 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe.

TANK AND RADIATION.

Will you tell me how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe and what size flow are required to heat two connected even-span houses, running east and west, one to 54 degrees, the other to 58 degrees, with an outside temperature of 10 degrees below zero, using hot water? The houses are each 14x34 feet, 5-foot walls, nine feet to ridges. The north wall is boarded, the south has four feet of glass, and the east end has glass gables. There is a lean-to on the west 7½x18 feet, 4-foot wall, 7-foot ridge, with two

Expressions From Men Who Know

Mr. J. G. Frisz, of Vincennes, Ind., writes as follows:
"Your No. 13 boiler is carrying 25,000 square feet of glass and I can keep it at 60° in the coldest weather without any trouble. I have three other types of boilers also heating a range of 25,000 square feet of glass, but the No. 13 Kroeschell boiler only takes half the coal and half the work to get the same results."
P. S.—Mr. J. G. Frisz, of Vincennes, Indiana, has the largest range of glass in Indiana devoted to vegetable forcing.

Damm Bros., Chicago, Ill., write:
"In 1894 we bought one of your No. 12 boilers to take the place of four smaller boilers of another make. Your boiler has done the entire work to the highest satisfaction, saving labor and about one-third of the fuel we used to burn before. We had that boiler up to 1906, that is 12 years, having no repairs on it whatever, except one set of flues we put in in 1900. Last fall we installed one of your No. 14 boilers, having enlarged our plant. It takes care of 35,000 square feet of glass very easy. When firing we keep the ash door open only about one inch. We think your No. 14 boiler could carry 40,000 square feet of glass."

Mr. Nic Zweifel, North Milwaukee, Wis., writes:
"I have a range of 200-foot houses with a total of 27,000 square feet of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in 30 minutes with one of your No. 13 greenhouse boilers and it is very easy firing. Can fire just as easy with screenings as with lump coal."

W. W. Allabaugh, Silverdale, Pa., writes:
"Your boiler gives entire satisfaction. You will notice the No. 4 boiler is rated to warm 10,500 square feet of glass and I have over 12,000 square feet of glass."

Theo. Diedrich, Anacostia, Washington, D. C., writes:
"No. 6 Boiler carries two houses 20 x 172, and three houses 22 x 96; this is 3,800 square feet of glass more than its rating."

Wm. Pinchbeck, Ridgefield, Conn., writes:
"I expect to enlarge my plant soon and when I do shall use another of your boilers. Now a few words about the boiler I bought of you in 1901. This is a No. 1 boiler, rated in your catalogue at 6,000 square feet. It is taking care of 7,000 square feet of glass in carnation houses and works to perfection. No trouble whatever in cold nights; no night fireman; easy to work and easy to coal. I consider this the best boiler on the market and I have used a good many different kinds."

Jacob Phillips, Rogers Park, Chicago, Ill., writes:
"Has 20 000 square feet of glass. Can keep 60 degrees in coldest weather. Had one boiler 15 years, only expense one set of flues. Kroeschell Boiler is so satisfactory that I do not care to try any other."

G. Basler, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:
"Had different kinds of cast iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10th and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

Chas. W. Unglaub, Springfield, O., writes:
"I had a cast iron sectional boiler before I got yours; would not give yours for a dozen of the others. Your boiler is the quickest heating boiler I ever saw. I hardly ever have the damper over half open and the draft shut most of the time. I wish I had gotten it four years ago, when I got the sectional boiler. I would be ahead now. In the four years I had to buy a new section and four heads that had cracked, and I had to be right with the cast iron boiler, and I would have to fire every twenty or thirty minutes. It took more coal than your boiler. The cast iron boiler took much more attention and more coal and would be leaking half the winter. I want no more cast iron sectional boilers."

THE KROESCHELL BOILER IS BUILT RIGHT FOR FUEL ECONOMY, DURABILITY, SAFETY

and is the most popular boiler made. During the season of 1906-1907 the Kroeschell boiler was installed to heat 4,286,000 square feet of glass. 1346 Cast Iron Boilers were replaced by the Kroeschell in 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907. No other type of boiler has ever equaled such a record or made so many friends. Send for catalogue.

feet of glass in the wall. The boiler shed is at the northwest corner. Where should the highest and lowest points in the system be located, and where should the expansion tank be connected?

B. L.

The house in question, 14x34 feet, can be heated by one 1½-inch flow through each house, with twelve 1¼-inch returns in the house to carry 58 degrees, and eleven pipes in the one to carry 54 degrees. The highest point should be at the most distant point in the system from the boiler, i. e., an up-hill system. The lowest point should be the main return, where it enters the boiler. The expansion tank should connect with the main return near the boiler.

ONE OF THE REASONS WHY THE LEADING GROWERS USE MOREHEAD RETURN STEAM TRAPS

Wilkinsburg, Pa., December 13, 1907.
Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, Mich.
Gentlemen:—I have waited till we would have cold enough weather to have all the lines on, and the working of the system through your trap is perfect, as it carries the steam as hot at the end of the returns as it is when it leaves the boiler, after traveling more than 400 feet. I am greatly pleased that I put in your trap and will certainly recommend it to any florist who uses steam.
Very truly yours, Wm. M. Turner.

DECORAH, IOWA.

In the severe wind and hail storm that swept over this locality Saturday evening, June 20, the greenhouses and stock of W. T. Symonds were badly damaged. Some slight idea of the harm done may be gathered from the fact that about 7,000 square feet of glass were smashed. The loss in the glass itself, however, was largely covered by insurance. His garden crops, such as vegetables, strawberries and other fruits, were almost completely ruined.

This storm is described by the newspapers as the most disastrous storm the county has ever experienced. Roofs of buildings were shattered, windows were broken, trees were thrown down or stripped of leaves and bark, and crops were pounded into the ground.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Trade During June.

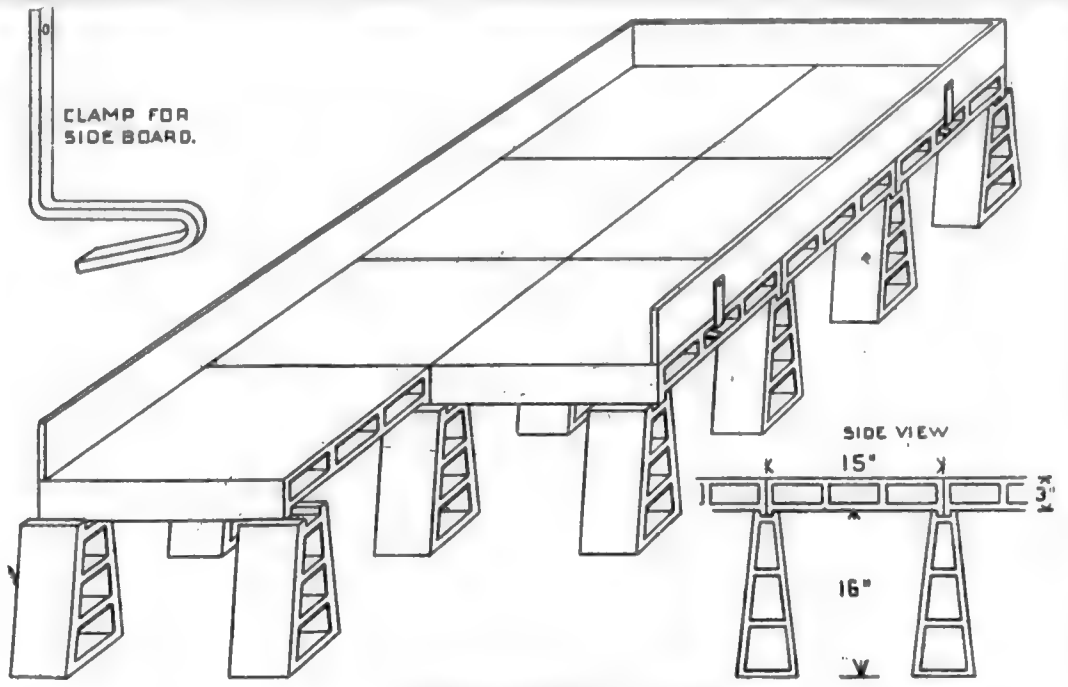
All through the month of June our florists have reported a good business, taking everything into consideration. While there were not nearly as many weddings as in June, 1907, there have been enough to keep the florists busy with wedding decorations, bouquets, etc. Funeral work has been plentiful, and this, as we know, is the florists' most profitable line.

Stock of all kinds during the month has been a little scarce, but these conditions have been cheerfully complied with, and we have all got there just the same. Fully as much stock has been handled in the last month as in June of last year, but prices have not been quite so good.



From the present outlook business still keeps up, but stock is getting scarcer every day. This, of course, is partly due to the warm weather and partly due to the fact that the florists are pulling out the old stock, refilling the benches and planting anew. Smilax, plumosus and Sprengeri have been plentiful. Roses from the early spring plantings are coming in fine, and are just the ideal thing for funeral work. The home-grown cherries are a thing of the past, but there is now an abundant crop of raspberries and blackberries.

The Weather.

The weather in general through the month of June has been hot and dry, the temperature ranging most of the time between 90 and 100 degrees in the shade. These conditions held true until June 24, when the atmosphere became cooler. There was but little rain during the whole month and the outdoor crops at the pres-

Various Notes.

The directors of the Miami Floral Co. held their annual meeting July 1.

Cupid has been transacting a rather successful business among the sons and daughters of our local florists. June 24 was chosen as the eventful day in the families of two of our prominent florists. Miss Charlotte C. Bittner and Raymond G. Bartholomew were married on that date at the Miami United Brethren church. After the wedding ceremony a reception was held to their relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bittner. The young couple left the same evening for a trip to Mackinac City and the islands. Raymond Bartholomew is the eldest son of George Bartholomew, manager of the Miami Floral Co. The church was handsomely decorated for the occasion.

The other wedding on June 24 was that of Miss Ruth Magdalene Matthews and Herbert E. Githens. The ceremony took place at the newly furnished home of the young couple. After the ceremony was performed a sumptuous wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Githens left for a visit to Chicago on the same evening. Mrs. Herbert Githens is the daughter of W. G. Matthews, proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co. R. A. B.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Friday, June 26, saw the close of the school year, and now there is nothing to hinder folks from going to their summer resorts. This, with a good deal of outdoor stock now coming into flower, will reduce the flower business to the lowest notch, with funeral work the main standby.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday found a big supply of stock and shipping business good, while the local graduation exercises on Thursday and Friday used up most of the good stock, with the inferior grades moving briskly to the dump. The demand was fully up to a year ago, but the prices realized were somewhat lower.

The quality of carnations and roses is turning worse from day to day, the latter especially showing the effects of the hot weather. Still, some of the summer flowering varieties, such as Kaiserin, etc., are good. Sweet peas sold well.

Various Notes.

Fine stocks are coming in from John Howard.

July 1 the Baumgarten Floral Co. will open a branch at the Pfister hotel. This is an old stand, having been managed by Mrs. E. Miller, who, as previously stated in the REVIEW, will be associated with the Racine Floral Co., Racine, Wis.

Gust. Meyer, of Janesville, Wis., came in to look after the exhibit of the Janesville Floral Co. at the State Fair park. Their beds, so far, take the lead.

C. C. Pollworth will spend the greater part of this week in and about Madison, Wis.

Manke Bros., of North Milwaukee, are the first to lay in their supply of coal for next season. It is all there, minus fifty tons, which will arrive late in the fall. They use Pocahontas exclusively.

M. Phillips, of Wausau, Wis., was a visitor. E. O.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

The Market.

Were it not for the fact that Toledo was blessed with an unusual number of weddings last month, the florists of this vicinity would have an entirely different report to make. As it is, however, nearly every dealer has been kept busy. Not only the larger florists, who usually receive the bulk of the wedding trade, have been kept busy, but the smaller dealers as well, whose patronage comes more from people of moderate circumstances.

Plumosus, ferns of all kinds, and local grown flowers have had an unusual demand. American Beauty and Killarney roses have also had good call. Lilies of the valley and sweet peas were used a great deal, but the quality was nothing extra.

Various Notes.

"We never look for much seed trade during the summer," said William T. Phillips, "but June has been a much better month than we anticipated." Reports from seed dealers throughout the city are satisfactory.

Many Toledo seed merchants attended the convention in Detroit.

Miss Helen Patten had the decorations of the Hyatt-Bird wedding, one of the large events of last week. She arranged a wonderful bouquet of white orchids and valley for the bride, and carried the house decorations in a Japanese effect of green and white.

Mrs. E. Suder worked out a unique and beautiful design at a prominent wedding last week. The entire room was festooned with an abundance of plumosus, and the ceiling was a circle of pink roses.

Mr. Schoen reports that a large shipment of Killarney roses which he received last week were of especially good quality.

The shipments into Toledo are light at present. Mrs. Bryant, of Genoa, O., is shipping in some exceptionally fine sweet peas. Retailers pronounce them to be as good as any they have ever received, while I. N. Keller, of Bay Shore, has supplied some very nice Shasta daisies.

The Florists' Club held its meeting June 24 at the home of George Bayer, president, for the purpose of discussing the general trade conditions. Owing to the light attendance, the business meeting was dispensed with and a social hour was enjoyed.

An exceptionally fine variety of gloxinia is attracting attention in the display windows of Mrs. Suder.

The Youngstown Floral Co. has abandoned the cut flower business for the summer. The proprietor expects to reopen about August 30.

Through the kindness of Mrs. E. Suder the East Toledo park, which was donated to the poor, will have a beautiful foliage bed in the design of a shield. H. L. S.

Are you the Man

Who has been building greenhouses with material made by the local planing mill? Are you the fellow that figures close and wants to get full value for his money? If you are, we have something very interesting to tell you about greenhouse material. If you have been buying your lumber from the local mill and have had your sash bars, etc., made at home we want to tell you that you have been making a big mistake and that you are losing good money. You can get up-to-date construction and perfect materials from us in most cases for less money than you can get inferior goods at home—and we can save you a whole lot of trouble, too. There are many florists who have only a small amount of money and are forced to build cheap houses—you can put up first-class houses with our material at small cost, and we think we can prove to you that you can do it for less money than you could by buying any old thing your planing mill turned out.

Don't go on building the tumble-down, "home-made" houses, but get our estimate and let us figure it out for you.

DISEASED ROSE PLANTS.

Under separate cover we are sending you samples of our roses. They are one-year-old plants, were in good condition when set in September and were without disease or pests soon after Christmas. The disease began at the bottom of the growth, going up to the bud. The buds do not open, but just wilt and die. We have found some thrips since the first part of March. W. K. B.

The samples were in a very dry and withered condition when they reached me, making it almost impossible to make an expert examination.

The leaves show signs of some variety of fungoid growth, apparently leaf spot, but this is not the cause of the trouble. The trouble evidently has its seat in the roots. An examination of the roots will probably show some signs of insects at work, or there may be something wrong with the drainage or the soil.

Frequent and persistent fumigating with tobacco will keep thrips in check.

RIBES.

PRUNING HYBRID PERPETUALS.

I desire information respecting the proper pruning of hybrid perpetual roses planted in permanent beds. Should they be pruned more than once during the year, and if so, at what time and how much at each time? The same question with regard to hybrid teas. H. L. W.

All pruning of hybrid perpetual roses should be done early in the spring, soon after frost leaves the ground. As a rule, the bushes are pruned too lightly. To secure the best quality flowers and be at the same time easily able to furnish your plants the needed winter protection, the strongest shoots of the preceding year's growth should be left not more than ten to twelve inches long. Weaker shoots ought to be cut back even more. Six inches should suffice for these. Cut out all dead and old wood entirely. It is also better to remove the weakest shoots. On vigorous growing sorts the wood, of course, may be left a trifle longer than on weak or moderate growers.

Hybrid teas require less severe pruning than hybrid perpetuals. Cut out the dead and weakly shoots and shorten back the stronger ones a few inches only.

Hardy roses require but one pruning a year. Of course, they receive a certain amount of additional summer pruning when flowers are cut. Only a few of the hybrid perpetuals give blooms of any value after the June or early July crop is over, but the hybrid teas are quite persistent flowering. W. N. CRAIG.

ROSES IN SANDY SOIL.

Under separate cover we are mailing you three plants of French Rosa multiflora which have been budded to American Beauty. Two of these plants, you will notice, are somewhat diseased, or unhealthy, in some way. One seems to be an entirely healthy plant.

We would be much pleased to have you advise us, if you are in position to do so, what the trouble is and also inform us what is necessary to cure this in this case and prevent it in the future.

We also budded some roses to Manetti, and they are not affected in the least. They are all in the same block, in soil which is rather sandy. We have had considerable rain during this spring, but no water has stood on the ground on which these are growing. Is it possible that the excessive rains could affect one plant and not affect another which is standing next to it in the same row? This stock is, as stated above, planted in one block, and three or four plants appear to be entirely healthy, then one or two will be very weak and seem to be diseased, and then another lot of healthy plants.

T. N. Co.

The plants show no sign of disease, further than a crippled growth, which may be due to various causes. Roses, as a rule, do not like a sandy soil, and where only such soil is to be had it should be well manured and, if possible, have some clay added. Manetti stocks possessing an abundance of fine, fibrous roots will be more suited to a sandy soil than R. multiflora and will, in all probability, produce a much more luxuriant growth.

Why one plant should succeed and another go back may depend on the degree of vitality possessed by the different stocks, or it may be in the character of the soil or imperfection in the drainage.

Without a minute inspection of the surroundings and conditions, it would be futile to even suggest a remedy.

RIBES.

TWELVE BEST GARDEN ROSES.

Ballot for Nickerson Cups.

It will be recalled that in 1906 W. E. Nickerson, of Cambridge, Mass., presented the National Rose Society of England with three silver cups, which were awarded respectively to the raisers of the best hybrid perpetual, the best hybrid tea and the best tea for general cultivation which had been sent out in 1900 and subsequently. So successful was this competition that, with the same object in view, and in order to still further encourage the raising of roses which are especially suitable for general cultivation, and at the same time to assist the members of the society, and more particularly the smaller growers among them, in selecting the best varieties for different purposes for their own gardens, Mr. Nickerson last autumn offered to present the National Rose Society with twelve more cups.

After a consultation with Mr. Nickerson as to his wishes, it was ultimately decided by the committee to invite the members of that committee and other leading rosarians, in England and elsewhere, to underline in the voting papers sent them the variety in each of the twelve divisions, into which the competition had been arranged, which they considered best complied with the conditions laid down. There was no restriction as to the age of any variety or of the class to which it belonged. Eighty-three voting papers were in all received and the result of the ballot, which has only recently been decided, is as follows, the figures in parentheses being the number of times the variety was given first place:

Climbers Blooming in Clusters.

Dwarf Roses.

Shades of Crimson.—1, Hugh Dickson, H. P. (33); 2, Ulrich Brunner, H.P. (16); 3, Richmond, H.T. (8).

Shades of Pink.—1, Caroline Testout, H.T. (24); 2, Madame Abel Chatenay, H.T. (21); 3, La France, H.T. (14).

White or Pale Blush.—1, Frau Karl Druschki, H.P. (54); 2, White Maman Cochet, T. (10); 3, Viscountess Folkestone, H.T. (6).

Shades of Yellow.—1, Madame Ravary, H.T. (29); 2, Marie Van Houtte, T. (15); 3, Souvenir de Pierre Notting, T. (10).

At the society's exhibition in the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, July 3, a cup, the gift of Mr. Nickerson, was, in accordance with the foregoing decisions, awarded to each of the raisers, or their representatives, of the following roses, viz.: Turner's Crimson Rambler (climbing polyantha), Dorothy Perkins (Wichuraiana), Climbing Aimée Vibert (noisette), Alister Stella Gray (noisette), Ards Rover (hybrid perpetual), Climbing Mrs. W. J. Grant (hybrid tea), Mme. Alfred Carrière (hybrid noisette), William Allen Richardson (noisette), Hugh Dickson (hybrid perpetual), Caroline Testout (hybrid tea), Frau Karl Druschki (hybrid perpetual), Mme. Ravary (hybrid tea).

The names of the raisers of the foregoing cup roses and the years of introduction are, we would add, as follows:

Turner's Crimson Rambler, C. Turner, 1893.

Dorothy Perkins, Jackson & Perkins, 1901.

Climbing Aimée Vibert, Curtis, 1841.

[The only available record of the raiser and the year of introduction of this variety is contained in Mr. Gordon's comprehensive list contained in the last edition of the "Amateur's Rose Book." This variety was originally introduced as Aimée Vibert scandens.]

Alister Stella Gray, A. Hill Gray. Introduced by Messrs. Paul & Son, in 1894.

Ard's Rover, Alex. Dickson & Sons, 1894.

Climbing Mrs. W. J. Grant, E. G. Hill Co., 1899.

Mme. Alfred Carrière, Schwartz, 1879.

William Allen Richardson, Veuve Ducher, 1878.

Hugh Dickson, Hugh Dickson, 1904.

Caroline Testout, Pernet fils-Ducher, 1890.

Frau Karl Druschki, P. Lambert, 1900.

Mme. Ravary, Pernet-Ducher, 1899.

The American firm, Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., has reason to feel pleased that Dorothy Perkins stood third in the list, Mme. Alfred Carrière and Frau Karl Druschki only receiving more votes. Dorothy Perkins stood highest in the list of ramblers and climbers of all colors, receiving nearly twice as many votes as Crimson Rambler.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The resolution adopted at Chicago, to fix the time for the official year on July 1 instead of January 1, places at the head as president August F. Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, Ill., and as vice president William Kasting, of Buffalo, where the next annual meeting is to be held. The treasurer, Harry O. May, of Summit, N. J., and the secretary, Benjamin Hammond, of Fishkill, N. Y., were re-elected. The executive committee is as follows: Peter Bisset, Washington; Patrick Welch, Boston; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; J. J. Curran, Salem, Va.; P. J. Lynch, West Grove, Pa.; Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit.

During President Simpson's term it was the effort to put the society on a solid financial foundation. The invested permanent fund has reached $2,950, with another $50 in sight. Heretofore when a new set of officers has come in there has been a series of bills to be paid. In order to place the society clear at the beginning of its new financial year, J. A. Valentine, of Denver, placed in the hands of the secretary the sum of $20 and the executive committee wrote a letter to a number of rose cultivators, requesting contributions of $10. These letters were sent out the last of June and responses have been coming so that, without being a burden or tax on any few members, the society proposes to start out in its westward move clear handed.

The next meeting, as a matter of general convenience, will be held at Niagara Falls during the S. A. F. convention, when the formal transfer of office will take place from Mr. Simpson to President Poehlmann.

The bulletin of 1908 is being prepared, and there have come requests for this bulletin from societies and libraries far and wide.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SPRAY OF PINK SWEET PEAS.

The illustration on page 5 shows one of the series of funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia. It is a graceful arrangement, especially adapted to use where a suitable floral tribute is desired for youth. The combination of sweet peas and asparagus is graceful and at this season inexpensive. The bunch is tied with satin ribbon. Mr. Fox thinks that pink is especially happy where the idea of youth is to be brought out. The variety used in this case was Blanche Ferry. Phil.

THE STANDING CRESCENT.

The illustration on page 6 shows an excellent arrangement of yellow roses, marguerites, valley and maidenhair fern in a standing crescent, using a dove in place of the ordinary star. This was a tribute from the store of Hoyt Bros. Co., Spokane, Wash., to the memory of an employee for many years in one of the local flower stores there, and shows that the firm's designer is the possessor of keen artistic perception.

THE BALL DECORATION.

The illustration on page 7 is from a photograph made at the recent date on which the Yuess Gardens Co. decorated the Armory at Newburgh, N. Y., for the annual military ball of the Tenth Separate Company. The illustration shows but a portion of one end of the hall, but the decoration was equally elaborate throughout the rooms.

The Yuess Gardens Co. turns its hand to anything in the horticultural line and reports an excellent season. The cut flower end has been good, with a splendid Decoration day business and fine trade in June, due to many weddings and other social work. The bedding season kept them on the jump and in the seed department a larger business was done than in any previous year.

AN ELABORATE DECORATION.

The international horse show is a great event at the Olympia, London, and this year it owed no small amount of its popularity to the marvelous floral decorations carried out by William Whiteley, Ltd., Hillingdon Heath and London. The dull and cheerless Olympia was transformed into a beautiful garden, varying not with the seasons, but varying daily as a different style of decoration presented itself to the visitors each morning. One day it was a garden of roses, another day an old English garden, another day an Italian garden and so on throughout the week or ten days of the show.

The scheme of decoration was probably the largest ever carried out by a single firm and some idea of its magnitude may be gleaned when we state that Messrs. Whiteley used 15,000 scarlet geraniums, 15,000 coleus, 10,000 hydrangeas, all the foregoing in 48's and 32's. Over 2,000 rambler roses in 16's and 24's, in addition to rhododendrons, standard fuchsias, Japanese maples, etc. Further they introduced about 200 loads of clay, 600 square yards of soil and 50,000 square feet of turf, and fifty men were employed getting all into shape for the opening. Quick changes had to be effected, not only in altering from one style to another each night, but where the decorations were broken up in the arena by the horses, much work had to be done in the intervals between the performances. On the occasion of the king's visit the royal box was decorated with rambler roses, pink hydrangeas, Japanese maples, smilax, etc. A ribbon border encircled the arena, composed of marguerites, hydrangeas and coleus, with rambler roses in the background and at intervals vases of flowers and graceful statues; also two large golden crowns, four feet in diameter and five feet high, filled with golden coleus and pink hydrangeas.

One of the most effective pieces of decoration was just within the main entrance, a pretty flower garden with beds and vases of flowers, encircling a fountain. In the evening when the electric light was on the effect was exceedingly pretty. Throughout the building standard fuchsias, clipped box trees of varying designs and standard bays were effectively introduced and 500 baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri, with floral trails, were suspended from the roof. The whole of the decorations reflected the highest credit on the firm and the able and genial manager, Mr. Fortescue, who saw everything through and up to time without a hitch. To accomplish this, however, a day staff and a night staff were constantly at work.

PERENNIALS FOR RETAILERS.

A Neglected Branch of the Business.

One of the branches of the business of retail growers that is only too often sadly neglected, even in many instances entirely overlooked, is the growing of perennials for spring sales. There are a lot of men who are perfectly willing to grow a geranium from a cutting struck in October, have the plant occupy bench room until the following May and then accept 10 cents or 12 cents retail for it, while a delphinium, Shasta daisy, gaillardia, coreopsis or campanula will bring twice the price, with hardly one-third the trouble or expense in growing.

There may not be as great demand for perennials as for general bedding stock, nor can they be always used in place of other stock for formal bedding, yet the demand for hardy plants on the part of the public has been steadily growing for the last ten years, and it seems that while practically all of the larger firms in the country have met and encouraged in every way this demand by the growing of large quantities of stock and the offering of quite a number of novelties of great merit, the smaller retail grower has done but little to push things in this direction.

While there are places where a nice assortment of well grown plants are on hand, which bring as good returns as any other class of plants on the grounds, there are more places, by far, where this is not the case. Plants which could have been just as well grown on the place have to be ordered in the last minute from afar. The shipping of this class of stock long distances, and late in the season, never improves it, and even at its best it cannot be compared with home grown plants.

Methods of Culture.

Pot grown perennials are of great value and are superior to field grown plants where late planting is to be done, or where stock is to be shipped long distances. This method is, however, but little made use of by the average retail grower, who can lift his plants with a good clump of soil and do the transplanting in short order. The culture of perennials is very simple and requires not half the skill it does to produce good specimens of bedding stock in pots.

As the object of this article is to help the beginner to work up a stock of the more widely known varieties of perennials for this fall and next spring's sales, I will only speak of such now as can nicely be grown from seeds, which, however, should be planted at once in order to get desired results. An outdoor frame is better than flats for the seeds. We sow in drills about five inches apart, and cover with sashes until the small plants are well established. After that, a protection of shade frames, made of laths, will shelter the seedlings from the hot sun, as well as from heavy rains. Great care should be taken in covering the seeds; only too often this is done too heavily. The young plants can be transplanted as soon as large enough to handle.

Canterbury Bells, Foxgloves and Poppies.

Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bell, should be found in every collection of hardy plants. Many more would be sold if the public could see more of them. At this writing they are at their best and as showy, to say the least, as any other plant in bloom. Seed sown now will produce fine, strong plants by fall, of which some can be potted up in October and kept in a coldframe until about January. Brought in then and given gentle heat, they will make most desirable Easter plants, for which purpose the white, light blue, and pink are the most valuable. Field grown plants can also be lifted in spring, when just coming into bloom. Potted up in 8-inch pots, they will make beautiful decorative material for the veranda.

No time should be lost in sowing out some Digitalis gloxiniæflora, or foxglove. Seed sown in August often makes fine plants, but these may not bloom the following spring. Sow thin; quite often the young plants damp off before they can be transplanted, on account of being crowded too much.

Papaver orientale, or oriental poppy, is one of the most showy early flowering perennials. Its bright red, large flowers liven up the border in early June. Even when out of bloom, its fernlike foliage is beautiful during summer. A mass of poppies and Chrysanthemum maximum makes a grand combination.

Other Useful Sorts.

It is not too early to sow aquilegias

The columbines are all beautiful, whether we look at the ones grown from a package of seed which has cost 10 cents an ounce, or at the newer hybrids at twenty times that price. Delphinium, or larkspur, forms a great standby in the perennial border. Some beautiful, soft shades of blue have been added of late to the list of varieties. A fine assortment can be found in Kelway's Hybrids. Sow at once.

A half ounce of seed of Dianthus plumarius, the pheasant's eye pink, will give a few hundred strong, bushy plants, which will be loaded with flowers next spring. There are always plenty admirers of this old favorite and more should be grown. Shasta daisies can also be sown out now, as well as gaillardias, in order to have salable plants this fall. Both are good sellers and a good number should be found on every place, to cut from during the summer months. Hollyhocks may also be sown now. It is important to keep the colors separate. It is just as easy to do so, and a great deal of bad feeling can be avoided by being able to give customers a red or a pink when they ask for them.

There are a great number of other very desirable perennials, besides the above, which can be grown early from seed, but if a good stock of those mentioned is grown by the beginner it will be found a paying investment for but little expense and trouble. More varieties can be added from time to time. All those described in these notes will stand an ordinary winter, such as we get in the middle west, yet it is advisable to give them protection in a coldframe. They can be at once transplanted into winter quarters as soon as the seedlings are large enough, giving them about six inches of room each way. Sashes covered with mats or shutters form a good protection, but a covering of brush and leaves will do nicely. Fritz Bahr.

CULTIVATION OF GLADIOLI.

[A paper by Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, July 7, 1908.]

It is with much pleasure, and with a high appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, that I address you this evening upon a subject which, in spite of other business cares and responsibilities, has been uppermost in my ambition and desire to excel; that is, the "Cultivation of Gladioli."

Doubtless some, if not all, of you are familiar with the exceptionally rapid development and improvement of this flower during the last ten years or so. Especially do I refer to the artistic forms and coloring of enormous flowers, properly arranged on a gracefully bending spike.

The time was not long ago when practically the only gladiolus bulbs commercially offered were of one type, the Gandavensis, with stiff, straight spikes, comparatively small flowers arranged closely together, all of the buds developing at about the same time. The variety of colors also was limited and it is no wonder to me that, except for massive decorations, the average florist has been slow to take up the growing of this flower.

Our Debt to Groff and Lemoine.

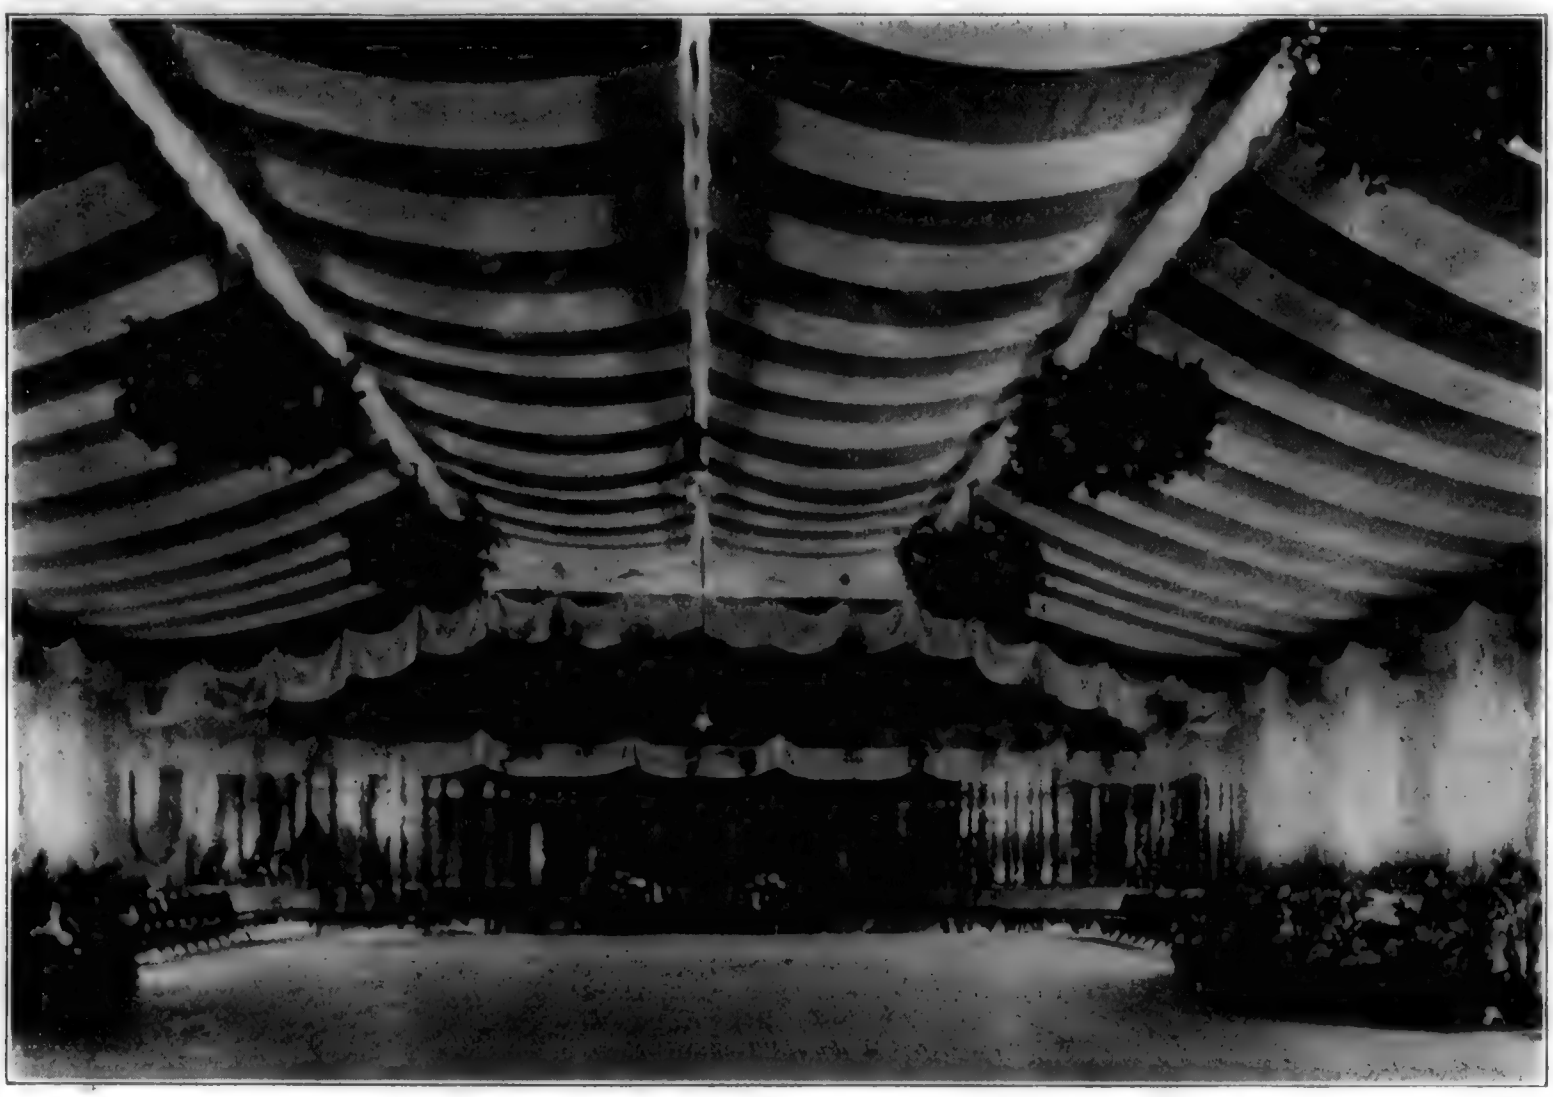
To such hybridizers as Groff and Lemoine are we indebted for the many types of beautiful and artistic flowers which have been recently introduced, and upon which, although it may seem impossible, improvement is constantly being made. These modern hybrids, from their cheapness and adaptability to any kind of decoration, either large or small, are yearly tempting more and more the artistic, critical and exacting florist. I do not wish to appear in the light of condemning the entire Gandavensis family. Such is not my intention, for among the hosts of named varieties of this class are many which I value highly on account of some particular attribute or attributes which render them invaluable for certain purposes.



For instance, I have found the varieties Shakespeare, May, Augusta and Brenchleyensis the most reliable for forcing purposes, one year with another. With a succession of plantings, also, this type can be used with splendid results en masse on extensive lawns, where the contrast in colors is most pleasing.

As my task has been principally in the direction of collecting, selecting, classifying and growing commercially this bulb, my talk will be on this line rather than from the scientific or hybridizer's standpoint, although I have had considerable experience with hybridizing in my early work.

Early Experiences.

Ever since I knew anything about flowers the gladiolus has been my favorite, the growing of which I called a fad up to a few years ago, when, realizing the possibilities of the development and consequent demand for these modern types, I concluded, if possible, to make a business of the growing of these bulbs. I was convinced, also, that the soil and climatic conditions of my section of the country were especially adapted to the development of a strong, vigorous bulb, which in the gardens of the amateur and professional growers would give most satisfactory results. How well I have succeeded is indicated by the harvest in 1907 of about 16,000 bushels of bulbs, bulblets and cormels, all of which stock has been disposed of during the season of 1908-1909, with the exception of such as we were obliged to retain for further growing. This stock is made up of selections from unnamed seedlings and named varieties placed in mixtures and color sections, also named varieties of recent introduction, as well as novelties not yet introduced, and, of course, some old varieties, which by reason of some particular attributes are still in demand, are retained.

Comparing the wild species with the modern hybrids, one could hardly believe that the latter were offsprings of the former. Of the wild species referred to, there have so far been discovered 140 or more, a few being natives of Europe and western Asia, a few from the mountains of tropical Africa. Most of them, however, are from South Africa (Cape Colony and Natal). The leading parents of garden sorts are the species psittacinus, cardinalis, Saundersii, purpureo-auratus, Papilio, dracocephalus, Cooperii, Adlami and cruentus. But few of them are of value to the garden, and then only as curiosities. In addition to the use of wild species, many domestic species have been produced which have been of incalculable value in securing new types and colors, as far as the general habits and constitution are concerned.

History of the Gladiolus.

The gladiolus is quite an old flower, for we find that as far back as 1596 Gladiolus segetum was cultivated, and in 1629 Gladiolus Byzantinus was quite popular. Also during the last half of the eighteenth century many species were introduced, causing a great deal of interest in this flower.

At one time Gladiolus segetum and G. communis were highly prized for their medicinal properties, but for what ailment I have been unable to ascertain. The starchy bulbs of some African species were also used by the natives as food. In 1823 Mr. Colvill, of Chelsea, brought to notice the variety Colvillei, a cross between cardinalis and tristis, and which by later breeding has shown some beautiful hybrids, especially adapted for early forcing, although the flower is quite small.

It seems, however, to have been left to Van Houtte to start the ball rolling, when in 1841 he introduced to the trade the Gandavensis type, said by some authorities to be a cross between psittacinus and cardinalis, while others claim it is the result of crossing psittacinus and oppositiflorus. I am inclined to the former theory, although in some so-called Gandavensis hybrids the blood of oppositiflorus is recognized. Especially is it prominent in that old variety, Ceres.

The Lemoinei type, a hybrid of purpureo-auratus and Gandavensis, was first introduced in 1878 by Victor Lemoine, and the Nanceianus, a hybrid of Lemoinei and Saundersii, was introduced in 1889 by the same hybridizer. About this time, or perhaps a little earlier, a cross between Gandavensis and Saundersii was obtained by Max Leichtlin, of Germany, which strain came to America and was named Childsii.

About the year 1887 I happened to see a small planting of gladioli in the garden of a personal friend, which, on comparing quality, vitality and multiplying functions, were a revelation to me. I found, upon inquiring, that they were hybrids from the trial grounds of H. H. Groff, of Canada, and immediately I made it my business to stock up as rapidly as possible from that source, so that today I have between 15,000 and 20,000 seedlings of exceptional merit, the result of crosses made by that hybridizer.

Culture in the Field.

The methods employed in the successful cultivation of the gladiolus are too well known to all of you for me to go into full details; hence, I will touch lightly upon this subject. One of the principal points is to select proper soil, for although this bulb will bloom in almost any kind of soil and under adverse conditions, still, like most flowers, it has its choice of soils. Sandy loam is preferable, but if this cannot be supplied, heavy soil may be much lightened by the application of sand. The soil also should be well drained, for the gladiolus will not thrive well where there is excessive moisture.

The soil should be well fertilized in the fall and thoroughly plowed, and again in the spring should be well pulverized, at which time the lightening process with sand should take place if required. The planting can be made in rows or en masse, according to the uses which are to be made of the flowers. If space is limited the rows may be as close as eighteen inches apart. Such planting, of course, is intended for cut flowers.

Four inches is shallow enough to plant in any soil for the bulb to take strong root and to permit of sufficient space for the new bulb or bulbs to form on top of the one planted. By planting this depth, and even a little deeper in especially light soil, the spike from the old corm to the top of the ground is a help toward supporting the mass of flowers which are sure to follow proper cultivation, and, as a general rule, no stakes are required except under extreme conditions, such as continued high winds, sometimes accompanied by driving rains.

Gladiolus bulbs may be carried through the winter year after year in good condition, if stored in a dry place, with as low a temperature as possible above the freezing point.

Propagation.

The multiplication of the same variety is accomplished in two ways: First, by division; the old bulb producing from two to as high as ten new blooming bulbs. Second, by offsets or cormels, which are formed among the roots between the old bulb planted and the new bulb or bulbs, which form on top. A large percentage of these cormels require two years' planting in order to secure blooming bulbs, and the first year may be sowed in rows one inch deep and about twelve inches apart.

New varieties are secured only from seed, and there is no argument which would convince the modern grower that chance seedlings, by bees, butterflies and other insects, are as good as those produced by hand hybridization, especially when hybridized by one whose experience and knowledge of the habits and constitution of the parent plants, as well as the proper methods to secure color results, have taught him when and how to make such crosses. Sports now and then appear in my fields, but, so far, I have been unable to establish and reproduce them.

General Usefulness.

The blooming of the gladiolus, coming as it does at the time of the year when there is comparatively a dearth of other flowers, is a boon to the florists. With its new forms and coloring, there is no decoration for which it is not eminently adapted, and the absence of perfume, as well as the odor from decomposition, which takes place with many other flowers, places it in the lead for table decoration. Beautiful and artistic wedding, funeral and other designs can be made with the individual flowers, while the spikes can be arranged with green foliage in sprays and other forms, lasting much better than roses or carnations, or, in fact, any other flower, which by reason of such use must remain some time without water.

No florist, whether growing for the general or local market, should neglect to force each year at least a few gladioli. Very few are so fortunate as to have their carnation houses entirely free from stem-rot and consequent bare spaces, in which the gladiolus may be planted with excellent results and generally with a reasonable profit for the space occupied. Then, too, there are other house crops, among which are chrysanthemums, which can be economically and profitably followed by the planting of gladioli.

Planting in the Bench.

The temperature in which the best results can be secured is that under which the carnation thrives. Bulbs, after being harvested from the fields in the fall, should be given a reasonable resting period, after which they may be planted in the bench midway between the surface and the bottom of the soil. Sufficient root depth is thereby given and the necessity of staking is also avoided.

The gladiolus is well called the "People's Flower," and I hope that, by careful selection and combination of those varieties best adapted to the use of the craft, the day will not be far distant when it will be a necessary asset to florists in general and will in due time receive the additional title of the "Florists' Flower."

Hardy Roses.

As the blooming season for the majority of hardy roses is now over, it will pay to look over the plants and remove the seed pods. Particularly is this necessary with the hybrid perpetuals. Of course, with such varieties as Rosa rugosa, the fruits are even more attractive than the flowers and should not be cut off.

In the case of the hybrid perpetuals, which are generally budded or grafted stock, it is important to look over the plants carefully and remove the sucker growths of Manetti or seedling briar, or these will soon kill out the grafted portions. How often do we see handsome plants making vigorous growth each year and never blooming—the results of allowing the stock plants to grow and kill out the roses! It is easy to detect the difference between these stock growths and the true roses. They usually carry seven to nine leaf petioles, while most of the roses have only five. They possess far greater vigor than the roses and are invariably very spiny, the spines of the Manetti being of a reddish color. These sprout growths should not be cut off near the surface, but pulled out bodily, or the evil will only be perpetuated.

Only a small cut of blooms can now be expected from the hybrid perpetuals, although there are some varieties, like Frau Karl Druschki, Mrs. Sharman Crawford and Mrs. John Laing, that are good fall bloomers. The hybrid teas are an invaluable class of roses. Their persistent blooming qualities and great variety of colors are strong points in their favor. For design work these are valuable, for there is scarcely a day from June until October when nice flowers cannot be picked. To keep them blooming well and growing vigorously, artificial waterings, with occasional doses of liquid manure and constant tickling of the soil with the hoe, are necessary. Keep the dead leaves picked off. It is surprising how quickly one crop of flowers succeeds another.

Attacks of Aphis.

Both under glass and outdoors, aphis attacks are at this season very persistent and, unless speedily combated, great damage to the plants will result. Under glass, of course, fumigation will keep these pests in control, but in hot weather injury easily results from closing the houses up tight all night, and spraying methods are really preferable.

Black fly on chrysanthemums breeds fast now. A partial cure is dropping tobacco dust on the tops of the shoots, but spraying once a week with a nicotine or soap solution is better. Kerosene emulsion makes a useful and safe insecticide for all forms of aphis. It is easily made and will keep for months when prepared. If a small quantity is needed, shave eight ounces of any hard soap fine and dissolve in a gallon of boiling water. Remove from the fire and stir two gallons of kerosene into it. Churn until it becomes creamy and later butter-like. Keep in a stone crock for use. Do not use wooden kegs, or much of the oil will escape. Use one part of this emulsion to ten parts of water for green fly, one part to six for black fly, applying it in the evening. This can be used on practically all plants subject to aphis attacks. Even the white fly is kept in check by its use.

In using whale oil soap, one pound to eight gallons of water will destroy aphis. We find this more liable to burn the foliage, especially under glass, than the kerosene emulsion. Before applying whale oil soap, remove the sediment which floats on the surface of the water and be sure to keep the mixture thoroughly agitated.

San Jose Scale.

There is probably not a single state in the Union where the San Jose scale is not now firmly established. The absence in most locations of natural parasites, the astounding fecundity of the scale and the fact that it is carried from place to place on the feet of birds cause it to spread with alarming rapidity. Its small size renders it so inconspicuous that it is only when shrubs begin to have a sickly appearance or are entirely dead that its presence is detected.

For badly affected plants, pulling up and burning is the best remedy. Where, however, some valuable shrubs are attacked which it is desired to save, a syringing with one of the soluble oil preparations, such as Scalecide, in the proportion of one part of the oil to twenty of water, will be found effective. Where large areas are to be sprayed, the cost of this remedy may prove a deterrent and in such case the lime and sulphur mixture should be applied. This is, however, difficult to prepare and disagreeable to both man and beast to apply.

All the roses are subject to San Jose attacks. So, also, are lilacs, hawthorns, poplars, willows, Japanese quinces, pears, plums, currants, gooseberries and many other fruits and ornamental shrubs. For application to the bark with a brush, two pounds of whale oil soap in a gallon of hot water will kill the pest. This mixture must not be applied to the foliage, or it will burn it. It can, however, be applied in spray form while trees and shrubs are dormant. Under glass, hydrocyanic acid gas is the only safe remedy.

It is now compulsory for many nurseries to fumigate their stock before sending it out. Probably this is not always done. At all events, the receipt of shrubs from nurseries advertising clean bills of health from state inspectors, which come badly affected with the scale, shows that greater care is still necessary in this respect.

Lorraine Begonias.

Growth is never rapid with Lorraine begonias during the hot months. With the advent of cooler nights they will, however, make quicker headway. Grow them in a house or frame where the glass is just sufficiently shaded to break the hot rays of the sun. Heavy shading is quite harmful. Spray them over once or twice a day lightly and close up about 4 o'clock, to give them a warm, moist, growing atmosphere. Put on a little ventilation for the night. Do not allow the plants to become potbound. When potting, avoid large shifts and use plenty of flaky leaf-mold in the compost. Keep the tops of the leading shoots pinched and remove all flowers.

Dahlias.

While essentially a late summer and fall flower, some of the earliest planted dahlias are already showing their flower buds. Such plants will finish blooming long before the first sharp frost blackens their foliage. We have for some years favored rather late planting, sorts set out in early June giving later blooms and of equal quality to those planted a month earlier. It is not wise to leave more than one strong shoot to a plant. If the top is pinched out of this when eight to ten inches high, it will cause free branching, and with such plants staking can almost be dispensed with. Most of the large commercial growers use no supports, but where small lots are grown for home trade, it pays to use some stakes. There is then no probability of the plants being broken to pieces by high winds. Keep the ground freely cultivated and the plants will grow fast.

It is not too late to root cuttings of any kinds you may desire to save pot roots of. These can either be rooted singly in pots of sandy loam, in which they can remain, or they can be placed in a propagating bed and potted off when rooted. Plunge them in an old hotbed after being rooted in the pots. They will make nice pot roots for selling another season, preferable in many respects to the large ground roots.

Antirrhinums.

If any early planting of antirrhinums is desired, it is not too early to sow a batch of seeds. These can either be potted off singly or transplanted to the open ground when large enough to handle. While we have seen good results from each system, the potted plants have generally done the best. Cuttings taken from good selected plants can also be used. These are less vigorous than seedlings, but produce finer spikes and have, of course, no poor varieties, some of which will usually appear among the seedlings. Do not use mixed seedlings. There is a good call for separate colors, but very little for mixtures.

Clematis Paniculata.

Where seed of Clematis paniculata was sown late last fall and kept in a coldframe, there is now a fine crop of seedlings appearing. These will be transplanted in nursery rows within a month's time, a cool, moist day being chosen for the work. While it takes two or three years to get strong, salable plants, the method of propagation is so simple that anyone can adopt it with success. There is always a good demand for plants of this popular climber.

LILIES DAMAGED BY STORM.

Will you kindly let me know if the bulbs of the auratum and rubrum lilies can be kept for next season? We have just had a bad hail storm, which destroyed everything, and some of these lilies were in bud. Can I expect as good a crop from lily bulbs kept over for next crop? L. A. G.

While you could keep over these lilies in pots until another season, they would not give you as vigorous spikes as the first year. You can repot them when dormant, treating them as you would newly imported bulbs, and get flowers a little earlier next season than would have been the case this year had they flowered. We doubt, however, if it will pay you to go to this trouble when the low price of the bulbs is considered.

Our advice would be to put your damaged plants outdoors, in good soil where they can get some shade. Set them deeply, covering the tops of the bulbs eight to ten inches. Give a coating of coarse manure as a winter mulch. These will give you a useful lot of blooms next July and August. Purchase some fresh bulbs in November. Grow these indoors all the time. For the first few months a cold pit or frost-proof shed will answer well. After growth starts, give them a cool greenhouse. C. W.

Establishment of A. Wakefield, Waterville, N. Y.

GOOD BUSINESS.

At Waterville, N. Y., A. Wakefield conducts the neatly kept establishment shown in the accompanying illustration. Waterville is not a metropolis, and Mr. Wakefield is not a specialist, but he has been at it twenty-two years and each one of them has given him a living and a profit. In speaking of present business conditions he says: "Trade has never been better in my twenty-two years of experience. I have kept an account of sales for each month and for each year during all that period and the total for the last year was about five per cent greater than for any of the years preceding. I have every reason to believe that it will be larger again this year. People are learning that it is not extravagance to plant flower beds, but a good investment, as it contributes to their pride, their pleasure, and the increase in the value of the property."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Trade's Exhibition.

Now that the spring rush of business and work is practically over, the florists' thoughts will naturally turn to the annual convention. It seems to me anything new that can be said on this subject should prove of interest at this time.

The trade exhibition, of which the management has been placed in my hands, will be as interesting and complete as in former years. Entries which have been made up to now bear me out when I say that I think this will even be the banner year for this branch of the Society of American Florists' convention. It will be worth while to travel a long way to see all the good things that will be shown here.

It is still six weeks to the time when all florists will wend their way to beautiful Niagara Falls, but already there are about forty firms and individuals who have taken space and are making preparations to show their wares and products to the many visitors who will fill the large halls and rooms where the exhibition will be held.

The following have been booked, with the number of square feet set opposite, not speaking of a large number of people who are at present negotiating for space.

I have also had a number of inquiries for hotel accommodations, all of which have been put into the proper hands. From what I have observed by coming into contact with people interested in this meeting, I feel sure that this convention will be up to the usual standard. The large eastern cities will bring their regular quota and no doubt the west can secure good rates. There is no reason why the Falls will not see a record crowd of florists. Perhaps it would be well for all, especially those who travel in large parties and wish to stay together, to secure hotel room early.

THE PEONY IS POPULAR

RECORDING AND LABELING.

An Important Item With Peonies.

Keeping complete records and properly and permanently labeling a field of peonies consisting of several hundred varieties, that have been purchased from a number of different growers and at different times, becomes a problem unless done thoroughly and in the right way. Especially is this true where the roots are grown for sale and must be kept true to label.

The fact that the flood has washed out, or that a careless plowman or hoeman has broken off, the label, or that a fire has destroyed the records does not constitute with the buyer a sufficient excuse why one should make him suffer, and the buyer is right.

Ward Welsh, of the Perennial Gardens, Springfield, O., has, after considerable time in experimenting, adopted a method that to me is both simple, safe and sure, consisting of four articles—a record, a chart, permanent and temporary labels.

There is first a record book of plantings, then a chart of the field by rows. Of each of these there are three copies, kept in separate places so as to avoid loss by fire or otherwise.

The Record.

Each variety is given a number, which is never changed. This is entered in the record book, the page of the same number being used for its record. Where known the introducer, with year of introduction, is given, with the different descriptions one can find; also your own description, with such other notes as may be of interest.

To illustrate, Marie Lemoine is given the number 31. It will appear on page thirty-one of the record thus: "31 Marie Lemoine (Calot 1869)."

Then follows the different descriptions, noting whose they are. Thus: "10/15/06 Bee 600, 65c, true," would indicate that October 15, 1906, there had been purchased from Beerhorst & Son, 600 Marie Lemoine at 65 cents each and that they were true to name.

A record is also kept of planting, when divisions are made, and also of sales, with wholesale prices for each year. These are all matters of interest from many points of view and as the years go by the information this record book will supply will not only be of great value but amusing as well. For instance, a record like this, on page 101: "9/26/04 Joe, 1,000, 40c, measly pink," would indicate that September 26, 1904, you purchased from Jones & Co. 1,000 Mme. Ducel at 40 cents each and that they not only turned out untrue, but worthless for any purpose. Does the honest grower put these worthless sorts in his mixture to be sold to nurserymen and to the department store trade at a cheap price? No; they find their way to the rubbish pile. In the meantime, you have had it out with Jones & Co. and have either got back your $400 or else are holding the bag.

Your records will also show that you paid from $30 to $40 per hundred for Festiva Maxima in 1904, while in 1908 you are selling them for $14. If such matters are not recorded you soon forget these facts, where you are growing many varieties. By all means keep a record book. Some use cards; I prefer the book, of which a pocket edition is used in the field at blooming and planting time.

The Chart.

The chart of the planting consists simply of a record of the rows. The Perennial Gardens' planting is divided in the center by a roadway or turning row, the rows on either side being about 300 feet in length.

Where the varieties are in sufficient quantity, they are planted in even rows; when more than one variety is planted in a row, three feet is left in the rows between each variety. The chart would read thus: "Rows 1 to 40 inclusive, No. 30. (The record book shows this to be Festiva Maxima). Row 41, ten feet No. 132; fifty-five feet No. 158; 100 feet No. 127." Being interpreted: Ten feet of Avalanche, fifty-five feet of Modeste Guerin, 100 feet of Mme. Bucquet and 135 feet of Claire Dubois. Thus, with the chart, you can pull up or destroy every label in the field and still have no mixture. Your record book goes on forever, while the chart, of necessity, is made new after each planting.

Permanent Label.

There are two labels used, permanent and temporary. The permanent label is of red cedar, 1x2½x24, and remains in the ground permanently, driven so that only eight inches remains above the ground, being out of the way and in no way interfering with the cultivation. The wood precludes decay. They bear the legend, stamped in the label with a steel die, "12 Uni," which means Albert Crousse, purchased from the United States Nursery Co. Say this variety had been purchased from ten different firms: each purchase would have a label bearing the number 12 and the first three letters of the name of the firm from which the plants were purchased. There is no guesswork about this label. It tells that certain plants of a certain variety were purchased from a certain firm. When the variety is proven this fact goes on your record book and all but the head label is dispensed with.

Red cedar is liable to sometimes split down in driving it into the ground, but with care and by placing a block on the end of the label when driving, few are injured. Better to lose a few labels than to use wood in your labels that goes to pieces in a short time. Red cedar is practically indestructible by the elements.

Temporary Label.

The temporary label consists simply of a common pine picket, four feet in length, painted white, with the number and name lettered in black, thus: "276, Marguerite Gerard." This temporary label is used at blooming and digging time and makes it easier for everyone, as referring to records is avoided. One might use ten or more permanent labels for a variety but never require more than one temporary label to head the variety, being placed immediately back of the first or head permanent label of each variety. When not in use, they are stored in the dry and are thus never in the way when cultivating by plow or hoe.

Care should be taken in the lettering of this label, as it will answer for many years. The lettering should be done neatly by one who knows. Try an understudy in a civil engineer's office to do this lettering for you. You will find this temporary label a "joy forever" and pleasant to look at, and all visitors to your grounds while the peonies are in bloom will rise up and call you blessed. And then, again, it gives you more time to study your pets, with the pocket edition of your records containing all the necessary data and a legible label giving the name in full standing out plainly and well above the foliage. It is a great pleasure to inspect a field of peonies under such conditions.

The Proven Ground.

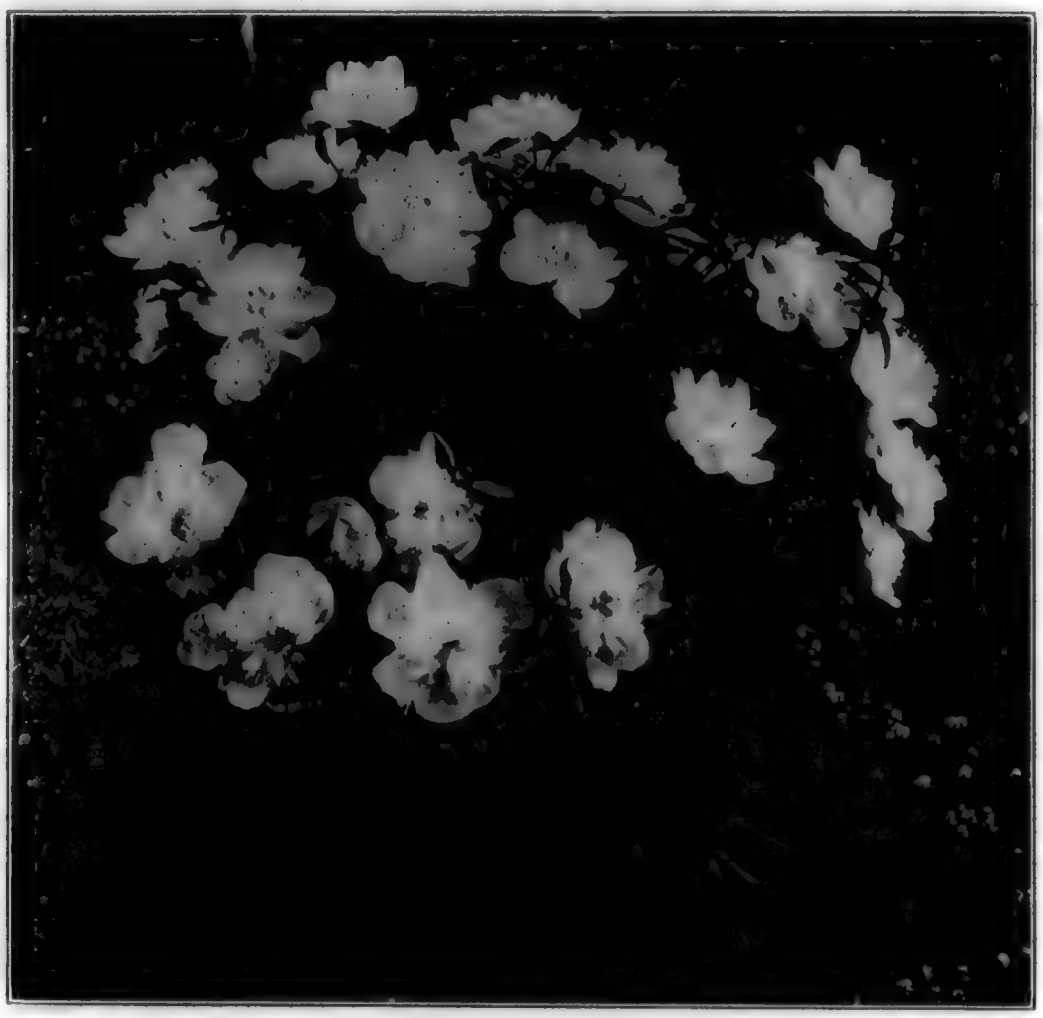
To one who has grown peonies and loves them, how well do they regret the years they do not see them give normal bloom by reason of having to dig and divide the plants to get the increase! To overcome this, Mr. Welsh has a proven field that is left undisturbed; this planting contains as well the discarded varieties as those that are accepted as worth growing; in other words, this proven plot is a permanent planting of every variety, planted high above frost to insure their blooming each year and used as an object lesson. What a pleasure they are!

It is usual in writing about the peony that the good kinds are lauded but nothing said about the worthless sorts, of which there are many. To my mind a record of the poor varieties of peonies is just as valuable as a record of the good varieties, hence the proven plot contains, "lest you forget," every variety purchased, and reminds you to keep away from certain kinds, while of others it says, "Get all you can."

Then, again, the Perennial Gardens have a permanent planting for cut flowers well up on the side of a hill, with a forest for background; this to be out of the way of frost. I saw a block of Festiva Maxima, from which 8,000 blooms had been cut one morning, and after cutting the plants gave the appearance of a bank of snow. Flowers were shipped as far as Oklahoma and Canada with good results.



The florist who gets some of the best varieties in the different colors will have a useful cut flower coming in when he needs flowers badly and in addition can reimburse his exchequer by the sale of roots, but by all means know what you have. Do not be satisfied with the local term "F. L. A. pink" (first, last and all the time), for the grand variety, Livingstone; better call it "Old Liv."

I am unqualifiedly in favor of a good local name to sell either flowers or plants by, but I should consider myself a back number were I not familiar with the proper name of a flower I was growing when same could be determined.

JOHN M. GOOD.

PEONY QUEEN VICTORIA.

Queen Victoria and Whitleyi are regarded as synonymous names, but Queen Victoria is the one now generally recognized, although Whitleyi has a claim of priority. It is specially interesting to note that this variety was introduced exactly 100 years ago. The name Queen Victoria first appeared in 1830, which is some little time before the horticultural trades in America had attained their present development. Who introduced Queen Victoria, or if different varieties were sent out by that name, is not settled. The peony check-list published at Cornell, where the American Peony Society has its trials, states that Queen Victoria was introduced by Kelway. C. W. Ward says it was originated and distributed by Guerin. The peony check-list says the French sort, Reine Victoria, is quite different.

Peony Queen Victoria.

However, the variety shown in the accompanying illustration is so generally recognized as possibly the best cut flower peony that it has become one of the most widely grown in the United States and a planter is practically sure of getting the right thing wherever he orders Queen Victoria or Whitleyi. The flower is not one of the largest, but it has a well-filled center, creamy white, with pure white outside petals. Its popularity with florists lies in the fact that it is such an excellent keeper and shipper. It is probable that for the Chicago market, where the cold storage of cut blooms of peonies was first practiced and is now carried on to a greater and more successful extent than in any other market, Queen Victoria comprises nearly half of the total number of blooms stored.

Queen Victoria is not only one of the best sorts for florists for cutting, but is so plentiful that prices are down to where it is among the cheapest.

PEONY MME. FURTADO.

Mme. Furtado is one of the old sorts that is, perhaps, not so well known as it should be. It is a Guerin variety and was, so far as records go, first described in 1863, by the Revue Horticole. It is a strong grower and profuse bloomer, as will be seen by the accompanying illustration. The color is rosy purple, the center rose-tipped purple. The period of blooming is midseason and the flower is fragrant. It is a sort not listed by many dealers and only three of the test collections at Cornell contain it.

FERNS FROM RUNNERS.

I would like some reader to give the method of rooting ferns from runners. At what stage of growth should they be and how inserted in the benches? Can they be made at any time of the year when runners are available?

A. D. Z.

This query probably refers to the runners of nephrolepis, and the usual practice is to allow the runners to remain on the parent plant until they have formed some roots and also begin to throw up fronds, after which the young plants are cut away from the parent and potted into 2½-inch pots.

The newly potted young plants should be kept moist and also protected from the sun until they become established. In order to get a good crop of runners, the old plants should be planted out on a bench, and in a light and airy house will soon produce a good crop of sturdy young plants. W. H. T.

SOWING SMILAX SEED.

Please let me know the best time and way to sow smilax seed. L. V.

The best time to sow smilax seed is from Christmas to the end of March. Soak the seeds for about twenty-four hours in lukewarm water, then sow in trays, cover the seeds one-quarter to one-half inch with well enriched soil, water thoroughly and set in a warm house near the glass. Keep the boxes covered with paper until the seedlings appear above the ground. ALBERT F. AMLING.

KENTIAS FROM SEED.

Please let me know how to start Kentia Belmoreana from seed. State the kind of soil, treatment, etc.

H. H. P.

When growing kentias from seed in quantity, they are usually sown in a shallow bench in a warm house, using any light soil without manure, and covering the seeds to a depth of one inch.

A smaller lot could be sown in flats, using flats from three to four inches deep and covering to the same depth as suggested above. The flats should be placed in a warm and shaded position in the greenhouse and kept moist.

These seeds are very irregular in germination, and while some of them may come up in two months, there may be others that will not show for nearly a year. So it becomes necessary to be patient before deciding that the seeds are poor. W. H. T.

OBITUARY.

James Cole, Sr.

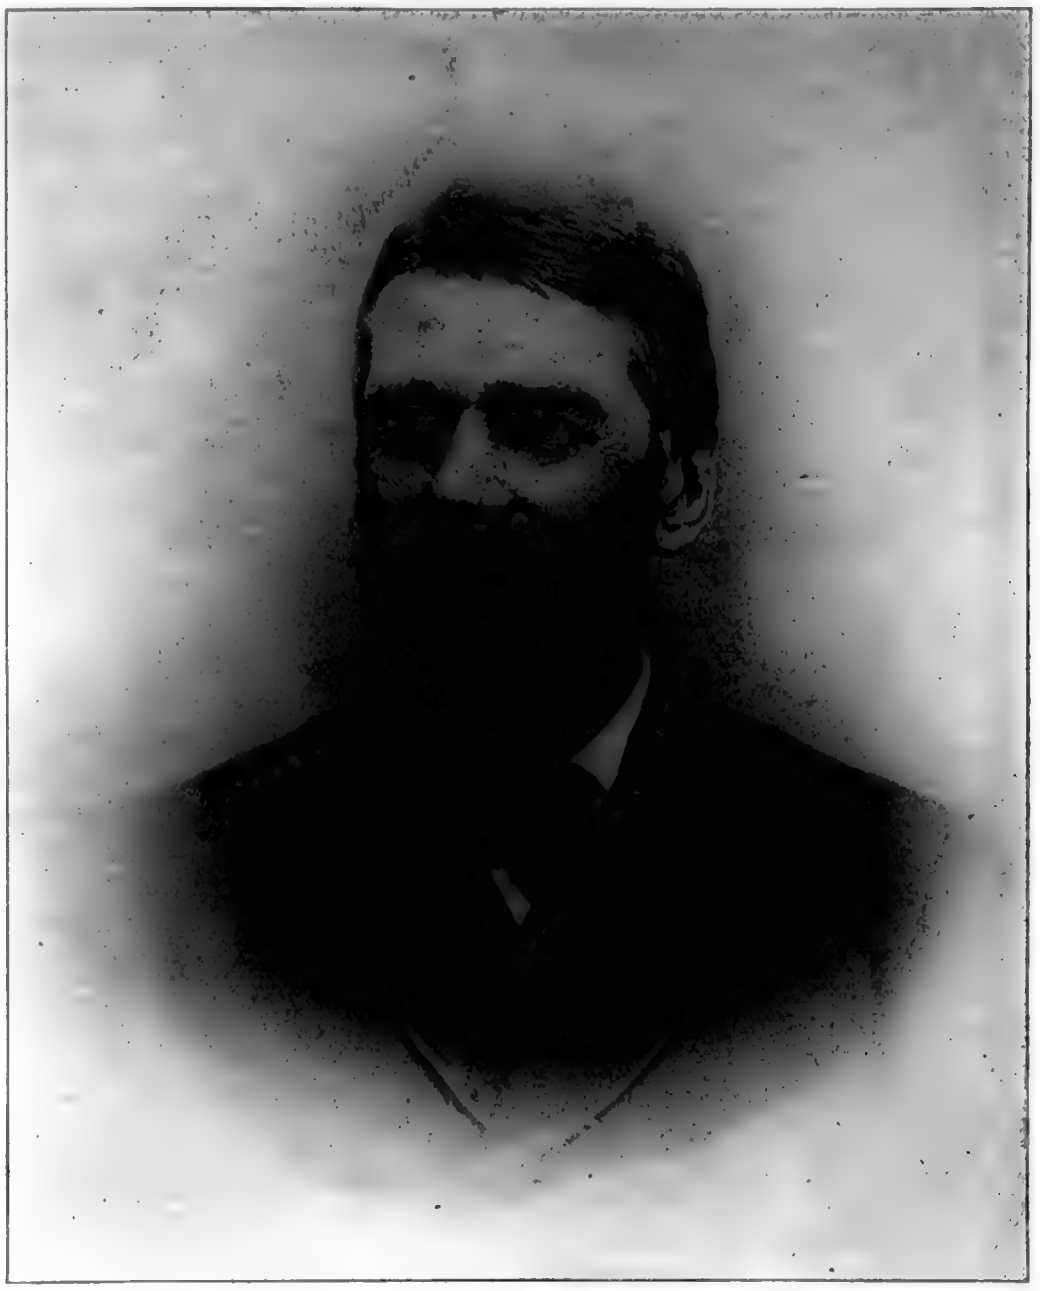
James Cole, Sr., is dead! The news spread rapidly among his former acquaintances, casting gloom and sadness as it went. Mr. Cole was one of the old residents of Peoria, Ill., having settled there in 1863, and there he resided among his flowers and plants until the end came Tuesday afternoon, June 30, at his home, 1602 North Perry avenue.

Perhaps nothing in his life will so well illustrate his love for flowers and horticulture as his death. Surrounded by his children and grandchildren, his last words were for the beauties of his flowers. His entire life had been devoted to them and he seldom left his home to go into the business part of the city, preferring to remain among them. In full possession of all his faculties until quite recently, hale and hearty at 87, Mr. Cole was considered one of the premier florists of the west. For years he had conducted greenhouses in the upper end of the city, and had given to Peoria some of its rarest flowers. Floriculture was with him an inspiration rather than an industry.



Deceased was born in Buckfast Leigh, Devonshire, England, in 1821. Here he learned the carpenter and builder's trade about the year 1840. In 1849 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Manning, of Plymouth, England, the marriage taking place in London. In the year 1857 he left England and coming to this country, settled in Toronto, Canada. After a residence there of four years he came to Chicago to live, and shortly afterwards removed to Peoria. Since his arrival there he had seldom been seen on the streets, the last time being when he journeyed to the business district to witness his grandson march in the Shriners' parade.

Only a few years ago Mr. Cole and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, and this was an event of much rejoicing and happiness to the assembled members of the family. In the year 1902 his wife died. He leaves to mourn his loss three sons, James Cole, Jr., Joseph Manning Cole and Nelson Cole, and one grandson, James Cole. Two other children, a daughter, Augusta Cole, who died in Peoria in 1894, and a son, William Cole, who died in Toronto in 1861, preceded the deceased.

The funeral services over the remains were held July 3.

Newark, O.—William Dickerson, formerly of this city and who has been connected with the Monitor Stove & Range Co., of Cincinnati, for some time past, returned to Newark recently for a two weeks' visit, after which he will go into the greenhouse and poultry business in Canton, O.

James Cole, Sr.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There has been no break in the intensely hot spell and this week opens with a temperature of 90 degrees and excessive humidity. A few more days like this and the condition of things will be serious. Already the gardeners of Long Island feel the strain. Another week of drought and the tomato crop will be hopelessly ruined. The damage to all kinds of vegetables will be enormous. The florists share in the general anxiety and feel intensely the need of rain. The few showers have only been tantalizingly brief and ineffective. David Mellis tells me it takes his entire force, almost, to water the 2,000 lots under his care in Holy Cross cemetery, and his experience may be taken as a general indication as to the results in and around the city. Gladioli, especially, are suffering, of outdoor flowers, and at the present outlook there will be a great loss to encounter. The lawns are gray and the leaves are falling in the parks.

Business is at the lowest ebb in the financial district and Twenty-eighth street is always in sympathy with the spenders. With brokers poor, race tracks closing and society away in the country, what is there left for the florist but recreation? All who can are away, or going where the wicked cease from troubling, in the hills or by the sea.

Roses are a sight, most of them short-stemmed, open and unsalable. The few good ones are corralled quickly, and of the rest—silence. Carnations are not worthy even of honorable mention, and so on down the list. What's the use of troubling about it during July? The weddings are over. There's only funerals and those who go away in ships to stir the waters.

Florists' Club Outing.

The eight annual outing of the New York Florists' Club, July 1, was the record outing of its career. Every year the crowd grows larger and the enthusiasm greater. This year nearly 400 were in attendance. The weather was perfect. No accident marred the happy occasion. Vice-president Marshall and President Traendly, of the S. A. F., made graceful tumbles in their races, but did the ground no serious injury. Stowe's orchestra used up an immense amount of air and played for about ten continuous hours the Scotch and national melodies, as usual, evoking the greatest enthusiasm. The human calliope, Bob Berry, also added his quota to the musical department. The dinner was excellent and the refreshments on the boat were abundant and varied. Great credit is due Chairman Marshall and his committee of twenty for the perfect arrangements of the day, and also to the generous advertisers and contributors of prizes, who made the outing an artistic and financial success.

After the group photograph had been taken, and before dinner, the ball game was completed. Mr. Totty umpired to the satisfaction of all. The single men downed the benedicts, 5 to 1, and also the prize bottles of wine, and each received a fine knife as well, as a memento of his skill. The ball teams were:

| Married Men. | | Single Men. |
|---|---|---|
| Hornecker | P. | Krekeler |
| Irwin | C. | Westman |
| Chadwick | 1st B. | Rogers |
| Foley | 2nd B. | Sheehan |
| Rickards | 3rd B. | Richards |
| Wilson | S. S. | Manda |
| Schreiner | R. F. | Glass |
| Phillips | L. F. | Dupuy |
| Lentz | C. F. | Turney |

The ladies' bowling contest took up several hours of the afternoon. Seven prizes, in value from $2 to $7, were won by Mrs. Dupuy, 70; Mrs. Lentz, 62; Mrs. Schultheis, 54; Mrs. Forberg, 52; Mrs. G. Vocke, 50; Mrs. Langjahr, 49; Mrs. Matthews, 48.

So many ladies bowled that the men were unable to finish before the boat left, and so the contest will be continued in 1909.

These outings are becoming great family reunions; never so many mothers and children as this year. All the babies received Teddy bears, the first prize going to the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schmutz, Jr.

Prize winners in the athletic contests were:

Girls' race, under 5 years—Jennette Marshall first, Bella Scott second, Dorothy Bolles third.
Boys' race, under 5 years—Joe Sullivan first, Alfred Schmutz second, Howard LeRond third.
Girls' race, 5 to 7 years—Gertrude Schimmel first, Mary Walter second, Viola Lind third.
Boys' race, 5 to 7 years—Joseph Walter first, James Sullivan second, William Weber third.

Boys' race, 7 to 8 years—Donald Marshall first, George Walter second, Arthur Guttman third.
Girls' race, 8 to 10 years—Ethel Adam first, Alice Walter second, Mildred Marshall third.
Boys' race, 8 to 10 years—Robert Burnett first, Tiffy Lind second, Harold Lind third.
Girls' race, 10 to 12 years—Louise Millang first, Annie Miessem second, Olive Iler third.
Boys' race, 10 to 12 years—Phil Walter first, Harry Schenck second, Alex Iler third.

Married ladies' race—Mrs. Hornecker first, Mrs. Handel second, Mrs. J. Wendt third.
Married men's race—W. A. Phillips first, L. Trask second, D. Ciacci third.
Club members, 150 yards—Joe Manda first, Alfred Wheeler second, W. A. Phillips third.
Fat men's race—Frank H. Traendly first, W. A. Manda second, William Hopwood third.

Most of the prizes were $5, $2.50 and $1 in cash, the first and second in gold. Dancing, boating and other amusements rounded out the happy day. The trip home was good-naturedly hilarious. On the lower deck some of the club's bulwarks indulged in melody, Auld Lang Syne predominating. "All's well that ends well," and no outing the New York club has ever enjoyed is fuller of pleasant memories.

Various Notes.

Alfred Zeller has been quite ill since the growers' outing, also two of his daughters. Mr. Zeller won the second prize for bowling at that outing, a large stein, you remember, but the illness had no relation to the prize.

Anton Schultheis, who intended leaving for Europe this week, has cut out his trip this season and will test his new steam yacht as a rejuvenator, with his family, on the Sound.

Louis Schmutz and his relatives, to the number of twenty, easily bore off the palm for family honors at the Florists' Club's outing.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., will leave shortly for his annual tour in Europe.

The transportation committee of the Florists' Club is already busy arranging for the trip to the Niagara Falls convention. If all who intend to go will send their names to Walter Sheridan, 39 West Twenty-eighth street, it will greatly aid the committee in perfecting arrangements. New York must make a demonstration this year and the special train should carry at least 200.

H. E. Froment will enjoy his summer rest "in the clouds" early in August, as usual.

Mrs. Charles H. Totty and daughter will leave next week for their summer outing at the old home in Canandaigua, N. Y. In the meantime, the mum king is busier than ever dispensing novelties and will stay so until after the convention.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. reports a most satisfactory season.

Business continues excellent at A. T. Boddington's and the year has surpassed all records of this progressive house. As usual, Harry Bunyard will do the honors for the firm at the convention.

The peonies mentioned last week were grown by John Young, at his Bedford farm, and were as handsome as their producer.

Next week the Greek-American florists celebrate their second annual outing, July 16, at Wetzel's Point, by steamer Isabel, from the same dock and at the same hour the Florists' Club found convenient.

William Duckham was given a farewell dinner, July 3, at one of the swell hotels, by his Masonic friends, of Madison, on the eve of his departure for Europe, Messrs. Herrington and Totty among the sendoffers.

J. R. Shields, of Dalton, Mass., gardener for F. G. Crane, left for Scotland and other lands July 2, by steamer Celtic.

Mr. Reidel, of A. J. Guttman's, left July 1 for England and Germany, a trip generously given him as a Christmas present by his employer. Mr. Hopkins, bookkeeper for Mr. Guttman, is enjoying his vacation at his old home in Portland, Me.

Michael Ford, of Ford Bros., is away for a July in the mountains.

Charles McCauley, of Washington, was a recent caller. He thinks Washington bowlers will give a good account of themselves at Buffalo.

P. H. Goodsell has decided to try the nursery business on his own account, with an office at 200 Broadway. He has had considerable experience, having been with Mr. Kelsey for ten years.

Mr. Reed, of Reed & Keller, has purchased a home at Hackensack, N. J. The firm will have a large exhibit at Niagara Falls, under the personal attention of Mr. Reed.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

OTTO G. KOENIG, secretary of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, has issued the preliminary list of premiums for that organization's fall exhibition.

THE REVIEW has received a four-page anonymous letter commenting in caustic language on the practices of certain New York commission houses that are alleged to fill retail orders as well as those of the trade. The correspondent concludes: "It is an old sore, but I don't suppose you would dare publish this." The correspondent signed only an initial; if he will attach his full name to the communication it will be published for what it is worth.

JOHN CRAIG, of Cornell University, whose physician sentenced him to rest and recuperation from a threatened breakdown, wrote the REVIEW from Freiburg, Germany, June 21: "For the last two months I have been knocking about Italy with an eye on schools of horticulture and agriculture. The kingdom of Italy supports five colleges of agriculture of university grade. Each has laboratories and trial grounds. Some of the latter are extensive and excellent in detail. I shall spend a month or more in Germany and then go to Belgium and France. I hope to visit a large number of seed houses and nurserymen."

THE commercial agencies and other sources of business information say that general trade activity is steadily on the increase, but advertising men who come in touch with a variety of lines assert that personal experience does not confirm these optimistic reports. The consensus of such opinion is that there has lately been a relapse rather than an increase in general business activity and that the florists, especially those outside the big cities, are to be congratulated that their business has been so good as it has been in the last six months; the flower business has surely been affected as little as any line, and not nearly so much as some. The presidential campaign will be a factor in postponing a revival of activity, but a greater one will be the fact that the farmers as a body are now able to hold their crops and need not rush them to market as soon as ready, with the result of putting most of the money at once into circulation. The volume of business in this country always will be large, so long as crops are good and the country's wealth is not impaired, but no boom in business is to be expected this fall.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill., register carnation Orland P. Bassett; parentage Crane and Prosperity; color deep red; size of flower three and one-half to three and three-quarters inches; calyx long and never splits; stems strong and stiff and long; very strong grower, every shoot producing a flower.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

RATES TO NIAGARA FALLS.

It is stated by a railroad man that at the last meeting of the Central Passenger Association at Chicago last week the matter of a special rate for the Society of American Florists' convention at Niagara Falls was reconsidered and it was decided to grant a rate of fare and a half for the round trip, but only on condition that 1,000 be present. The fare of 2 cents a mile in each direction, which is now the regular rate in most states, is practically the same as the fare and a third formerly granted on the certificate plan. If the Central Passenger Association rate of a fare and a half can be obtained by virtue of large attendance it will be the cheapest transportation any considerable part of the Society of American Florists' members ever have enjoyed. The secretary doubtless will shortly make an announcement covering transportation from all sections.

TO DESTROY ASTER BEETLES.

What is the best method of destroying the bugs on asters? L. V.

Aster beetles may be poisoned with Paris green, one teaspoonful to one gallon of water. Apply with a sprayer or sprinkling can. ALBERT F. AMLING.

GREEN MOLD IN FLOWER POTS.

What is the cause of the green mold on the top of the soil of potted plants? We use good top soil and well rotted sod, and do not know how to account for the mold.

G. G. Y.

Constant sogginess at the roots, caused by an oversupply of water, is the most fertile method of producing green mold. If you will allow your plants to dry out fairly well between waterings, you will have less of it. A good deal also depends on the compost you are using. If there is a good proportion of sand used, there will be less moldiness.

No matter, however, how you water and what your soil is, you are likely to have some trouble of this sort, and it is necessary to scratch over the surface of the soil in the pots at intervals and remove the slimy formation, or the plants will do poorly. With hard-wooded plants, where the soil is packed hard in the pots and where plenty of sand is used, there is always less moldiness than with soft-wooded subjects, like primulas, cyclamens, geraniums, begonias, etc., which require potting less firmly. If your compost is porous and you water carefully, the trouble can be considerably reduced.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

General satisfaction is expressed with the June business, for the total was surprisingly good in view of the existing conditions; it is probably well within the facts to say that June in this market was fully up to last year, the banner one, in the money value of sales, and some wholesalers estimate that there was a fair increase, one wholesaler stating that his sales averaged an increase of $40 for each business day of the month. But July does not begin so well as June ended. The demand has lightened, as it always does.

Supplies are heavier than usual at this time of the year. Rose receipts are light, because replanting is generally under way, but more growers than ever have made arrangements for summer crops and there are abundant supplies for present requirements. Beauty crops just now are off and the light demand is sufficient to cause considerable skirmishing to find the necessary stock. Each day, however, the cut of young Beauties is increasing and there soon will be good supplies again. Killarney is the best of the smaller roses and special stock of this frequently brings 10 cents to 12 cents. Richmond is not abundant, but sells well. Kaiserin is not in as large supply as usual at this date, for some unexplained reason, and sells well. Maid and Bride are not in large supply and with many the foliage is so badly mildewed that the flowers are practically unsalable; at the same time, however, there are other growers who are cutting Maids that will compare with the best ever seen in hot weather. These are selling steadily if not rapidly.

Carnations are holding up surprisingly well. The flowers are not so large as in the early spring, but with many the quality, so far as clean stock and bright colors go, is as good as it has been any time this spring. The demand has not kept up so well, as the quality and values are low. Already the buyers are calling for asters, but the outdoor crop has not yet made its appearance.

The end of the season's supply of peonies is in sight; the supply will be exhausted within the next few days. The two growers who have succeeded in getting good results year after year have been no less successful this season; the latter end of the crop has brought satisfactory prices and the remnant still on hand is moving out in an orderly manner at 6 cents, the stock still on hand being generally of first-class quality. However, the demand for 8 cents met with failure; the buyers would not stand the price.

The outdoor crop of sweet peas is the greatest in the history of the market. Not only are all the regular growers making shipments, but the aster farmers and other growers who have no glass have taken up sweet peas and are contributing to the glut. In the commission houses there are a dozen calls a day from women flower enthusiasts, or the commuting clerks who have sought to supplement their incomes by growing sweet peas for market. If any house cared for such shipments it could secure fifty consignors in a day. The quality of the peas is excellent, but the supply is so great that not all can be sold even where the wholesaler jobs them off by the box as received.

There has been a sudden shortening in the supply of Easter lilies. With all growers the crop came on simultaneously, and it has gone in the same manner, but within another ten days the next batch will be flowered. At present recourse is had to the abundant supply of auratums and candidums. There are large receipts of gladioli, Shasta daisies, valley and the large variety of odds and ends which constitute the summer stock.

If the market for fancy cut ferns had any bottom this spring, it has fallen out now. The supply is so large that prices are demoralized. No greens are selling rapidly, but asparagus in bunches is most in demand. Sprengeri does not seem to be wanted.

Chicago to Niagara Falls.

F. F. Benthey, chairman of the committee on transportation for the Florists' Club, states that arrangements have virtually been completed for a special train to the Niagara Falls convention via the Wabash railroad. It is planned to leave Chicago about 3 p. m. Monday, August 17, and reach the Falls next morning, the opening day of the convention. The fare will be $19.50 for the round trip, but tickets to Toronto via the Gorge route will be sold at the same price, allowing a stop-over at Niagara Falls in either direction. Of course the special train is contingent upon having 100 or more in the party, otherwise special cars will be provided on the regular train leaving at the same hour.

As usual, members from the west and north passing through Chicago en route to the convention are invited to join the Chicago party. Have your tickets read via the Wabash from Chicago and write either Mr. Benthey or the city passenger agent of the Wabash to reserve a berth for you on the florists' train.

The Weather in June.

June was a warm, dry month. The mean temperature was 68 degrees, which is 2 degrees above the average. One record of 93 was made, up in the weather man's aerie, and on eleven other days it was 81 degrees or above. The rainfall was only 1.48 inches, when 3.52 inches is normal. The hot wind from the southwest got in a total of 10,461 miles for the month. There were twelve clear days, fourteen partly cloudy and only four on which the sun did not shine at all.

Various Notes.

R. Mayer's lease expired on the Riverside greenhouses owned by Mrs. Mary A. Reissig and she declined to renew, but has now purchased the stock and is running the business.

It is stated that J. D. Thompson has resigned the presidency of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, and his resignation has been accepted by the company. Charles M. Fish is manager.

Charles Northrup, at La Grange, says the hot weather was too much for his sweet peas; they had just about half a day more than they could stand, and he has ceased cutting. He has a garden full of auratums, which he is now shipping to Kennicott Bros. Co.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving water lilies from the east. There is no regular demand for them, but when a retailer can use a few he is willing to pay $3 to $4 per hundred for the fancy pink and blue varieties; the local water lilies sell slowly at $1 per hundred.

N. J. Wietor and John Sinner, with a party of friends, started July 6 for Boulder Lake, Wis., to be gone about two weeks. It is thirty-five miles from the railroad. They had fishing tackle enough for a big catch.

Vaughan & Sperry say the call for cut flowers at the Growers' Market is almost exclusively for funeral work.

There was a meeting of the Florists' Club picnic committee at Poehlmann's July 6, when good progress in arranging the details for the club's outing July 19 was reported. While the idea is to make money for the club from the picnic, it is the intention to give the club members big value for the price of the tickets.

E. C. Amling says that while the price of sweet peas is so low, nevertheless a large part of the day's sales are now on this flower. The receipts of peas run into very many thousands a day and most of them find some one who can use them.

Henry Payne, of Hinsdale, says that early in the season he thought this would be the last year he would bother with bedding plants, but he now finds his stock cleaned up, with a number of calls still being received.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says the way the carnations are holding up this season is remarkable; the carnations never before have been so good or in such heavy crop at this date.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., calls attention to a condition which exists in practically all wholesale houses. He says they are writing more tickets than they ever did before at this season, but that the tickets average smaller. The point is that the retailers let the wholesalers take the risk of carrying stock. The retailer buys in the morning no more than he is absolutely sure he will need and, if he gets a run of business, the buyer comes back to the market two, three or four times during the day.

A. Lang is now doing business at his new location, at 44 Madison street, where he has a considerably larger store. New fixtures will not be in place until toward fall.

The A. L. Randall Co. is preparing to issue a new and enlarged catalogue at the time fall trade opens.

Clifford Pruner, who travels for E. H. Hunt, is at home from his spring trip. He says the sales of fertilizers, insecticides, hose and other growers' supplies were surprisingly good right up to July 1.

C. M. Dickinson and family left July 7 for an outing at Pelican Lake, Wis.

Bassett & Washburn do the majority of the regular retail trade in Hinsdale and Sunday, July 5, had a big funeral order.

At Calvary cemetery $7,000 is being invested in new glass.

The George Wittbold Co. is already planning rebuilding operations for next season. Four of the oldest houses are to be replaced by two, one of them a big house on the Halsted street side, for the display of decorative stock.

Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association will add a carnation house this season.

Auratum and candidum lilies intended for the wholesale market should be cut and shipped in bud; let the wholesaler open them or reship in bud as his needs may be.

The Japanese air pump is selling well.

Practically all retail stores now close at 7 p. m.

One of the week's visitors was C. W. Outhwaite, of New Iberia, La., on his way to Canada.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

The St. Joseph Loan & Trust Co. states that June 2 it was appointed receiver for the South Bend Floral Co. and that it is anxious to sell the greenhouse establishment.

It appears to be a friendly proceeding and creditors are not worrying, as they rely on the reputation of the Studebakers and expect to be paid in full. No statement of liabilities or assets has been received by creditors. Clem W. Studebaker is president of the South Bend Floral Co. and Wm. Studebaker secretary. John M. Studebaker is president of the St. Joseph Loan & Trust Co., the receiver.

Irving Gingrich, who married one of the Studebaker girls, is treasurer and manager of the South Bend Floral Co. and has appeared to be making a success of the business. A few months ago they bought out the store of Treanor & Rettic, Charles M. Treanor becoming store manager for the South Bend Floral Co. Mr. Rettic continued in business on his own account.

MARQUETTE, MICH.—T. M. Sorenson is the proprietor of the Stafford Greenhouses.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

To mention the cut flower business with the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade seems a little out of place, and really there is not much business. However, stock is fine for this time of the year and one can get all the Beauties, Kaiserin and Killarney roses he wants, and exceptionally good stock at that. Lilies could not be finer, and these, with good peas, valley and cattleyas, make it perfectly safe for the retailer to accept any trade he may find.

The retail stores look somewhat deserted, as many of the clerks are away on vacation and there are not many customers to help keep up life.

The growers are now getting their houses in shape for carnation planting. While the prices the past season were not all that could be desired, they are all hopeful of renewed prosperity and are getting ready for it.

Various Notes.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., has moved to his bungalow at Allison Park.

Karl Klinke, of the Cut Flower Co., and Ed McCallum, of the Florists' Exchange, are doing Atlantic City and other places in the east. Hoo-Hoo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The state of Geo. M. Kellogg's health is such that he has gone to the Battle Creek sanitarium. He says, however, that he hopes to meet all his old friends at the Niagara Falls convention, and be well again.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions in the cut flower market are fair, for midsummer. There is a decided demand for good flowers at times, with hardly enough really choice stock to meet this demand. The intense heat seriously affects all flowers. Beauties, valley, orchids, Kaiserin and Killarney are the mainstays for quality orders. Shasta daisies of excellent quality have been a factor during the last week. Gladioli have made their appearance. Asters are slowly increasing in number. Sweet peas are quite knocked out by the rain and heat for the time being. Auratum lilies have replaced candidum. Summer flowers are more plentiful.

Reviewing the Season.

The season of 1907-8 closed Tuesday, June 30. July and August of 1907 were fully equal to the same months in previous years, in many cases a little ahead. September was not wholly satisfactory, the large increase in the quantity of dahlias planted for cut flowers being more than the market could stand. Though there was excellent demand, all flowers were low in price and in oversupply. The early part of October saw great activity in the cut flower market, with indications that the demand would be larger than in any previous year. This hope was not fulfilled, the market falling off noticeably in the end of October, owing, it was said, to the financial crisis, possibly assisted by the immense additions of the glass area supplying this market, and became decidedly worse in November. Chrysanthemums brought far less than usual prices. December saw slight improvement, but the month was behind that of the year before. At Christmas fair prices were realized, continuing below that of the high water mark of the previous year, though fully equal to the prices of a few years ago. January and February, usually months of short supply, found the demand hardly equal to the supply, which was larger than in any previous winter; bulbous flowers were particularly overdone. Conditions became worse in the spring, it being evident that the middle classes were not buying as freely as usual. The faker sales were also on a lower level. Easter was again the greatest floral festival, but here, also, the supply exceeded the demand in many cases. Easter lilies were the principal sufferers. Since Easter the waste of white and poorer stock has been enormous. The advent of extreme heat early in the season curtailed the production of salable flowers during May and June. The market in these months occasionally made decided spurts, but prices were never equal to the extremely high prices prevalent in the corresponding months of last year. Those who have made money in the last year have done so by virtue of the quality of their stock, if they be growers, or by their business sagacity, if they be wholesalers, or by all-round ability, if they be retailers.

The supply houses, and Philadelphia boasts two of the most successful in the United States, state frankly that the success they have achieved this year would not have been theirs without extra effort, but that they have had an excellent year. The seed houses and our leading plantsmen state that the year has been satisfactory when general business conditions are considered; in fact, it is stated that seeds and plants have suffered less than the average industry.

The Detroit Convention.

Three Philadelphia seedsmen attended the seedsmen's convention at Detroit. They were George H. Atkinson, with Walter P. Stokes; Edward Dungan, with William Henry Maule, and Howard M. Earl, with W. Atlee Burpee & Co. When asked by your correspondent about the convention Mr. Atkinson spoke with pleasure of the courtesy shown in the convention, the business accomplished and the general good feeling that prevailed. Mr. Atkinson described the visit to the trial grounds of D. M. Ferry & Co., the largest trial grounds he had ever seen, where there were 750 lots of edible peas in cultivation, and neatness and order were seen everywhere. The banquet and the excursion tendered to the seedsmen by Ferry & Co. were also subjects of favorable comment.

In closing, Mr. Atkinson humorously described one of the toastmaster's anecdotes at the banquet, a hit at Philadelphia: "One man asserts to another that he can name the city from whence each man comes—this hustler comes from Chicago; that prosperous looking chap, from New York; that man of culture, from Boston; that fellow over there, from Philadelphia. 'Oh no,' the last named man objects, 'I am not from Philadelphia. I have been ill for three weeks.'" Never mind, Philadelphia gets there; in good time, too.

The Planting of Winsor.

It is a generally admitted fact that the pink carnation Winsor is the best commercial variety in its class today and that this variety does best when planted out in the houses from pots in the beginning of the season; that is, it is not planted in the field at all. The confidence felt in Winsor is shown by the numbers known to be benched by a few of the carnation growers. Henry Weiss & Son have 8,000 at Hatboro. Edward A. Stroud has nearly as many at Strafford; so also have A. Harvey & Sons at Brandywine Summit. These are merely taken as examples, to show the drift of the times.

Trial Grounds.

Every REVIEW reader knows that Henry A. Dreer has the finest place in America, at Riverton, N. J., and another big farm a few miles farther off, but not everybody knows that the company has a trial ground at Palmyra, N. J., adjoining the home of the secretary, J. Otto Thilow, these grounds covering about one acre and devoted to testing vegetable seeds and growing them to maturity. The objects of the tests are to see that each variety is true to name and description and that it is worthy of a place in the garden.

F. H. Weber, of St. Louis, spent a few hours in this city July 7 before sailing for Europe the next day.

The pansy cut used this season in the advertising of Stokes' Seed Store is a remarkably fine piece of work. The flower was grown by Walter P. Stokes on his place, Floracroft, at Moorestown, N. J., and it was photographed by Mr. Stokes himself.

Gilbert Baker took a little holiday over the Fourth, fishing at Betterton, Md.

A reunion of the Thilow family was held on "the glorious Fourth" and lasted until July 6, when Mrs. Thilow, mother of J. Otto Thilow, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday. Mr. Thilow's father, who is also here, is 78 years of

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

I suppose business is about as good as can be expected at this time of the year, but at that it is pretty bad. There is still a good deal of stock coming in, but the quality of it is so poor that it is hard to move it even at a low price. Roses are plentiful and the best of them are selling well, but by far the greater portion of them cannot be moved at all, as they are practically worthless. Carnations are about out of the market. There is a lively demand for white ones and good dark pink also go well, but it seems as if no one wants Enchantress when the weather is warm. They lose their keeping quality then, and they have a strong inclination to burn. The hot weather has about run the sweet peas out. They are so short-stemmed that they are scarcely of any use. Outdoor stock of various kinds is in good supply and sells fairly well. Some fine gladioli are coming and they go well. Asters

The Florists' Club.

The annual outing given by the Florists' Society will be held this year on Thursday, July 23, at Coney Island. The committee in charge is working hard to make it a big success this year. There will be all sorts of events in the way of foot races, etc.; also bowling contests and the annual ball game, with the storemen against the growers. There are some good ball players among the craft in this city and an interesting game is usually played. The ten-mile river ride to the island is a treat and well worth the price of tickets alone. Tickets are 25 cents, and be sure to buy your tickets from the florists who have them for sale, for we do not get any credit for the tickets sold by the Coney Island Co. at the wharf. vention league last week, on the matter of inviting the S. A. F. to meet here in 1909. The meeting was highly successful and resulted in the league extending its hearty support, both morally and financially, which more than ever guarantees that if the S. A. F. decides to come to this city in 1909 we will be in a position to give them a great welcome and a convention that will go down in history as one well fitting to be the twenty-fifth anniversary. For the S. A. F. was born in Cincinnati twenty-four years ago.

From all indications, the society meeting called for July 11 will be well attended. There is more enthusiasm abroad in the society now than there has been for many years. It is expected that many new members will be taken in and, with the business that will come before this meeting, it will be well worth while for all the members to make an extra effort to be present.

Various Notes.

The wholesale houses are now closing at 5 p. m. during the months of July and August, and there is a movement on foot to close at noon on Saturdays. It is to be hoped that this will go through, as there is practically no business on Saturday afternoons and, for that matter, there is next to nothing doing any afternoon. Ten o'clock sees the business for the day done at this time of the year. So it is just a question of keeping open the rest of the day so as not to get too used to loafing.

D. Rusconi spent a few days in Dayton, O., last week.

J. A. Peterson expects to visit Chicago on a business trip soon.

Charles Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky., was a visitor July 5, and Martin Reukauf dropped in July 6, on his way home after a nine weeks' trip through the west, touching California points.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

A. Mitting, Santa Cruz, Cal., shipped his first car of calla bulbs this season June 28.

The crop prospects are not so good as they were in the grain states, especially the corn states.

The corn for seed, both sweet and field varieties, was planted late in Ohio, but is making a good start.

If any seedsmen feel dissatisfied with the business done in the past season, thus far no one has been found to admit it.

The boat from Bermuda due to arrive at New York July 10 is expected to bring the first of the season's crop of Harrisii lily bulbs.

W. Atlee Burpee has returned from a two months' European trip and is preparing to get busy on his annual task of catalogue building.

Schlaefer & Owcheek, Cleveland, O., are opening a new flower store at 7403 Dunser avenue, and state that they will make a specialty of imported seeds and bulbs.

The Cumberland Seed Co., Nashville, Tenn., has been incorporated with $30,000 authorized capital stock, by C. F. Wood, E. H. Young, W. B. Ewing, Robert Luck and J. T. Bailey.

Albert Dickinson, president of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., has acquired from Henry Heinz, of Pittsburg, Pa., the property at 1728 and 1730 Clark street, Chicago, being 37½x79 feet.

On the protest of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., the Board of General Appraisers has held certain importations to be free of customs duty under paragraph 656, tariff act of 1897, as mangel wurzel and sugar beet seeds.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. affairs will be closed up July 25, at 10:30 a. m., when the final accounting of F. H. Henry, assignee, will be approved unless objection be filed with Gilbert H. Montague, referee, 32 Nassau street, New York.

From a large number of reports it appears that corn is doing better in Iowa than in Illinois or Indiana. The crop is from one to three weeks late, and acreage is likely to be less than last year, owing to damage to low lands from too much rain. The majority of reports, however, say the crop looks well, especially on high lands, and has lately been making quick growth.

Charles D. Woods, director of the Maine Experiment Station, upon whom devolves the enforcement of that state's many inspection laws, says that "since the middle of April the deputy has devoted the most of his time to collecting samples of seeds. It is gratifying to find that nearly all of the grass seeds which are being sold are named and guaranteed in accord with law. Only a few of the samples have as yet been analyzed, but they are for the most part running well up to guaranty. Both the spirit and the letter of the Maine inspection laws demand truthful labeling."

Drought has not improved the prospect for a full crop of peas.

L. R. Bell, Manlius, N. Y., is now conducting his business under the name of Bell's Seed Store.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, have 160 varieties of sweet peas on trial at their Marblehead grounds.

From Medford, Ore., comes word that D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, have purchased, through an agent there, a large tract of farm land, which will be tilled scientifically for the purpose of raising seeds for market. The tract contains 1,400 acres, 1,200 of which is in fine fruit trees. The present owner gives possession the first of the year, when extensive improvements will be made.

CROPS IN CALIFORNIA.

Referring to the condition of seed crops in California July 2, Waldo Rohnert wrote:

"Onion still is holding out quite well. While conditions have not improved to any great extent the last month, yet we are that much nearer the harvest, which is only one month off. The warm wave of June 22 to 27 seems to have done no injury.

"Sweet peas and radish were cut rather short by the hot wave. There will probably be a fifty per cent crop of sweet peas, while radish will be much below the average.

"Lettuce is only developing small seed stocks and no doubt much of the seed will be light and hard to save in the cleaners."

SOUTHERN SEED CROPS.

We give in brief the prospects of a few southern seed crops as we see the situation at present:

Collard—The crop of these has already been harvested, most of them marketed. The crop was above the average, the quality of seed good, and prices ought to rule lower than last year.

Mustard—This crop was about an average one. The yield was probably larger than last year, but was damaged somewhat, owing to excessive rains at the time the seed was harvested. But there is a good supply, and there will be enough to go around.

Okra—This crop is looking well, and the prospects are good for a big yield. But it is impossible to tell much about it this early in the season, because this is a crop that grows on till fall frost.

Watermelon—In some sections of the south the dry weather has ruined the melon crop, but in all sections where they have had abundance of rain the crops are unusually good, and the seed crop will undoubtedly be up to the average, with the quality better.

Eggplant—In some sections of the south the dry weather has ruined the eggplant, but in all sections where there has been plenty of rain the crop is unusually good and bids fair to turn out a large seed crop of good quality.

Asparagus—Asparagus has made splendid crop, except in some few places, where dry weather has injured it. But there will doubtless be a full crop when it is all in.

Pearl Millet—The crop of this bids fair to be an average one, but has suffered in some places for want of rain. But unless something serious overtakes it, we expect an average crop.

Chufas—The crop of these is much better than usual and we look for a plentiful supply, with better quality than usual. AMZI GODDEN SEED CO.

WATSON S. WOODRUFF.

Watson S. Woodruff, the newly elected president of the American Seed Trade Association, whose portrait adorned page 28 of last week's REVIEW, was born at Orange, Conn., April 8, 1869. His father, Stiles D. Woodruff, was one of the pioneer seed growers of Connecticut, starting in the seed growing business on his return from the Civil War in 1865. The son was graduated from the New Haven high school in 1889, shortly after which he went actively into the seed business, associating himself with his father, Stiles D. Woodruff, and his brother, Frank C. Woodruff, under the firm name of S. D. Woodruff & Sons. He married, January 4, 1893, Harriet Hotchkiss, and to them five children have been born, three girls and two boys, all of whom are living. Stiles D. Woodruff died in April, 1906. The present firm of S. D. Woodruff & Sons is made up of Frank C. Woodruff and Watson S. Woodruff. The firm makes a specialty of market gardeners' seeds and does a large growing and wholesale business as well. The firm operates at Orange, Conn., and 82 Dey street, New York City, with a branch also at Queens, L. I.

ON THE EAST COAST.

A well-known observer speaks as follows of conditions in southern New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland:

"The weather has been exceedingly hot and dry, unusually so for the month of June. Tomato plants are not thriving to best advantage on this account. It is necessary to have frequent rains during the early resetting season, so as to give the plants the proper start. As a result considerable complaint can be reported for tomatoes, as well as unusual exception to weather conditions as far as corn is concerned. Cutworms have damaged the corn crop considerably. One grower reports as having had to replant 120 acres. It is impossible to determine just why corn has not germinated as it should this season, but the principal reason seems to be on account of the weather conditions when this seed was being saved last fall."

THE BUSINESS YEAR.

In his address, as president, to the American Seed Trade Association at the Detroit convention, George S. Green said:

"We meet at the end of a business year of unusual stress and uncertainty, during which the country has had a serious setback to the prosperity of the last few years. Such a year always brings new problems to be met and new difficulties to be surmounted. These problems and difficulties test the temper of the man and, when conquered, usually leave him with a new store of experience and knowledge with which to meet future tasks.

"We are all still doing business, no financial disaster among our membership having come to my knowledge. This is evidence of the permanent character of our trade and of the average ability and prudence of our members. I congratulate you upon this showing and I hope the coming year may prove less trying.

"I trust the efforts which have been made to improve the currency and banking system of our country may insure more stable conditions, so that the business man may suffer only for his own blunders and not for those of others.

"Tight money last fall undoubtedly hampered the operations of our trade and if the recent currency legislation shall prove effective in preventing such conditions in future, we shall have at least that much for which to thank our national lawmakers.

"Notwithstanding the unsettled financial conditions, the past year has been reasonably satisfactory to most houses in the trade. The total volume of business has been large and prices have ruled unusually high on many staple articles in the seed line. The demand for high grade goods continues to increase and there has never been a time when a well earned reputation for furnishing seeds of first-class quality was more valuable than it is today."

"PRICE GUARANTEED."

A sells to B a lot of bulbs for future delivery. The acceptance of the order reads, "Price guaranteed." B later finds that he can buy the same or a better grade at much less. B offers to accept the stock at the market price. A declines to make any reduction, claiming that "price guaranteed" simply applies to his own prices. This point was not covered in the order. B claims that had such been A's thought the agreement should have read, "Price guaranteed against my own decline." Who is correct? J. S. T.

The agreement ought always to show the extent of the guaranty in a case of this kind. If the contract is silent, and there is no well established trade usage to explain the words, the guaranty will probably be held to extend no further than to the seller's own prices. A contract of guaranty is to be strictly construed in favor of the guarantor. If B claims that A should have made the guaranty read, "Price guaranteed against my own decline," A may as well claim that B should have insisted upon having it read, "Price guaranteed against decline by any seller." Inasmuch as there is a doubt as to the meaning, the courts, if the usual practice is followed, will give the phrase no broader interpretation than is necessary to protect the buyer against any price made by the guarantor himself.

SEED FARMS OF ESSEX.

A party of sixty Hungarian farmers have been touring England under the auspices of the Royal Agricultural Society and spent a day inspecting the seed farms of Essex. The route took the party past the seed farms of E. W. King & Co., and the first halt was to inspect a 5-acre field of sweet peas in full bloom, these having been planted in the autumn. Passing the warehouses, offices and trial grounds of King & Co., the party went through the town of Coggeshall and next came to Dobbie & Co., where the party were welcomed by Mr. Cuthbertson and were delighted by a brilliant show of Spanish iris, sweet peas and Scotch violas, all of which were

LILIUM HARRISII

WE OFFER A SELECTED STOCK OF THE ORIGINAL TRUE HARRISII FOR EARLY FORCING.

These bulbs have been grown from the original pure Harrisii, and will be found to be splendid stock for early forcing, for which purpose Harrisii is so valuable. We have had the stock inspected, and are assured that it is almost absolutely pure and almost entirely free from disease. This is not stock picked up indiscriminately from different sources, but is grown from one stock and will be found very superior to the ordinary Harrisii usually offered, both in regard to freedom from disease and purity, and not the late type now so often furnished.

Lilium Harrisii has been deteriorating slowly for years, and in order to get back to the true type of the original Harrisii, we have had our stock grown from the original pure stock and it will be found very superior to the Lilium Harrisii usually offered. While the stock is A-No. 1, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices asked for indifferent stock.

We have only a limited quantity of this stock to offer, so it will be advisable to place orders without delay in order to insure securing this stock.

in full bloom. Proceeding to Feering, they passed the seed farm of J. W. Moss, where hundreds of acres of seed were seen growing. The next halt was at the trial grounds of Hurst & Sons, the visitors being shown round by Mr. Sherwood, head of the firm.

Luncheon at Church House Farm came next. After the royal toasts had been responded to, M. Schillassy spoke in flattering terms of what his compatriots had seen in Essex, which was something they had not seen in their own country, and concluded by proposing the health of Mr. King, Mr. Cuthbertson, Mr. Sherwood and Mr. Moss, who had shown them their excellent farms. These gentlemen replied in appropriate terms, remarking that "Essex is the best place in the world for growing seeds."

DUTCH BULB TRADE.

Consul-General S. Listoe, of Rotterdam, makes the following interesting statements in regard to the rapidly growing Dutch bulb trade:

An industry characteristic of the Netherlands is the raising of tulip and hyacinth bulbs. Attempts have been made in several parts of the world to grow these, but nowhere can the experiment be said to have been successful, as the proper kind of soil for the propagation of perfect bulbs seems only to exist in the small space of territory between the cities of Leyden and Haarlem. This stretch of country is in reality the bottom of the old Haarlem Sea (Haarlemmer Meer), which was laid dry about the year 1852, and this sea-bottom dirt, a combination of sand and decomposed vegetables and plants, appears to be the only soil capable of producing the flower bulbs mentioned.

These bulbs are therefore exported to all parts of the world, the United States taking its full share; the demand is constantly increasing, and in consequence of this fact an increased area is from year to year set apart and devoted solely to the cultivation of bulbs. The statistics for 1906, the latest available, give this

The exports of bulbs and bulbous roots from the Netherlands in 1907 amounted to 33,610,280 pounds, of which 6,214,120 pounds, valued at $531,098, went to the United States. In 1906 the total exports were 26,180,000 pounds, the shipments to the United States being 5,098,940 pounds of a declared value of $536,242; the relative figures in 1905 were 25,640,340 pounds total, and 4,413,640 pounds, worth $417,611, to the United States.

The best customer for the tulip and hyacinth bulbs of the Netherlands is the United Kingdom, which purchased 13,950,200 pounds in 1907. Germany and Austria together bought 8,728,720 pounds, Norway, Sweden and Denmark 2,307,360 pounds, and Russia 793,100 pounds.

As an indication of the growth of this branch of Dutch agriculture, and as a demonstration of the regular increase in the demand for Dutch bulbs, it may be stated that the exports in 1897 were only 12,543,955 pounds. The advance since that time has averaged over 2,000,000 pounds a year.

BERMUDA ONION SEEDS.

Federico C. Varela, a grower at Teneriffe, Canary Islands, says in part:

"I am following attentively the developments of the Mann pure seed act, and all that is taking place in connection with this important and far-reaching movement. The position of American seedsmen, and, above all, that of all dealers in foreign seeds imported into the United States, is critical, should this act be passed by congress.

"From information reaching me, I understand that the American Seed Trade Association, supported by important members of this trade, has made a firm stand to safeguard their interests. Yet, as regards the Bermuda onion seeds, you should not feel alarmed.

"In spite of past occurrences which landed many American importers in difficulties with their clients, the planters, it was solely due to the mismanagement of the trade on this side, and to the complete absence of knowledge on the part of the American dealers as to how the business was conducted by exporters in Teneriffe. These facts were the cause: Even the most respectable firms over here were unconsciously duped by the unscrupulous agriculturer, who, having in stock a quantity of worthless and valueless onion seeds, left over from the preceding crop, willfully mixed it up with fresh seeds, palming the whole stuff onto the bona fide Teneriffe exporter as 'all quite fresh and true to name.' There are few seedsmen in America who in years past have not had some trouble on this score.

"The blame is partly due unawares to American seedsmen, and partly to the exporters on this side, who have not directed the onion seed trade on a proper, practical and sound businesslike basis.

"The remedy is quite easy: First, not to buy at random from large or small agriculturers in this island, always more or less apt to mystify the seeds; second, to insist, and always insist, with seedsmen and dealers in the United States to place their likely requirements one year in advance. It is no use buying Teneriffe Bermuda onion seeds at the last moment.

"Common sense will tell you that my statements are sound in every respect, and particularly so at a time when seedsmen require full protection on foreign seeds, now more than ever."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Among the retailers the business last week was reported as fairly good, the principal work being for funerals. Other work for weddings, school commencements, receptions and dinners has slackened up greatly and for the next two months the retailers will have to content themselves with what funeral work comes in.

The weather has become hot and summer has set in for good and the help around the stores can, one by one, take vacations until the middle of August in order to let the boss off for the S. A. F. convention. The wholesalers also are feeling the effects of the hot weather and stock continues to be of poor quality.

Roses of all kinds are soft and off color. Beauties are holding up best in the rose line. Carnations are becoming scarce and the few that come in are small, though the demand has been quite good for these. Sweet peas are looking better, but are short in stem. Gladioli are selling well, but all other outdoor flowers are in slow demand. All greens are abundant.

August Eggert, of East St. Louis, Ill., has gone on an extended trip to Europe. He will visit Germany, his old home, also France and England.

A postal has been received from F. C. Weber and party, mailed from California, on which they say they are enjoying the best of health and their trip.

Miss M. Ostertag, oldest daughter of Henry Ostertag, celebrated her eighteenth birthday July 3 at the home of her father, on Washington boulevard. The house was beautifully decorated and Miss Ostertag received her many friends under a large arch of flowers.

Albert Gumz, one of Angermueller's right-hand men, is off for two weeks' vacation. He says he will be on hand for the ball game, July 15, at the florists' picnic.

During the celebration of the Fourth a balloon fell on Charles Juengel's greenhouses, causing $25 damage. Promptness saved the destruction of the plant.

From present indications there will be few from here to attend the S. A. F. convention at Niagara Falls this year.

Louis Gieger, formerly with Grimm & Gorley and Mrs. M. M. Ayers in their retail stores, after a year's layoff in other business, is back again with Grimm & Gorley as manager of their greenhouses on St. Louis avenue.

Vincent Gorley, of Grimm & Gorley, left last week for a trip to Europe with the local Turners. Mr. Gorley before leaving was given a surprise party at the home of Henry Kahrs, his right-hand man. The occasion at the same time celebrated the birthday of Mr. Kahrs. The event will long be remembered, all wishing Mr. Gorley a safe return home.

Christ Sanner, better known as "Stump," of Smith & Co., was laid up last week with a sprained back. He was greatly missed by his friend "Fatty" Henzel.

John Burke is now on the retired list, having closed his place for the summer. He will make a camping trip with a few friends in the trade after the picnic.

Geo. Waldbart is repainting the interior of his show house. Mr. Waldbart has as yet not found the summer dull and says he has plenty of work right along.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, the only lady member of the St. Louis Florists' Club, says that she has promised the club's trustees that she will attend the picnic July 15 and take part in all the events for ladies and see that all the ladies who attend the outing enjoy themselves. The trustees, Messrs. Schoenle, Beyer and Smith, will assist Mrs. Ayers in this.

Park Commissioner Scanlan and Superintendent Ostertag were reported on the sick list last week. The commissioner is confined to his bed and the superintendent is just able to be about.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kalisch will spend their vacation on an eastern trip just as soon as brother John and his bride return from their honeymoon trip.

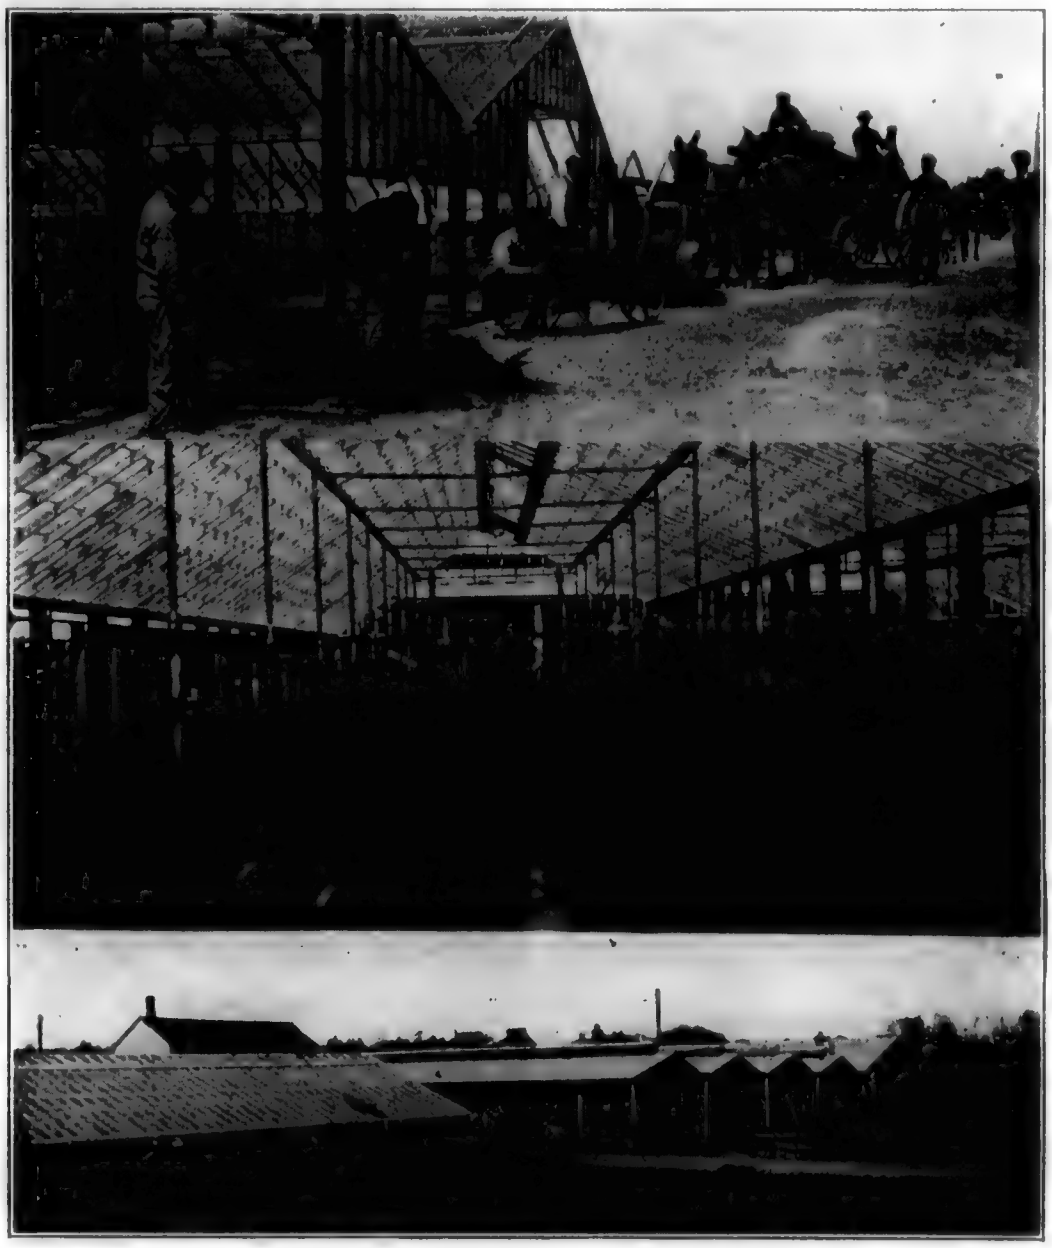
Mrs. M. Klockenkemper left last week to join her husband in Germany. Mr. Klockenkemper left some four weeks ago. They will return home in time to attend the S. A. F. convention.

All of our four wholesalers started the early closing July 1, so after 5 p. m. the first five days and 12 o'clock on Saturdays the retailers will not be able to buy supplies.

Henry Ostertag, the official umpire for the retailers, says he will not stand for any baiting and will remove the first player who kicks from the game. He will play no favorites. Umpire Ammann voices his sentiments.

F. H. Weber says he is glad that he will have company in his trip abroad and looks forward to a pleasant journey. He will meet his wife when he reaches the other side of the big pond.

Miss Bell Miller, of Springfield, Ill., is sending to C. A. Kuehn a lot of extra fine Carnot and other roses.



Gus Eggeling, of the Eggeling Floral Co., is out riding each evening in his new automobile. Mr. Eggeling says he had a good season's business and will take things easy this summer.

Charles Wors is now known as the green goods man. He is supplying the trade with fancy and common ferns of his own picking from the hills around Clayton.

The florists of St. Louis and vicinity should not forget that next Wednesday, July 15, is the day we celebrate at Normandy Grove. All in the trade are invited to attend and bring their friends, the Florists' Club to stand all the expense, and the florists, regardless of membership, will be made happy if they only come out and spend a day without any business cares. Arrangements are all complete. J. J. B.

MUSHROOMS AT KENNETT.

The forcing of mushrooms during the winter months has attained large proportions in this country. The business has, until recently, been extremely profitable, fancy prices being paid for the finished product during the social season. Gradually the market has broadened and prices have had a lower tendency. The demand for spawn has increased, more than keeping pace with the supply of the first quality, some of the spawn producing a mixture of varieties, some of which are not equal to the market requirements.

To meet this want the Anglo-American Spawn Co., of Kennett Square, Pa., was formed. The company claims that it perfected a process by which the spawn taken from mushroom spores at the proper moment can be delivered to the mushroom grower in a state of perfection. This spawn, they say, will come absolutely true to variety and will yield large crops. The members of the Anglo-American Mushroom Co. are J. B. Swayne and Hugh Gardiner. Their plant is at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania. A visit to the new company's place a few days ago was full of interest. Both Mr. Swayne and Mr. Gardiner were hard at work making mushroom spawn. The process, as explained by Mr. Swayne, consists in placing the composition containing the spores in molds about 6x9 inches. These molds are laid on the floor of a greenhouse, side by side, with the flat side uppermost. When sufficiently hardened, in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, the composition is taken out of the mold and placed on its side. When further dried the bricks of mushroom spawn are removed to a building where they are not exposed to direct sunlight and further treated. The bricks are ready for the market in from six to eight weeks, when they are packed in boxes and sent out as required. Mr. Gardiner exhibited a cartload of these mushroom spawn bricks, pointing out the numerous white, threadlike lines running throughout, indicating, he said, a high degree of fertility. When asked regarding his confidence in this mushroom, Mr. Swayne said that he had tested it fully in his mushroom houses last season and that he would use no other spawn in his nineteen houses this season. The accompanying illustrations will give some idea of the drying process and the final product. There is also a picture of a bed of mushrooms grown from the Anglo-American spawn. PHIL.

THE SWEET POTATO.

The sweet potato is at least one-third more nourishing than the Irish potato, and outyields the latter with but little more care. No bugs bother the vines.

In southern states it is a staple and the National Council of Horticulture says that in the northern states it should be.

Good garden soil, not over rich and a trifle sandy, makes the ideal spot for the plants. Prepare the ground next November for the spring of 1909 by plowing it deep; in the spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the latter is dry it should be thoroughly harrowed.

While it is customary to ridge the ground and plant in the ridges, many successful growers plant on the level. Set the plants in rows three and a half feet apart and about fifteen inches apart in the rows, using a little water with each plant if the soil is dry. If the ground has become compact from successive rains before planting time it should be plowed again. The best time to set out plants is on a rainy day or just before a rain.

The season has a great deal to do with the quality of the crop. In extremely wet weather the quality is not as good as when rains are less frequent and not heavy.

The Yellow Jersey is the standard variety for the main crop. The Red Jersey is equally good, but the color is not so popular. The Early Florida is excellent for an early crop for home use. In a good season specimens of three to four pounds are common.

Many florists already do considerable business in supplying sweet potato plants, the same as tomato and other vegetable plants, and the trade in these is constantly growing.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is complete lethargy in cut flower circles at present. The call for flowers during the present torrid weather is light, and of the material arriving the greater part is of poor quality. Kaiserin and Carnot are now the two reigning roses, although Killarney still comes in of fair quality.

Carnations are in nearly every case small and poor. Sweet peas from outdoors, owing to the hot, dry weather, have short stems. Lily of the valley, for which in June there was a good call, is now neglected. Some nice gladioli are seen and with aquatics make useful window decorative material. Callas are practically over and few lilies are seen. For ferns and other greenery demand remains fairly good.

Various Notes.

Patrick Welch will, as usual, spend his summer vacation at Old Orchard Beach, Me. His firm did an excellent June business and has now some good shipping orders from shore and mountain resorts.

William Sim is shipping large lots of the Comet tomato to market at present. His houses are carrying an enormous crop of these.

Copious rains are needed to improve the quality of sweet peas for the annual show of these, at Horticultural hall, July 18 and 19. Owing to the drought, these plants are practically ruined in many places.

A. Leuthy starts next week on his annual European pilgrimage. His business of late has broken all records.

June, 1908, broke all records for heat.

There were only ten cloudy days and even these gave a few hours of sunshine. There were 125 hours more sunshine than last year and fifty hours more than the average. The rainfall was unusually light.

Berries on the loniceras are attractive at present in the Boston park system. The fruit has ripened about three weeks earlier than usual.

Many sweet pea lovers are taking advantage of the invitation of W. W. Rawson & Co. to visit their sweet pea trial grounds, at Marblehead. The collection includes all the best novelties.

There promises to be an unusually attractive prize list for sports at the coming picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Pine Banks Park, Malden, July 29.

The Lars Anderson gardens, in Brookline, are now open to the public each Thursday afternoon and Duncan Finlayson is kept well employed answering queries from the crowds who attend.

The great and glorious Fourth gave us a smaller lot of casualties than usual. A good shower the previous night lessened danger from fire. It was a humid and uncomfortable feeling day climatically.

William R. Finlay and Miss Alice M. Moring were married at the home of Mr. Finlay, 10 Auckland street, Dorchester, July 1. The wedding and reception were attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the bride and groom, and many costly and useful presents were tendered. The bridal party left on a late train for New York, amid many good wishes from their friends. From New York they will visit Chicago, after which they will spend a short time in Winthrop, Me. They will be at home after September 1, in Stoughton, where the groom has purchased a home and farm.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

There is not much doing here in the good old summer time, except funeral work, which is heavy here at all times. Carnations are beginning to get scarcer and scarcer and also smaller. Roses are not much better in quality. Sweet peas are now arriving in immense quantities.

The bedding out season is about over. Everyone reports a good demand for geraniums, salvias, etc. Nearly all are cleaned out.

H. A. Jahn has begun to cut asters indoors. A good strain of candytuft was seen at his place.

William P. Peirce is receiving some nice Fair Maid carnations.

WASHINGTON.

Doings at the Capital.

Everything is quiet along the Potomac, not much of anything doing.

The decorations at the Municipal building July 4 were a grand success. The work was done by George Cooke, F. H. Kramer, William F. Gude and J. A. Phillips, with some of the store help. Z. D. Blackistone was ably represented. Fifty bay trees, ten loads of pine brush and about fifty palms were used. All the downtown stores closed at 1 p. m.

F. H. Kramer last week bought the three-story building at 917 F street for $73,000. The present tenant has a year's lease.

Mr. Kramer, as president of the Florists' Club, sent out unique notices of the meeting this week, as follows:

Dear Sir: You are hereby summoned to appear at Kramer's Greenhouses, to attend the Florists' Club meeting. It's Tuesday, July 7, and I mean YOU; we want you to come, for we will all be there, and your absence will cause a vacant place and will look empty. The place of the meeting will be in the potting shed at Kramer's greenhouses at Anacostia at 7 p. m. Leave flower pots and worry behind, but bring along your appetite and thirst, also a new member. Remember this means you. We want you. Never mind that engagement; break it! smash it! BE PRESENT.

P. S.—"If it rains the ROOF don't leak."

PACIFIC COAST.

Portland, Ore.—For the third consecutive year William S. Sibson, proprietor of the Sibson Rose Nurseries, acted as judge at the rose show of the Bellingham Rosarians, held at Bellingham, Wash., June 24 and 25. The exhibits comprised twenty-four classes, each of which was numerously and closely contested.

The National Apple Show Association, of Spokane, Wash., of which Harry J. Neely is secretary and manager, purposes awarding an apple, molded of virgin gold, dug out of the hills in the Spokane country, to the grower showing the most beautiful specimen of fruit at its first annual exhibition in Spokane, December 7 to 12. Modern history contains no refence to a similar award and for this reason, in addition to the intrinsic value of the trophy, it is believed the announcement of a prize of a golden apple will be the means of bringing to the Spokane show the best specimens of the skill of the foremost growers, not only in America but from various parts of Europe, as well as buyers from the orient and the islands and other countries.

RETAIL TRADE IN PLANTS.

The handling of hardy annuals by the florists of the Pacific coast has become one of the features of the business and is becoming more and more noticeable each season. A few years ago many retailers looked askance at anything outside of cut flowers and only made a deviation from the straight and narrow path around Christmas time, when a few potted palms or flowering plants were displayed. Gradually these were used in a decorative way at first, and then little by little the assortment was increased, until many retailers now devote half their store and window space to the showing of plants in pots.

The public quickly got accustomed to looking for such material in the shops instead of making a journey to the greenhouses, and then acquired the further habit of asking for hardy plants as well, especially in the spring and early summer.

Bulbs, too, began to have a ready sale, and the fact that they took up but little room, were easy to handle and paid a fair profit for handling, made them popular with the retailers.

For the last two seasons annuals in small pots and flats have been extensively sold by many stores, and, now that customers have gotten into the habit of looking for them, they have opened up a way whereby the retailer can add largely to his receipts and add to his reputation of being up-to-date.

Some stores object to having articles of this kind around, as they need some attention and a slight knowledge of plants to handle them properly. They are closely allied to the business, however, and many an otherwise light day's sales has been heavily augmented by disposing of a few hundred annuals. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned decidedly cool and an overcoat at any time during the twenty-four hours feels comfortable—quite a difference from the sweltering heat we read of in the eastern states. Business, although not lively, is much better than it was a couple of weeks ago, and the continued cool weather seems to have the effect of keeping many people in town who would, under ordinary conditions, seek the seashore or the mountains.

Roses are scarce, with the exception of second quality stock, and this is plentiful enough and can be had at any price. Fancy stock sells at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen, with twice those prices for Beauties. Carnations, owing to the extremely favorable weather, are of splendid size and color, but the prices range low and, from present indications, will not advance for a considerable time.

Sweet peas continue to be the best of the outside flowers for the florist to handle, and they cost the stores about 50 cents per dozen bunches. The growers, who, by the way, are principally Chinese, are to be congratulated on the quality of flowers produced this year.

This is largely due to the favorable climatic conditions, and as a consequence the demand for them is heavier than ever before.

Colored gladioli are being used largely in decorations and have proven good sellers. Other kinds of outside stock are used to fill in and can be had at almost any price. A few early asters are seen, but the bulk of the crop will not appear before next month. Valley moves slowly, as also does Lilium longiflorum.

Over in Oakland the retailers complain of the usual summer dullness, with an ocasional sprinkling of funeral pieces and once in a while a wedding order.

Various Notes.

P. Von Linger, of the Holland Nursery Co., is on a two months' trip to Holland.

The Pacific Floral Co. has opened a retail store on University avenue, Berkeley, Cal.

D. J. Huston, of Dietrich & Huston, Los Angeles, passed through San Francisco on his way to Seattle during the present week.

George D. Marble is on a two months' vacation in the northern part of the state.

Word has been received from Ahwahnee, Madera county, California, of the death of Alexander Craw, formerly state deputy commissioner of horticulture. He was well and favorably known by all the horticulturists on this coast and had only recently retired to take a well earned rest in the neighborhood of Yosemite Valley, in the hope of regaining his health. Mr. Craw was distinguished particularly for the part he played in the long fight that resulted in the discovery of beneficial insects for the destruction of scale in orange orchards, which threatened on several occasions to completely wipe out that industry in California. ### The Market.

The summer dullness is camping with us and we may expect this order of things for a few weeks at least. June has taken its departure, after making a fairly good showing. There was a heavy sprinkling of wedding orders, which came as a relief after so much funeral work the preceding month.

It is generally admitted that the season just ended was a profitable one, with collections good. The cut flower market is well supplied with a splendid assortment. Indoor grown roses and carnations are still showing a healthy growth, but prices are not so firm as a year ago. Sweet peas and snapdragons, such as grown in the northwest, would be hard to beat anywhere and we have plenty of them of the richest colors. Added to this is the advantage of having, close to the suburbs, a ready supply of wood ferns and huckleberry and maple foliage, which help in making up a window display.

Putting a few questions to the plantsmen, we were told that, although most of them had sold out, the sales in the aggregate did not average any better than last year.

Various Notes.

The first asters were shipped in by Henry Clemmens, of Newberg, June 25, arriving in good season to salute that other good commercial flower, Lilium auratum.

It is rumored that there will be many changes here before fall, but details are lacking, so we cannot confirm the reports at this writing.

That good salesman, Martin Reukauf, was here last week and told us that he was having a most prosperous trip.

We were also glad to meet W. C. Walter, of Denver, Colo., who came to explore the great northwest. H. J. M.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

C. W. Stuart, Newark, N. Y., met with a bad fall June 25, when a runaway horse collided with the buggy in which Mr. Stuart was riding. His collar bone and two ribs on the left side were broken.

There are in the United States about twenty-five kinds of nut-bearing trees which are notable for their beauty as well as their valuable products, not only of food, but of the high priced timber they furnish as well.

A nursery firm at Nice, France, recently organized a grafting competition for workmen in the district. Each competitor was allotted so many rows of stocks and bundles of scions to correspond, the prizes going to the operator who put on the largest number of grafts successfully in a given time. Sufficient interval was allowed between the competition and the awarding of prizes to enable the judges to see which grafts were alive, no allowance being made for the unsuccessful ones.

During a heavy thunder shower on the night of June 27 the immense barn of the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia., was fired by a bolt of lightning. About twenty head of stock was in the barn at the time, besides the harness, etc. Five horses and three mules were burned and all other property. The building was totally destroyed. Loss on barn is $4,000, and $1,600 insurance was carried on the barn, grain, implements, etc. None of the horses was insured, and the total loss will be about $8,000. The building was of the most modern style and will be replaced at once.

J. M. Buchanan, manager of the Whitesboro Fruit Co., Whitesboro, Tex., of which E. W. Kirkpatrick is president, says that they sprayed peach trees with a mixture of arsenate of lead in the proportion of three pounds of the lead to fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture. It simply cooked the young peaches on the trees and did much injury to the trees. All of the leaves fell off and many of the smaller twigs died. Explaining it, he says: "We had a flattering prospect for a large crop of peaches, but only had retained on the trees a few peaches. The trees that were left for experiment, to see what the effect was, had lost few of the fruits and matured well, considering the season. I doubt if the trees so treated will produce any fruit buds for next season's crop. We have had a wet season this year and the acting state entomologist thinks that this is somewhat the cause of the disaster."

LATE FLOWERING LILACS.

Can you give me the names of three or four varieties of lilacs which are late bloomers, so much so that in our Colorado climate the flower buds would not start development until May 1?

H. L. W.

As the various named sorts of Syringa vulgaris will probably bloom too early for you, it will be better to plant such varieties as S. Josikæa, or Hungarian lilac; S. Chinensis, or Rouen lilac; S. Persica, or Persian lilac; and S. villosa, or Himalayan lilac. The last named sort blooms about two weeks later than the forms of S. vulgaris. The tree lilacs, S. Pekinensis and S. Japonica, which carry immense panicles of creamy white flowers, attain a height of fifteen to twenty-five feet and bloom profusely after being planted a few years. Their season is a month later than S. vulgaris. Of the numerous forms of this latter lilac, we find Mme. Lemoine, double, pure white, lasts longer than any other we have grown.

W. N. Craig.

THIS year's peach crop in the south should go a long way toward insuring a demand for trees for next season.

MOVING RHODODENDRONS.

I am asked to transplant a large, fine rhododendron plant, probably ten or twelve years old, from one cemetery lot to another adjoining lot, to make room for a large monument, and they want it done within the next three or four weeks. Do you think I can undertake this job and have chances of saving the rhododendron for them? How would you advise me to do it? Should it be watered frequently after it has been transplanted? I tried to get them to wait until later to do the work, but they have let the contract for the monument work and also some florist told them that now, after blooming and before new growth begins, is undoubtedly the best time to do it. As I have never done it, I should like to have you give me some pointers regarding the work. M. L. H.

While this is not by any means the ideal time for moving rhododendrons, there is no good reason why you cannot move the one you speak of successfully. The trouble in lifting such a plant so soon after blooming is that the shoots have not yet had time to mature and will be quite soft. Still, with careful lifting, you can save even them.

Tie up the plant. Strips of burlap are better for this purpose than twine. Open a circular trench two feet deep, five to six feet away from the stem. Then use a pick to loosen the remaining soil, taking care to save all possible roots. Gradually widen your trench and go a little deeper as you reach the main ball of the plant. Use a strong crowbar to loosen the ball. Save all the earth you possibly can on this.

As you only have a short distance to move the plant, place it carefully either on a flat hand-barrow or use a couple of planks. Four men will be able to move it easily. Have a first-class hole prepared. After getting your plant in its new position, fill in some soil, tamping it firmly so as to leave no open crevices. Then give a thorough soaking of water. Let this drain away before filling in the remaining compost.

If the soil is dry, it will be better to soak the roots of the rhododendron before lifting. This will be best accomplished by using a draw-hoe to make a circular ridge three or four feet away from the center of the plant. Fill the saucer with water several times, to be sure the roots are well wetted. Choose, if possible, a cloudy day for the operation. If a light rain falls the conditions will be ideal. Mulch well after planting. Additional waterings in dry weather and sprayings overhead will be beneficial. W. N. CRAIG.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Unless present plans miscarry, Toledo will be one perfect flower garden when the veterans of the Civil War meet to hold their encampment here during the last days of August and the first part of September. A special effort is being put forth in all parts of the city to prepare an array of choice and beautiful flowers such as is seldom seen.

Business among the florists is far from quiet in Toledo at this time, and the looked-for slump is not yet in evidence. An exceptional number of funerals have taxed the florists to their utmost during the last week.

Sweet peas are abundant and fine.

Various Notes.

Miss Helen Patten is making preparations for an extended stay at Atlantic City and New York. Miss Helmer will have charge of the business during her sojourn.

Mrs. E. Suder worked out some pretty decorations at the Niagara hotel last week. An abundance of palms and cut flowers was used.

Mrs. Freeman, designer for George Heinl, worked out a beautiful design, never before used in Toledo. It was a floral rug, used at the funeral of the son of a prominent business man. The rug was made out of pink and white sweet peas, with valley, and was placed under the casket.

Noticeable among the offerings at the funeral of C. E. Braun, one of the best known citizens of Toledo, was a handsome casket cover furnished by George Heinl and designed by Miss Freeman. It was made out of roses, lavender and white sweet peas, and white carnations.

An empress wreath, of lavender sweet peas with wide lavender ribbon, attracted considerable attention at another funeral. The design was by Miss Helen Patten.

George Bayer is shipping some fine greenhouse tomatoes.

Will Hagenberger, of Mentor, O., was a Sunday guest of Mrs. E. Suder.

Milton Moore, park commissioner, is busy designing patriotic emblems for the public grounds, to be used during the G. A. R. encampment in August.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on Friday evening, June 26, with President Angus in the chair.

The executive committee had recommended, for life membership, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Mrs. K. E. Driscoll, Tarrytown, N. Y., as honorary members. They were duly elected. Also Frank Shaw, Elmsford, N. Y., was elected an active member, and five new nominations were received.

A fine collection of cut flowers, shrubs and hardy perennials, all labeled, were staged by Frank L. Milne, gardener to E. K. Weatherbee, Mamaroneck, N. Y. They were awarded the prize offered for the evening, also a certificate of merit.

The annual outing was on the program for the evening. The committee of last year, consisting of J. W. Smith, William Scott and L. A. Martin, was reappointed to arrange everything. They have selected Edwards Beach hotel, Rye Beach, N. Y., for August 4, 1908. A fine time is anticipated, as there will be a selection of games and suitable prizes for winners. Tickets, $1.50 each, can be had from Secretary Neubrand or any member of the committee.

I must have the Review; the florists' best paper.—D. H. Green, West Grove.

The Cream City Market.

With plenty of funeral work, business for the end of June and the beginning of July, both locally and shipping, was good. Outdoor stock arrived in quantity and moved well; only Shasta daisies seemed to hang fire. The most of these could not be moved at any price and those that sold left a narrow margin for the grower after commission and express charges were deducted. The demand for sweet peas was good, and they cleaned up as fast as they came in. Good carnations, which are scarce, sell at 2 cents; there are any amount of poor carnations coming in which really ought to be dumped at home.

Not many Beauties are around nowadays, but they expect the new crop in a short time. For some unaccountable reason, larkspur sold fine for July 4. Although only a few came in last week, it will not be long before the aster song will again be popular.

Holton & Hunkel Co. says it never had such a good Fourth of July as this year; busy till noon.

Adolph Fuchs, lately with Nic Zweifel, left June 29, after spending a few days visiting the big growers about Chicago, for Kirkwood, Mo., to accept the position as manager for the Oakland Floral Co. The place was vacated by his friend, Pierre Schneider.

Herman Stebs, of Elm Grove, Wis., still cuts some good Beauties, which are consigned to C. C. Pollworth Co.

With frequent showers, carnation stock in the field is looking good.

With a light attendance, there was not much doing at the club meeting July 2. All present were in favor of having a picnic, and the entertainment committee was instructed to make arrangements as to place, time, etc. E. O.

COLUMBIA, MO.

The horticultural department of the University of Missouri has just begun work on the erection of a new range of greenhouses. This summer only one house, 25x100 feet, will be erected. This will be attached to a frame structure about 25x60 feet, which is to serve the purpose of a class room and for general potting room work. It is the intention to add to this potting room several more houses similar to the one now under construction.

There is an increasing need of greenhouse space among the various investigators in plant production, and this alone will demand the use of possibly three such houses as the one now being built. There is a growing demand, also, among the students taking work in horticulture for instruction and practical work in the handling of general greenhouse crops. To meet these demands this institution expects, in the next few years, to erect and maintain a fairly extensive range of houses devoted to vegetables and cut flowers. E. H. Favor.

LITCHFIELD, CONN.

The annual rose and flower show, which also includes early vegetables, was held in the town hall Thursday afternoon, June 25. The exhibition was a creditable one, and many beautiful flowers were shown. The display from Miss Alice T. Bulkeley's Rosemere Gardens was one of the finest, there being many exquisite roses, with foxgloves, coreopsis, pansies, carnations, sweet-williams, larkspurs and many other kinds. From Fernwood there was also a large and beautiful display of many of the same kinds of flowers.

In the vegetable line the display from Whitehall, Alain C. White's place, was probably the finest. Mr. Putnam, of the Fernwood, also had a fine exhibit. His tomatoes, beets, cauliflower and strawberries were splendid specimens. William Wilson's collection from Mrs. Vanderpoel's garden was excellent, his peas being especially fine. Others who sent were W. S. Walcott, of Elms Farms; Francis M. Coe, from Cloverdale; Elm Ridge farm, and Forked Chimneys, Seymour Cunningham's place.

OGDEN, UTAH.

At the great "Four-County Fair," which will be held here September 30 to October 3, inclusive, there will be departments for exhibits in flowers, plants, seeds, vegetables and other horticultural products. Gold medals and cash prizes will be awarded. The four counties that are uniting in this contest are Box Elder, Davis, Morgan and Weber. The managers advertise that "the exhibition will be bigger than the state fair." Premium lists and all necessary information may be obtained by addressing the Four-County Fair, Ogden, Utah.

DANBURY, CONN.—T. H. Judd and his landscape gardener, William Butt, have been doing extensive landscape work on the grounds surrounding Mark Twain's new villa in Redding.

STURGIS, MICH.—Albert Richter says trade this year has been fine, not at all affected by the so-called panic. His place was struck by hail May 16 and a large part of the glass broken; otherwise it has been by far his most fortunate season.

JACKSON, TENN.—T. L. Metcalfe, who has his headquarters at Hopkinsville, Ky., with greenhouses also at several points in Kentucky and Tennessee, will erect a greenhouse here. He has leased the vacant Bond property, at the corner of Baltimore and Church streets, and will build a house 26x80. The office will face on Baltimore street and will be of brick and glass. Mr. Metcalfe has had a branch office here for several months.

SEEDS.

COBURN'S SELECTED PANSY SEED.
BEST MARKET STRAIN GROWN.
Our seed is saved from about 12,000 plants, carefully selected, when in bloom, from the 500,000 we grow for our spring sales.
Each plant is carefully selected, color, size, form and substance being taken into consideration, and the proportion of each color is properly balanced.
As a result of over 25 years' work along these lines, we feel justified in claiming to have the best strain of pansies on the market, and we invite trial and comparison.
Growing our stock in this manner, we have only a limited amount of seed to spare, and in order to distribute as widely as possible, we offer it in packets of 1000 seeds. Price $1.00 per packet (only one to each customer).

THE READERS' CORNER.

Flat-stemmed Foxgloves.

The abnormally flat form of the digitalis represents a not unusual case of what is termed fasciation, or the flattening of one or more stems. It sometimes appears in lilies, especially on very strong bulbs of L. auratum, and generally produces more flowers than the normal form. It does not reproduce itself from seed, nor is it apt to show itself in the next season's growth.

SIZE OF BLOW PIPES.

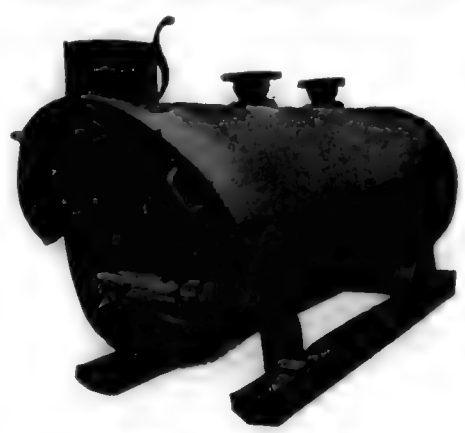
Please let me know what size cross-header it will take from a 3-inch flow to supply four 1¼-inch hot water returns under each of four benches. K. Y.



Each of the branches to supply the four manifolds of 1¼-inch pipe should be of 2-inch pipe. If you use a cross-header such as you describe, this should be of 3-inch pipe, the same as the main flow, as far as the take-off for the two inside coils; from that point on it can be reduced in size to two inches to supply the outside coils.

BURNERS FOR NATURAL GAS.

A high pressure line of gas main runs along the front of my place and I have decided to use gas as fuel for my greenhouses, but I am at a loss what kind of burners to use. I went to see two of our gas fitting firms in town and one suggested open burners, six in each fire-box; the other one just the contrary, a burner where the gas will have to burn through broken firebricks. I should like to get the best without paying for experience. B. M.

By removing the grates of your boilers and carrying the supply pipe, which should be 1-inch pipe, close to the base, through the ash doors, you can use what is called a Jumbo burner, which consists of a large mixer threaded for a 1-inch or ¾-inch supply pipe and a 2-inch pipe above. The air take of the mixer is adjustable so that the draught can be regulated. The burner is usually a home-made affair, consisting of a piece of 2-inch pipe about ten inches long threaded at both ends, one end screwed into the mixer, the other capped. Around the side of the cap drill about six ⅜-inch holes, and then drill fifteen holes in three tiers, one above the other, in the 2-inch pipe large enough to be threaded for ⅜-inch gas pipe. Arrange the holes so that they miss-match. Screw a nipple of ⅜-inch pipe into each opening, making the lower circle of nipples about seven inches long, the next row about five inches long and the top row or those just below the cap about three inches long. This will provide a burner which is economical of fuel and one capable of supplying great heat. The jet of gas admitted by these mixers is usually only about ⅛-inch, and it is likely that you will find it necessary to enlarge this opening to about a quarter of an inch. This can be done easily with a common twist drill and a carpenter's brace.

NATURAL GAS.

Will you please give us your opinion as to which is the cheaper fuel, natural gas at 15 cents per thousand feet or Pittsburg run of mine coal at $2.50 per ton? J. D.

You can judge for yourself which will be most economical for you. It is estimated that 30,000 cubic feet of gas is equal to one ton of the best coal, or that coal at $4.50 per ton is equal to gas at 15 cents per thousand. You must set against this the cost of firing, removing ashes, etc., which is chargeable to coal and not to gas.

PIPING AND VALVES.

Will you kindly tell me how many 3-inch flows and how many 2-inch returns are necessary to heat a house 22x100 feet in zero weather to about 55 degrees, with hot water? Would it be necessary to have valves in each pipe? B. L.

The house under consideration, 22x100 feet, can be heated by a single 3-inch flow and twelve 2-inch returns. If a single flow is used this should be placed under the ridge. If you wish to keep all pipes under the benches use fourteen 2-inch pipes, placing five lines under each outside bench and four under the center bench, and use one line of pipe in each coil as a flow, i. e., a flow and four returns under each side bench and a flow and three returns under the center bench. It will not be necessary to place valves in any of the pipes, unless so desired for the purpose of throwing a portion of the radiation out of service during mild weather. If valves are used install only gate valves. Globe valves impede the flow of water and are not desirable. If one line of pipe under each bench is valved it should be sufficient. Valves are, as a rule, not desirable in hot water systems of heating, but are quite essential on extensive steam plants, where the boilers are kept under constant pressure.

NEW ORLEANS.

A rainy spell, with an every-day temperature above 90 degrees, is keeping the florists quite busy pulling grass and weeds on their places. Chrysanthemums have been making a big growth and are generally in as good a condition as can be desired. The number planted seems to be the same as last year. One of the largest growers around the city, J. Dubois, has 25,000 planted outside. He grows different kinds; not so many Robinson as other florists. Between land speculation and a fair business in plants and flowers, he seems to be well satisfied and will soon build several new houses. An establishment of this kind, opposite the Carrolton cemetery, has been needed for some time, and no doubt J. Dubois is in the right place.

A. Alost says he is not done making chrysanthemum cuttings.

Joseph A. Schindler Seed Co. reports a splendid business in cut flowers and designs. M. M. L.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Summer is upon us and so is the quiet season. Vacations are about the chief topic of interest at the stores, while business seems to be practically at a standstill.

A general summing up of the whole season puts most of the florists somewhat ahead of last year, in spite of the strenuous times which we hear so much about. This fact alone should cause us all to wear a smile, as the most of the business houses about town cannot show an increase; in fact, many of them ran far behind in this year's receipts. It is harder than ever to collect anything on old, slow accounts. Still, the people who have always been in the habit of settling promptly are as good as ever.

There is not much good stock on the market. About the best flowers at present are sweet peas. Carnations are weak of stem and so small that a cent would look large in comparison.

Roses come in pretty well open. This is especially true of La Detroit.

There was an exceptionally good demand for valley during the last week, for several weddings. Orchids also played quite an important part in the proceedings.

Club Meeting.

Considering the warm weather and all the cool spots along the river front, the club's last meeting, on the evening of July 1, was well attended. More interest seems to have been shown in the club's welfare than for some time.

C. H. Maynard suggested that the club adopt some button, to be worn by the members on their outings and all important occasions. A committee, consisting of R. Rahaley, Albert Pochelon and Walter Taepke, was appointed to submit several suitable designs at the next meeting.

Mr. Bloy started the question of getting higher prices for plants, particularly geraniums. He cited the case of Scott, in Buffalo, who disposed of something like 35,000 geraniums at $1.50 per dozen, or $8 per hundred.

D. S. Kimball called the attention of the club to the rapid increase of the various tree pests in this city. Caterpillars, especially, are causing much damage. This is becoming a serious problem, especially when, after the extra efforts of the park officials, the pests are worse than ever.

Ex-President Dilger was appointed by the chair to look up a suitable date for the club's annual outing. This is to take place sometime in the latter part of July or first part of August, at Bois Blanc Island.

Peter Rush, a son of Louis Rush, was elected a member of the club.

Cigars were sent by H. V. Pearce, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, who recently joined the benedicts, and every one smoked to their health.

The next meeting will be a red-hot one, not only in point of the weather, but in other respects. It has been decided that a good house-cleaning is necessary and summer is the time to do it. A goodly number of the members who are far behind in their dues will be asked to settle up, and those not doing so will be dropped from the club membership list, as per the by-laws. Convention plans are also to be discussed, so all should be on hand.

Various Notes.

Miss Gentlemen, the hustling manager of Leadley's store, is in the east on her vacation.

Detroit will have an unusually large delegation at Niagara Falls next August, judging from the enthusiasm now shown.

Alfred Roegner is sending in some fine peas.

Albert Stahelin, of Redford, met with an accident on the boulevard in Detroit, Thursday, July 2. His buggy was run into by an auto and the occupants thrown out. H. S.

Mystic, Conn.—J. Henry Schaffer, who started a greenhouse business here one year ago, has met with good success and is now building an addition, 21x50 feet.

Watertown, Mass. — J. Winthrop Stone will build a large greenhouse on land owned by him at the junction of Grove and Arlington streets. The building will be 47x450, in three sections.

MORE MONEY--LESS WORRY

A Capitol Boiler for the greenhouse means more money, because it will use less fuel.

It means less worry, because its Divided Section allows for quick repairs, in case of accident, without interfering with the continued heating of the greenhouse. You realize the importance of this more forcefully than we can express it.

Completed Wittbold Bench

Note the even, uniform appearance

This bench is strong enough for a man weighing 190 lbs. to jump upon in the center with full force and will not give a particle.

Experience has shown that concrete benches that are practically indestructible can be installed as cheaply as wood benches that must be renewed every three or four years. Lumber gets higher and higher every year, and thoughtful growers realize they must soon find a substitute for wood benches.

Why not build of concrete this year?

With the use of the Wittbold patented clamps and leg molds these benches can be built so easily and at such small cost that they are well worth investigation by every grower who has the least desire to save the cost (and hard work) of bench renewal. Write for special Bench Booklet; it tells all about cost, etc., with illustrated directions how to build best benches easiest. He says that trade in this part of the state has been unusually good and he sold out everything except a few overgrown geraniums. The call for cut flowers has been better than ever. Times may be hard, he says, in the big cities, but he has no reason to complain, as his trade has increased nearly one-half every year for the last three years.

State of Trade.

Business has come down to the summer basis. There is little doing and not much to do it with. The extremely hot weather we have had the last few days is telling on stock. Roses are poor and off color and it is hard to get enough good stock for what orders come in.

Carnations are falling off in size, but are of good color. Enchantress still takes the top notch as to size and quality and it is hard to beat for a hot weather carnation, as all that are coming in are still from old stock. The balance is getting smaller as the days roll by.

Sweet peas are still plentiful, but the quality is poor, as they are soft, owing to the showers we have been having the last few days. Asters are looking fine, but it will be some time before they are in.

Various Notes.

At the club meeting June 23 the members presented a beautiful locket charm to Albert Knopf. It was neatly engraved on one side and the initials of the club, C. F. C., in raised letters, were on the other side. Mr. Knopf was a charter member of our club and was the first man to put his name on the book.

The picnic is coming on in good shape for July 15, and probably we will have three cars, as against two last year. Sherman Stephens will take the banner, no doubt, for selling the most tickets. He said he would bring about fifteen from the cemetery and we all hope they will not be dead ones.

Will Graff looks like a new man since his return from West Baden. He says they put him on the track there, so no doubt he will be in fine shape to enter the races at the picnic.

G. H. Woodrow, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., is spending two weeks at Magnetic Springs. J. M.

BUFFALO.

State of Business.

Heavy rains and warm weather have prevailed over Buffalo and vicinity the last few weeks. As a result, outdoor stock is plentiful. Candidum lilies have been in greater abundance than ever before and every florist in town filled his windows with them. Decorations for July 4 brought out some very effective windows. Palmer, Anderson and Rebstock were the best represented.

Various Notes.

The Buffalo Florists' Club held a special meeting on Tuesday to make arrangements for the coming convention. The meeting was not largely attended, but good points were discussed.

The sporting committee of the club hereby notifies the out-of-town florists to practice up for the ball game to be played at the convention.

William Ehman, of Corfu, has leased the greenhouse of Mrs. Tyrill and has gone extensively into the chrysanthemum business. This makes two places Mr. Ehman is running, shipping most of his stock to the Buffalo market.

The greenhouse men are busy planting mum stock just now. Extensive repairing is being done all over town. Mr. Palmer is kept busy every day arranging the new addition to his Lancaster plant.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The annual rose show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, June 25, was not a great success. This was not the fault of the society, however, but of the weather, for the warm weather this summer caused roses to bloom before the time for the show, and the result was that there was only a small showing of roses. Only two tables were to be seen.

The society is having hard luck with its rose shows lately. Last year the roses were late, and at the date set for the show the flowers had not blossomed, and the real rose show was about two weeks later. This year roses were in their prime a week too early to be available for the annual exhibit. The heavy rain the preceding night caused a lot of roses to fall to pieces, and the crowds of people who visited the show were disappointed.

Some of the miscellaneous flowers, however, as well as some of the fruits and vegetables, made a creditable showing.

The prizes for roses were awarded to these three exhibitors: A. L. Bemis and Mrs. S. E. Fisher, of this place, and George Butler, gardener at the W. A. L. Bazeley estate, Uxbridge, Mass. These exhibitors also received prizes in other departments.

IRONWOOD, MICH.—R. Lutey has had a good year's business. He says that the hail storm June 18 was the heaviest in this vicinity for more than twenty years. It broke over 300 lights of glass in his greenhouses.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SHEAF OF WHEAT WITH ROSES.

The illustration on this page is one of the series of funeral designs by C. H. Fox, Columbia avenue and Twenty-first street, Philadelphia. The idea Mr. Fox has brought out is unusual. We frequently see sheaves of wheat filled at the top with roses, but the addition of a bunch of roses tied with ribbon lower down displays individuality. The roses used were Brides; Mr. Fox prefers this variety when obtainable in summer. The objection to the use of Kaiserins is their being so readily bruised. PHIL.

THE STOREMAN AND RETAILER

Vacation Problems.

As a sequel to our notes on "The Storeman and Retailer," it is well to consider, at this vacation time, what influence the judicious giving of holidays has on the employees.

There are those who do not consider their just due has been awarded them unless they have their wages gratuitously extended to them and are sent away, with good wishes, to some secluded place, there to ponder over their glories or fret over their fancied wrongs of the past season.

We are pleased to believe that the majority of our employers, recognizing the faithfulness of their workers, take the opportunity of the quiet summer to show their appreciation of the hours of overtime, worked during those busy days of the "season"—hours that kept the clerk from the pleasures of life, while he worked without complaint, in the knowledge that he was not only building the business of the master, but securing and advancing his own interests.

Such, we know, are the conditions existing in many of our best establishments, conditions which are right and just. But there are those who have smaller places, with only one or two clerks, where the prolonged absence of even one is a serious thing and can hardly be permitted. It is to such, particularly, that attention is drawn.

Occasional Outings.

There is a possible way to give recreation without hampering business, by arranging time off.

Who of us do not long to go to the ball game or the picnic, or to have a morning or afternoon with hook and line? Here, on this North American continent, we are blessed with the possibility of a good half day's outing at any of our chosen pastimes whenever the opportunity presents itself.

If you are an employer, build up the mental and physical condition of your help by allowing them all the relaxation possible during the quiet season. Arrange your staff in such a way that you may allow them all the time you can for play, that in the memory of your generosity during the quiet days they may be fortified to greater effort when the coming season—which we believe will be a hummer—arrives.

The writer only too well knows the impossibility of set rules for time off. The head must impress all with the fact that should the loss of an allotted time be compelled through a little rush, or for any other reason, it must not be considered as a hardship, but only attributed to the uncertainty of the business.

Far-reaching Effects.

Our experience has been that where some such practice has been carried out, it has been far-reaching in its effect and has done much toward assuring the faithful coöperation of the whole establishment in the crucial moments of the winter rushes, when a certain amount of responsibility falls on the shoulders of each employee, and from the head down to the messenger we are given the opportunity to prove the interest we have in the success of our place.

The foregoing puts us in mind of a conversation we had with the owner of one of our large retail stores, he stating that many of his help would not appreciate holidays given in addition to his regular "one week pay, one week own expense" plan. This man, by the way, outside of his store manager, believed in cheap help.

Now, to discuss the propriety of compelling a clerk to take the same length of time off without pay as with pay, is hardly necessary, as he is indeed short-sighted who cannot see the poor policy in that plan.

There should be no discrimination in the length of time off, as all should be equal, but the senior hands should have the choice of time. Should longer than a proportionate time be required, it should be at the expense of the one receiving it.

If you cannot afford to carry out the plan of not laying off your staff a week at a time, it would be far better to let one go for the season than antagonize the whole staff by the compulsory system.

Expensiveness of Cheap Help.

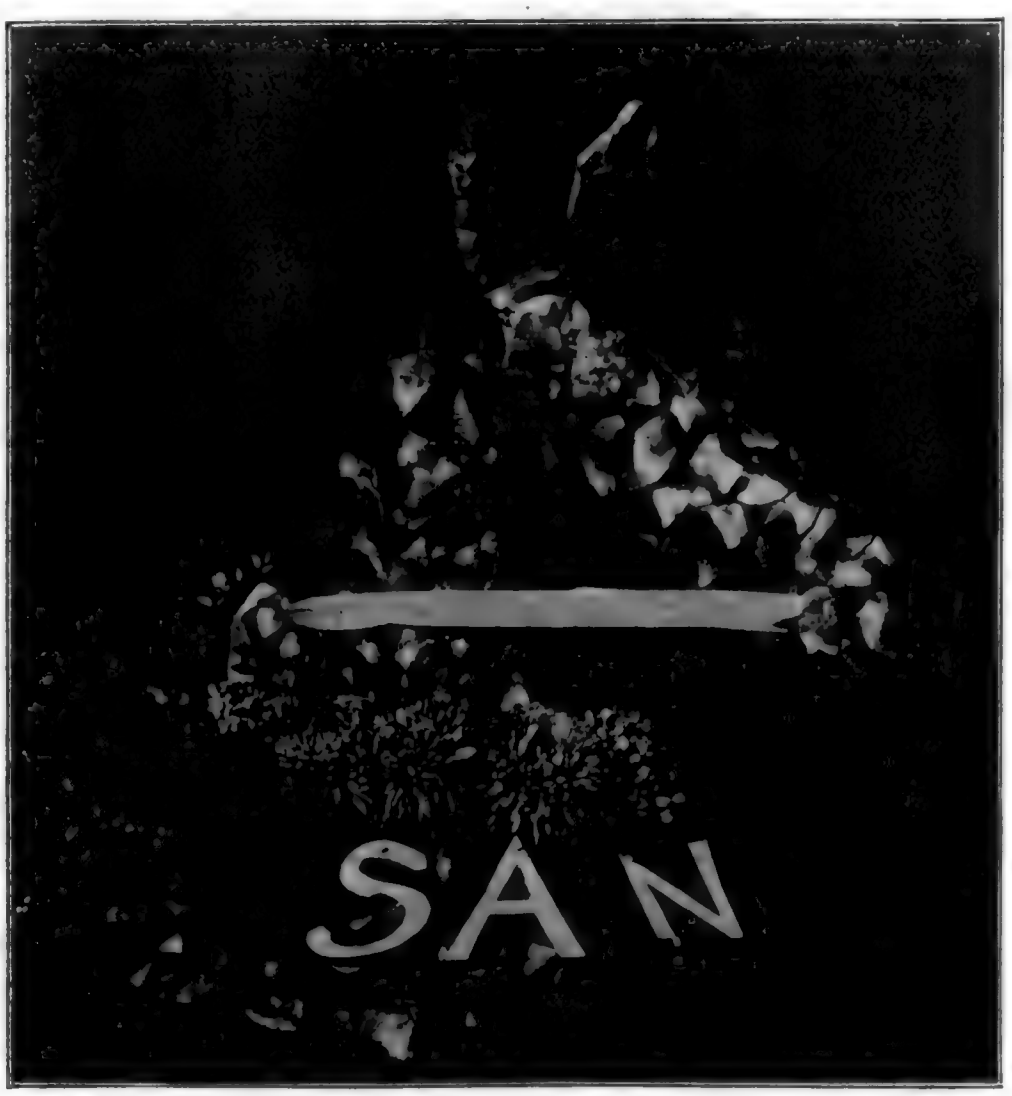
We want to put in a word against the cheap help idea, which happily is not very extensive. There seems no room for doubt that a cheap man is cheap in every sense of the word. True, there are those who are receiving small remuneration for large work, but they will find their level. Then there are many in the business who are cheap in the number of dollars paid them, but who cost twice as much as the better man, in the profit column.

The best is hardly good enough in your store.

We should also remember that every employee is entitled to consideration from the head. Above all things, do not listen to the petty bickerings, but do with the "knocker," whether true or false, as was done by a department manager of our acquaintance. One of his clerks had carried a tale—whether true or false was apparently of little consequence—to the general manager, who, holding the clerk, sent for the man in question, and requested the clerk to repeat the accusation, which was done, with the result that the clerk lost his position.



The moral is: If you cannot trust those in charge they should not be there.

THE GALAX HORSEHEAD.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced for the purpose of showing that one can never tell when he will make a sale. This is a piece made by the employees of W. J. Smyth as a part of a window decoration for horse-show week in 1906. The wire frame of the horse's head had been about the place for years and in fixing up a "horsey" window the boys covered it with bronze galax leaves, adding a few chrysanthemums for color. The piece was in the window when C. W. Marks, a well-known horseman and large flower buyer, happened by. It chanced that an old horseman friend of his, named Sanford, was to be buried the next day and nothing would do but that Marks should send to the funeral this horsehead from the show window. It pleased him so well that he had the photograph made from which the illustration is reproduced. There is just one little detail which would have added a great deal to the appearance of the piece. The ribbon which served as bridle rein was drawn too tightly when the photograph was made. The letters "San" were added at the buyer's request, because that was the nickname of the man to whose funeral it was sent.

C. W. Marks is well-known in the trade in Chicago and it is said he buys as many flowers as some retail florists. He is an old friend of O. P. Bassett and was the owner of the building in which A. L. Randall did business for a number of years when located on Washington street.

HOUSE-CLEANING.

Do Not Neglect the Opportunity.

If the houses which contained bedding stock are to be used for carnations, violets or late chrysanthemums, do not wait a minute with getting them ready and in proper shape to receive the new stock. This is the only chance in the year for the average retail grower to give a proper house-cleaning, which is so necessary toward having success with the cultivation of plants under glass.

In places where a large variety of plants are grown, as is the case with most retail growers, more or less stuff not salable is bound to accumulate during the year. Only too often stock of this kind occupies valuable bench room longer than it ought to. It seems to break the owner's heart to part with it. Another condition, not at all proper, which is liable to exist at this time of the year is the presence of small, scattered lots of geraniums, cannas, or other bedding stock all over the houses. All this stock could be moved into one house or bench, where it would require not half the attention, and thus the other houses could be got ready for cleaning.

Do not wait for a rainy day, when nothing can be done outside. Do not lay off two or three hands because you are through with bedding out. No, hire as many more to help to get the place in tiptop shape, so that by convention week your carnations will all be planted.

The Cleaning.

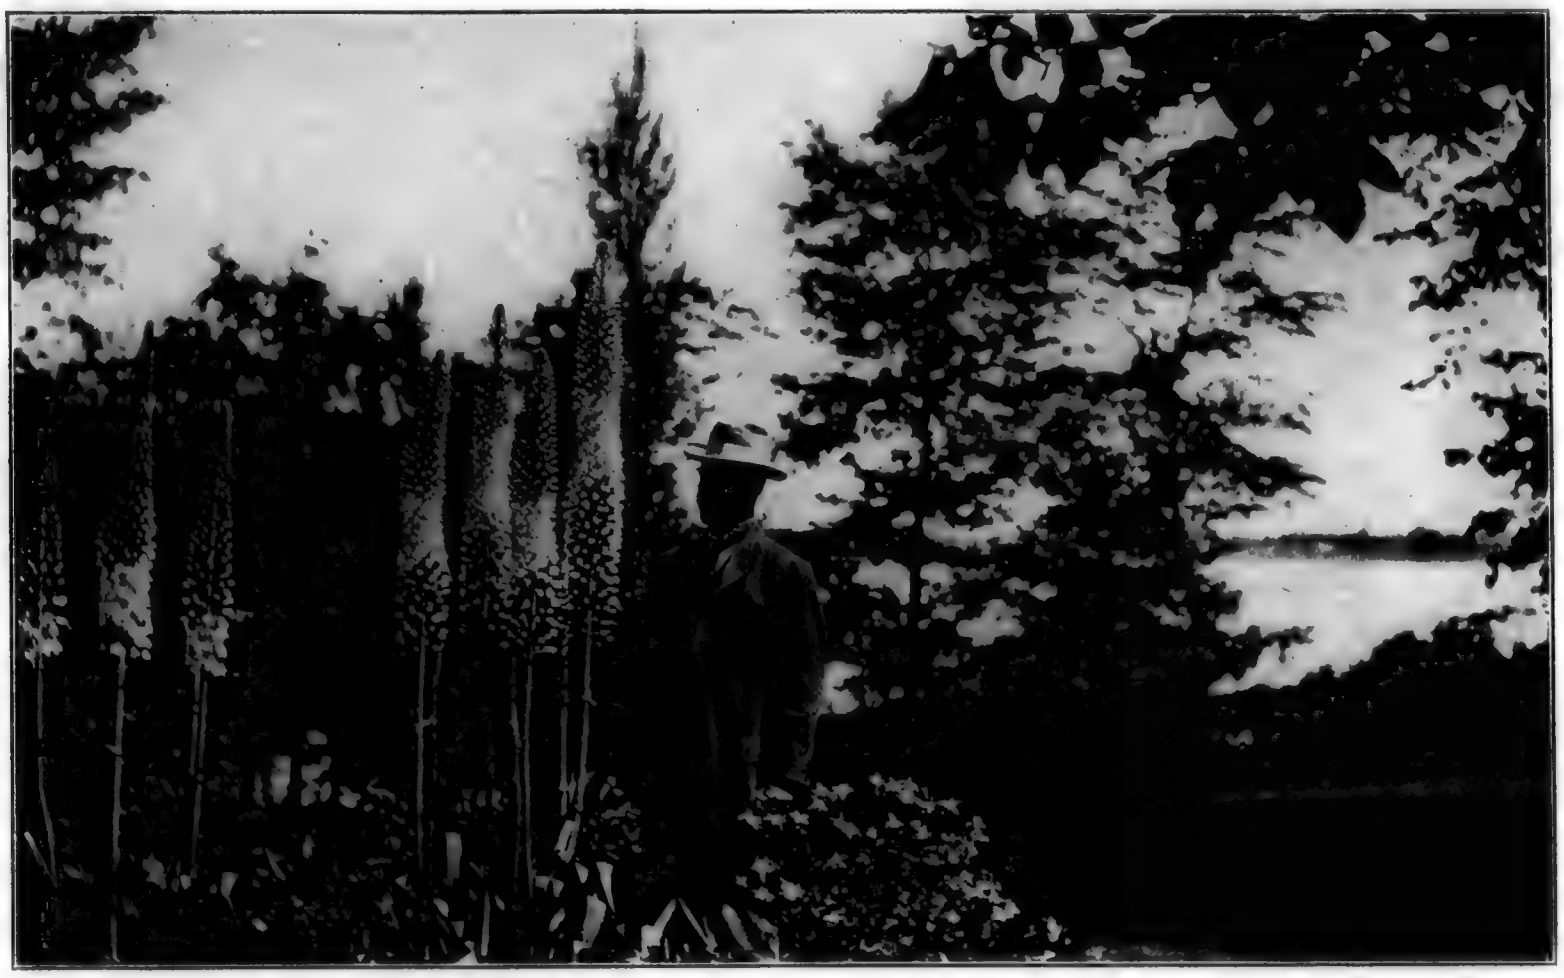
The cleaning can begin on the benches. Every bit of soil, or whatever material has been used to stand pots on, should be removed. Do not overlook the corners, or the space between the bottom boards where they rest on the 2x4's, for these are the lodging places for insects and disease germs. After this give the benches a good cleaning with the hose.

Now is the time to do such repairing as will be needed. It is no economy to put a lot of lumber into an old bench. It is cheaper to build a new one; but sometimes it is advisable to repair a weak spot in a bench when it is empty, to avoid a breakdown in midwinter.



As soon as the benches of a house are in good shape and before any painting or whitewashing is done, clean underneath, and the same care in getting into the corners and around the pots should be practiced as with the benches themselves. Do not level soil which may have accumulated from canna roots just over, but remove it. While working below the benches there is a good chance to examine the supports of the heating pipes. Weak ones or leaky joints should have attention now.

If the interior of the houses is to be painted, as it should be every two years, a thorough cleaning of the rafters, purlins and gutter sides is the next thing on the program. A good, stiff brush and a putty knife are the tools necessary for this job.

Painting and Whitewashing.

The time to paint a house is when it is empty. The man who has to cover his plants with newspapers in order to paint is working at a disadvantage. It only costs a few dollars to paint the interior of a house and it adds so much to the apearance of a place that it should never be looked at as an unnecessary expense. There are a number of ready mixed paints and preparations offered, but a good coat of white lead and oil is hard to beat. Wherever wooden gutters are still in use, July is the best month to clean and wash them out thoroughly. Let them get dry again and apply a thick coat of white lead and oil.

While no time should be lost in painting after the houses are cleaned and the benches repaired, it is well to put off the dry out, and the more time one can allow for this purpose the better.

It is almost useless to try to apply whitewash with a brush and expect to get into every corner and crack where it is really most important to get the liquid if you wish to destroy the breeding places of insects. A bucket spray pump will be found a most useful article around a place. Such a pump, with a "Bordeaux" nozzle, makes whitewashing an easy task and saves a lot of valuable time.

The important thing about whitewashing is to apply the liquid hot or freshly prepared. Then it is most effective. Do not keep a lot of slaked lime around the place for some future job. Dump it and prepare a fresh lot each time. It pays. There is no use in applying to a bench a heavy, thick paste, in order to do an extra good job. A thin coat of fresh, hot material does just as well and better, but care should be taken to have the surface where the whitewash is to go on clean. There is no doubt but what a lot of trouble with insects and fungous diseases could be avoided if more care was used in keeping corners clean.

Give the house at least once a year a thorough cleaning, and what is almost as necessary, a thorough drying out. The soil in the walks and under the benches is bound to become sour from the constant drip of the benches, and this, in time, is certain to have a bad effect on the health of the plants. Lime, properly and freely enough used, is of the greatest value to the man who runs greenhouses, but in many places it is not enough appreciated, and this is especially the case in old places, where most needed.

FRITZ BAHR.

EREMURUS ROBUSTUS.

Eremurus robustus is a stately plant, native in the deserts in Turkestan, Asia Minor, Persia, Siberia and the Himalayas, and a striking object in the herbaceous garden when in flower. The accompanying illustration will be of special interest, as it shows, also, W. E. Kelley, who was recently elected president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago. The two plants shown, with seven spikes, are blooming on Mr. Kelley's grounds at his summer home at Oconomowoc, Wis., where James A. Wilson is gardener. As Mr. Kelley is full six feet tall, it can be seen that the eremuri like the treatment they receive on the shores of Lac La Belle.

September is a good month in which to plant the eremuri, but they can be moved with safety while the ground is open. Great care is needed in lifting them, as the large, octopus-like roots are easily broken. While the plants appear to thrive in any good garden soil, a compost containing a good proportion of meadow muck, leaf-mold and well rotted cow manure seems especially suitable. The land should be well drained and the crowns buried eight to ten inches deep. A coating of leaves should be placed over the crowns after the ground freezes, and as growth commences early in the spring and the young shoots are liable to injury from late frosts and cutting winds, it is well to leave a mulching round the plants until early in May. A few short pine or spruce boughs also may be stuck in the ground around the plants for protection.

The tall, naked flower scapes are terminated by racemes two to four feet in length. The leaves are long and linear, dying down a few weeks after the plants have flowered. The flower scapes need no supporting unless the plants are in a wind-swept location. W. N. Craig says the plants produce seeds with great freedom, which, if sown when ripe, germinate readily. It takes five to seven years to flower them from seed, however, and few have the patience to wait so long. Division of the root is the usual means of propagation.

While the price of the roots remains moderately high, due to the slow propagation of the plant, it has declined considerably during the last few years, and whereas five years ago eremuri were looked upon as novelties, they are now to be met with in many gardens and are listed by a good number of American dealers. They are worthy a place in every well regulated garden, and the commercial grower who can show his customers flowering plants cannot fail to have orders for them.

MASTICA FOR LEAKY ROOFS.

My houses are old and leak badly when it rains. I want to tighten the roofs before cold weather and want to know if Mastica is better than putty on old roofs, where the paint is off badly.

S. M.

Mastica is useful on leaky roofs and I always like to have some of it on hand, but if you are reglazing the roofs of your house, I would prefer to use good putty, as it will give you a perfectly tight roof if properly bedded. Of course, a coat of white lead should be given after glazing. Do this work now, as time will permit, rather than wait for cool weather.

FREIGHT CLASSIFICATION.

Carl Ickes, vice-president and treasurer of the A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, writes:

"We note in the REVIEW of June 25 an article about the freight rates to the western states. In reference to this, we beg to inform you that several months previous, we had already entered a request for the readjustment of the classification, our letter to the Western Classification Committee being dated April 13. Our main point, however, was the apparent discrimination by the railroads against car lots of greenhouse material containing other items than strictly the wood parts. While they apply car lot rates on shipments containing bars, ventilators, etc., they apply less than car lot rates as soon as glass or pipe are included. The orders of the majority of florists are not large enough to entitle them to the benefit of the lower rates under these rulings, while if the railroads would change their rulings and allow a carload to be made up of everything going into a greenhouse, even the smaller growers could arrange for carload shipments and thus enjoy the advantage of the low rates."

ASTERS WILTING.

I send an aster plant, which please examine and let me know what is wrong with it. The plants in the field look fine, but they are beginning to droop all over the field. Some of them are drooping over so that the tops come to the ground. W. U.

The plant forwarded had absolutely nothing wrong with it in the way of disease or parasite. If all your plants were as healthy as this one, unless something happened to them which the plant did not show, you ought to have a splendid cut of asters. Your description does not suggest the common aster blight, with which you are perhaps familiar. Dig up one of the wilted plants and examine the roots carefully. Perhaps aphis is working at the roots. In such case, water with tobacco water to destroy the aphis. Use one of tne tobacco extracts for this, at the strength recommended for spraying. You should have forwarded a wilted plant along with the healthy one.
A. F. J. B.

SOAP SOLUTION FOR SPIDER.

We had quite a bit of trouble with red spider on our carnations last winter and I was unable to control the pest satisfactorily by syringing, without hurting the plants. I have tried both salt and soap solutions. I found that salt did the work pretty well, but burned some vines we had at the edges of the benches rather badly.

So I tried soap, and am quite enthusiastic over the results. I used a regular sized bar of Ivory soap, the 8-cent size, to a gallon and a half or two gallons of water, sprayed it on thoroughly from both sides of the bench, and let it stay on about a day. Two applications completely cleaned the spider out of one bench and about finished the work on the others. Henry P. Dutton.

THRIPS IN THE FIELD.

Please give a way of eradicating thrips on carnations in the field.
A. R. W.

The only remedy I could suggest for thrips in the field would be to spray the plants with one of the tobacco extracts or to dust them with tobacco dust. Tobacco in any form seems to be more effective against them than anything else, providing you reach them. While the plants are not blooming you can keep them dusted thoroughly, and with good results. A. F. J. B.

TOPPING.

About what time should you stop topping carnations? How do you manage to have carnations the year around?
C. M. H.

The proper time to stop topping your carnation plants depends principally on the time you expect to house them. When you bring the plants in they should carry as many shoots as you were able to induce them to make. These should range as widely as possible, from young breaks up to shoots which are ready to run up to bud. To have all your plants in that condition requires a close study of each variety, as to its habit of growth, etc. If you plant early, it is a comparatively simple matter, as in such case you can top regularly until about a week before you bring the plants in. But after the middle of August, and the later it gets, the more care must be exercised and discrimination practiced between varieties.

Varieties which naturally break quickly and run right up to flower are easy to handle, but other varieties, and some of them among our best sorts, must not be topped too close late in August. You do not want them to carry any buds at planting time, either, so a good plan is to let the shoots run up until they are about to show bud and then take them off. In this way you avoid getting a mass of short shoots which will come into crop all at the same time. I have known growers to miss even Christmas with such varieties as Enchantress, R. Craig, etc., just by too late topping.

After you house your plants do not top them as you do in the field, unless you want them to bloom in crops. To get a steady cut of blooms you will find it better to let the shoots run up to bud and, as long as you do not want the blooms, cut the stems carrying half developed buds the same as you would cut the blooms. Here, varieties differ again. The quick bloomers will throw up their buds at once and, unless they are removed regularly once or twice each week at least, you will throw them into the cropping habit. The more bushy growers will throw up few shoots at first, and these should be allowed to develop blooms in order to get later breaks to follow up the shoots already on the plants. The main crop will naturally come early in the winter.

Such varieties as Enchantress and its sports can be nicely managed in this respect, while Beacon, Robert Craig and such must be given careful study. Many growers failed to get Beacon into heavy cut last Christmas, because they topped too late. On White Perfection, Victory and such quick bloomers, you can always keep your cut within sight by taking off the shoots carrying small buds and they can be thrown into blooms within a few weeks, when wanted.

In answer to your second question, I will say that we do not manage to have carnations the year around, although this can be done if desired. Here is where variety counts more than anything else. Some varieties could not be made to bloom the year around by even the most expert growers, while other varieties, if handled properly, will give you fairly good blooms twelve months in the year. They will not do this, however, from the same batch of plants, although some varieties will give you fairly good blooms well into the hot summer from the old plants. We are now still cutting nice blooms of White Perfection, Lady Bountiful, the Enchantress tribe and Victory. Naturally, the blooms are not as good as they were six weeks ago, but until the asters come in they are good property.

In order to have carnations through late July, August and early September you must arrange to have them blooming in the field. Propagate such varieties as White Perfection, May and Enchantress in November, and grow them into bushy plants in 4-inch pots by planting out time. Plant them where you can water them and apply a mulch of loose material early in June. These will give you some good blooms if no topping is required after they are planted out. Plant these in beds about five feet wide and set the plants 8x8 inches apart. Winona looks as if it would make a good one for this purpose. A. F. J. B.

CYCLAMEN FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have a number of cyclamen bulbs left from last season. Kindly let me know at what time I have to start them to have them in bloom for next Christmas. V. A. P.

Cyclamen corms or bulbs should never be thoroughly dried off. They require a resting period during the early summer months, but far too often they are thrown aside after blooming and kept in a dust-dry condition until August. Good results cannot be attained by such treatment. I hope your bulbs have not been too much dried up, so as to encourage dry rot in them. If still in pots, shake away all the old soil. Clean out any mealy bug or other pests lurking on them and repot in as small receptacles as the bulbs will comfortably go in. Use a mixture of leaf-mold, loam and sand and press the soil moderately firm. Keep the bulbs just above the soil. It is a mistake to bury them. Grow in a coldframe under lath shading, removing the latter when the sun does not shine. Spray once or twice a day when growth starts, but water sparingly until that time. Give a shift in September and move the plants into a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees in a light but not too sunny house by October 1, to insure their being in flower for Christmas. If wanted later, you can, with advantage, leave in frames until November and then grow in a house kept at 40 to 45 degrees at night. C. W.

Janesville, Wis.—The C. G. Dwight greenhouses have been completed and 11,000 roses planted. In the field are 10,000 carnations that will be housed before August 1. Charles Wahler is the grower.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., has returned home from a sanatorium at Battle Creek, Mich., in a critical condition. He is suffering with heart failure and has some very bad spells but was resting easily July 15.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

Need for Watchfulness.

Insects are, as usual, appearing in variety and the careful grower must be on the watch all the time. The most common and voracious are the caterpillars. All the butterflies found in the houses should be captured and killed, because if they are prevented from laying their eggs on the plants, there will be no caterpillars to speak of. Look over the under side of the leaves and you will often find an innocent looking circle of eggs, or a colony of larvæ just beginning to move around. If you can catch them before they have traveled away from each other you have saved yourself much future trouble. If the plants are sprayed with a light solution of Paris green it will be found effective in cleaning out this pest.

Thrips.

There is a small white thrips that secretes itself on the under side of the leaf and does much damage before the inexperienced eye detects that there is anything wrong with the plant. The plant takes on a generally unhealthy look, the leaves are pale and ragged-looking and if one looks closely on the under side of the leaf the tiny mites will be seen sucking out the chlorophyl. I have found nothing better for this trouble than clear, cold water, using on the hose a sprayer that diverts the water upwards and permits of a thorough washing of both sides of the leaf.

Borers.

Trouble is being reported from several sections with a species of borer that is most destructive, causing, as it does, the total loss of the plant. The egg is laid in the stem of the plant and the worm will proceed to eat out the entire center, working up the plant until finally the plant falls over, revealing that there is nothing left of the stem but the outside bark. There is no way of fighting a pest like this, so far as I can see, because poisons do not touch it, as it works entirely inside, and tobacco fumigation is of no use whatever in such a case. A vigorous and persistent policy of destruction to all the butterfly tribe will, I have no doubt, be found the best remedy, as prevention is better than cure.

General Notes.

The summer so far is much warmer than usual, making frequent spraying necessary to keep down the temperature. I have never been in favor of shading houses in which chrysanthemums are growing, though it does seem that a moderate shade would be of benefit these scorching days, to the men in charge, if nothing else. It is an unnatural condition to a cold-blooded plant to be under glass on a hot day, but still I say, do not shade the houses unless for some reason you are compelled to.

Pot on the plants intended for 6-inch pots, from 2½-inch to 4-inch, as soon as they are ready, because this class of plant must be kept growing from the moment it is rooted. Use good rotted new loam and to every wheelbarrow of soil put in a 6-inch pot of fine bone. This will furnish nourishment right from the first and the plants will show by their appearance how they appreciate it.

Specimen plants, if not yet potted into their flowering pots, should be attended to at once. The pinching or stopping should be kept up all this month, going over the plants every day and stopping shoots as needed, bearing in mind all the time the future conformation of the plant. Plants that are set out in the garden with the idea of lifting them in September should be treated the same and don't forget that a vigorous hosing in the evening is very beneficial in checking insect pests. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

WET COMPOST.

Early last spring I had soil with considerable sod and the regular proportion of well-rotted manure piled up, and later turned over. It has rained for six weeks to two months and it is so saturated that it has been impossible to fill the mum benches, and it is still raining. How do you advise me to manage them? I do not want to fail in having good flowers next fall. S. M.

If your chrysanthemums are in small pots, and the compost you prepared for the benches is too saturated to handle, it will be better for you to give your plants a shift into larger pots rather than allow them to become hard and pot-bound. If in 2½-inch pots, shift to 3½-inch, and if in 3-inch, move to 4-inch. Have your benches emptied and in readiness to receive the new compost as soon as weather conditions improve. Let the soil dry out, so as not to be pasty when your plants are benched. Your section of Kansas is getting more than its regular rainfall, evidently, while vast areas elsewhere are being almost ruined by drought. C. W.

RAPID GROWTH.

I would like your advice in regard to chrysanthemums. I have mine planted on solid beds three feet wide, 6x6 inches apart. They were planted out June 20 and are growing nicely; in fact, I think too fast. I have them staked to 3-foot wire stakes. T. Eaton is sixteen inches high; Mrs. Robinson, twelve inches; Col. Appleton, twenty inches; October Frost, twelve inches. I want to know if 3-foot stakes would be tall enough for each kind? I want to grow one flower on each plant. Should I pinch the tops out to keep them from getting too tall? G. N.

If you have head room enough it would be a shame to pinch back the plants, since you only want to get one flower from each plant. The Eatons will get up five feet and the others from three and one-half to four and one-half feet, providing you take the first bud that shows after August 20 to 25. This height is of course approximate only, as I do not know local conditions or soil. The question of whether the 3-foot wire stakes are long enough need cause no concern, as they can be easily made longer by capping with a bamboo, running the top of the wire stake up inside it, which will make it rigid, and the stakes can then be cut off any length desired. C. H. T.

PANSIES FOR INDOORS.

There are many of us who find good pansies in January, February and March valuable as cut flowers. Quite often a small batch on a side bench will bring good returns, for there is always a demand for pansies, especially when they are of good size and coloring.

As with anything else, you cannot expect to stick them in some dark corner and get good results. They require all the sun there is to be had, as well as a good, rich, mellow soil and an almost violet house temperature, in order to get good flowers, and no aphis should ever be allowed to stunt the growth of the plants. This pest will ruin them in a short time.

What tempted me more than anything else to write about pansies was a desire to call attention to the excellent qualities of a certain French strain sold under the name of Mme. Perret. I doubt if there is a better variety for forcing than this one, wherever large flowers of the richest coloring are wanted. The flowers are borne on long, stiff stems, and the plants grow to an enormous size compared with other strains. We have tried it for outdoor planting, but found other mixtures, such as are offered as home-grown seed by pansy growers of this country, superior for that purpose, but for indoor growing it is certainly a good thing.

If good, strong plants of Mme. Perret are wanted by fall, seed should be sown by July 15. The little plants, when large enough, can be transplanted, say five inches apart, in a coldframe, where they can remain until wanted inside. There is really nothing gained by having them inside earlier than the end of November or even December. They will not bloom in paying quantities much before January, and the plants, as long as sufficiently protected in a frame, are as well off there as anywhere else. When bringing them in, be just a little careful to lift the plants with a nice clump of soil clinging to the roots; if this is done, they will never notice the changing.

It will pay any retail grower to put out one ounce of this strain, which is offered at about $3 by most of our seed houses. If not all of the plants are wanted by fall, they may come in handy during the winter months, if you should happen to have bad luck with a certain crop. Or the plants may be lifted three weeks before Easter, either planted in a bench or directly into pans, which latter method is as well, as the colors of pansies are not like petunias; they always harmonize. These pans will make some of the best selling Easter plants you could possibly handle, at less expense than anything that could be grown for that occasion. Pansies in pans are like violets; they last but a short time when in a store or in the dry atmosphere of a dwelling, but well filled dishes or pans are always good sellers whenever a not too high priced pretty plant in bloom is wanted.

I might add that it is not necessary to go to the trouble to cover the seed bed with sashes. While it is well to protect the germinating seeds just a little from the hot rays of the July sun by means of shade frames, the young plants want all the air they can get, and are likely to get spindly in a few days if the shade is left on too long. Fritz Bahr.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

The Summer Routine..

During the next few weeks young stock will require a good deal of care and attention, particularly if the weather is hot. Proper care in watering, ventilating, syringing, watching for the first signs of mildew and keeping insect pests in subjection will keep us alert for the rest of the summer.

After planting is finished, the houses should get a thorough clean-up. All rubbish and soil should be removed from under the benches and from walks.

During the summer the plentiful supplies of water required will cause a growth of weeds under the benches and along the sides of the walks. These, if allowed to remain, constitute a harbor and breeding place for all sorts of pests, especially red spider and thrips, two of the worst of our enemies.

Staking and tying will also demand attention, as it is ruinous to allow the young growths to ramble over the bench. If tying is attended to in good season there is less chance for spider to thrive, and by providing a free circulation of air among the leaves the tendency to produce a crop of blind wood is lessened.

Disbudding will also claim attention. Nipping off the bud is a rather primitive and easy way of doing the work, but is far from attaining the object desired. To encourage and strengthen the growth designed for a future crop, the proper eye must be selected and the flow of sap diverted to it, instead of allowing it to develop flowers and leaves, which are not wanted at this season. It is a safe plan to cut off, along with the bud, three or more of the topmost eyes, being guided in the number by the strength and length of stem to be operated on.

Ribes.

DWARF ROSES FOR BEDS.

Clothilde Soupert is quite hardy and at the same time is a free and continuous bloomer. The flowers are of a medium size, flesh color with a rosy center, well formed. The plant is vigorous, erect, quite hardy and flowers abundantly. It is well adapted to beds and masses.

Baby Rambler is particularly suitable for planting in beds, being a strong grower with upright habit, yielding large clusters of crimson or white flowers, of only medium size but effective because of the profusion with which they are produced. It is hardy, vigorous and continuous flowering; it has good foliage and will be largely grown. It supplies a long-felt want—a good bedding rose. While the flowers are not as desirable for cutting as those produced on single stems, the clusters of blossoms can be utilized in vases to good effect. Moderate protection in winter is recommended.

Mlle. Cecilia Brunner, a dwarf polyantha, one of the fairy roses, so-called because of their miniature buds and blossoms, will be highly prized. Its perfect little buds are followed by small but fully developed flowers of a salmon color, afterwards becoming white. The flowers are in clusters. Its wealth of exquisite flowers makes it admirable for bedding.

LORD & BURNHAM'S LATEST.

Lyman B. Craw, secretary of the Lord & Burnham Co., 1133 Broadway, New York, writes as follows:

"I am sending you one of the first copies of a little catalogue we have just had printed. We have dubbed it our 'Handy Hand Book of Greenhouse Material,' because in it we have described every piece, stick, or fitting required to erect and equip a greenhouse. The materials are classified, grouped and indexed for ready reference.

"It is the first book of the kind that has ever been published in this country. There are, of course, catalogues of iron-frame greenhouses, catalogues of boilers, catalogues of greenhouse heating and ventilating apparatus, but there has been no other book published containing all of them and all so arranged that each part, or any group of parts, may be taken right from a prepared list with accompanying prices.

"It will interest you to see a catalogue that has on one page paint and putty, and on others, door hardware, boilers, heating fittings, etc.

"Enclosed with the book is a small envelope containing a hook, to hang the book up by. This is the way we send the book out to all those who inquire for it."

The Lord & Burnham books are always splendidly gotten up and speak with the authority of long years in the business, so the Review awaits with interest the receipt of the "Handy Hand Book" and the opportunity to put the little hook to the purpose for which it was intended.

CALLAS IN SOLID BEDS.

In the Review of July 2, J. H. C. asks about callas in solid beds. I should like to give a little of my experience with callas grown in that way. I have a bed about 4x22 feet. The plants stand about one foot apart lengthways and four inches across. This bed has not been taken up for about five years and it grows better every year, giving us this last season, from November to June, over 600 flowers, by actual count.

About June 1 we stop watering the bed and just let the plants dry down and stay where they are. When they begin to show signs of starting to grow again in the fall, usually about October 1 or perhaps a little earlier, we commence watering them again. Soon after they get started we give them a heavy coating of manure, sometimes stable and sometimes sheep manure, which was what they had last fall. We consider this the best paying bed on the whole place. We give them a night temperature of about 60 degrees. E. A. R.

SWEET PEAS IN CALIFORNIA.

Lester L. Morse, in 1906, told the Seed Trade Association that there were approximately 750 acres of sweet peas for seed grown in California and the accompanying illustration will serve to give a further idea of the extent of the business, for the lower part of the picture shows only one variety, Nora Unwin, there being five solid acres of this sort in this one piece. The scene is the San Juan ranch of Waldo Rohnert and the occasion the recent visit of A. C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., both gentlemen appearing in the upper part of the picture. The kodaker caught Mr. Zvolanek in the act of making a comparison of Nora Unwin and the White Spencer, the former variety being in his opinion possibly the finest white to date. The lower picture shows that, while the season's crop of sweet pea seeds will be short, there are nevertheless some good pieces.

Mr. Zvolanek went to California more especially to inspect the crops of his own winter-flowering peas, which are being grown there under contract for him.

Denver, Colo.—Louis A. Kintzele, who was formerly in business at Michigan City, Ind., and who arrived here about a year ago, has entered into the florists' trade here, both wholesale and retail, and will make this city his permanent home.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Harrisii Lilies.

The early shipments of Harrisii lily bulbs will soon be at hand and, where flowers are wanted for Christmas, there should be no delay in securing and potting them. A compost of fibrous loam and sand, with a little well decayed cow manure, is a suitable one. Do not use much of the manure, and if not thoroughly rotted, better leave it out altogether. For 5-7 bulbs 5-inch pots are sufficiently large. The 7-9 size can go in 6-inch. The latter size will also answer well for three of the smallest bulbs. In potting, put some sand below and over the bulb, which should be covered about half an inch. Give a soaking of water after potting. Stand on a bed of coal ashes in a frame or pit. Cover the pots with half decayed leaves or manure. Place matchboard shutters over them to exclude sunshine and showers and examine at intervals, removing them to light as soon as growths appear.

Callas.

Calla bulbs, which have been resting for some time, should now be shaken out, preparatory to restarting them. With intelligent care home-grown bulbs are superior to California ones, just as home-grown freesias are, but too often the drying process results in the ruination of many bulbs, these being simply cooked, rather than gradually ripened off. As a general thing, we do not pot our calla bulbs before August 1, this being sufficiently early to insure a strong growth outdoors before housing time arrives. As between growing single large bulbs in 6-inch or 7-inch pots, or several in 10-inch or 12 inch pots, we get larger flowers from the latter pots, but have secured rather more blooms from the smaller pots in proportion to the space they have occupied.

A good compost for callas consists of two parts fibrous loam, one part rather lumpy, dried cow manure, with a good sprinkling of sharp sand and a 6-inch pot of bone meal to each barrowload of loam. If this can be prepared some time before it is used, all the better. After potting stand outdoors on a bed of ashes in full sunshine. After the initial watering keep on the dry side until growth becomes active.

It is not advisable to plant dormant bulbs direct into benches, where this plan of culture is followed, but start in 5-inch or 6-inch pots and transfer to the benches when nicely rooted around the sides.

Geraniums.

It is much too early to do any propagating of geraniums. In this torrid weather the percentage of damped off cuttings would be abnormally heavy. It would be well, however, to look over stock plants in the field. Where they appear to be wasting too much energy in flowers, remove the trusses and keep the soil well cultivated, to encourage growth; especially should this be done with varieties of real value of which you are anxious to increase your stock.

Under the financial depression which has existed since last fall, nearly every branch of the florists' industry has suffered to some extent, but in the case of geraniums there appears to have been no decrease in sales but rather the reverse, stocks being sold out clean in nearly every case.

Plants being especially grown for winter flowering should now be in 4-inch pots, and during August should receive a further shift to 6-inch. The double varieties are more useful than the singles, as they stand shipping better. Such sorts as S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, Ville de Poitiers, E. H. Trego and Peter Henderson are just what are needed for Christmas sales. The more showy singles answer well for home trade. Paul Crampel is one of the best of brilliant scarlet color. Its habit is ideal. It is also more floriferous than any other geranium.

In this intensely hot weather the winter geraniums will grow nicely in a coldframe without sashes. If a lath shading is run over them from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., they will grow all the better for it.

Hollyhocks.

There can be no finer border plant than that grand old perennial, the hollyhock. For filling large vases its cut stalks of flowers are magnificent, but we do not see it grown to any considerable extent by commercial florists. In the case of perennials, even if there were no sales from cut flowers, the increasing tendency towards using a larger number of these plants by every owner of a garden should create an excellent sale for them, and the florist who can show prospective customers a nice row of hollyhocks in bloom can hardly fail to sell them plants for next spring's delivery.

From seed started now vigorous plants can be had. Owing to droughty conditions usually prevailing in July, it is better to sow the seed in a coldframe. Glass covering is not necessary, but cheesecloth, to prevent drying out of the soil, should be used during bright sunshine. Separate colors of good double hollyhocks can be purchased so reasonably that it is better not to bother with any mixtures. The seed germinates in a few days and the seedlings should be transplanted before they become too crowded, always choosing a cool, moist spell for this work.

General Repairing.

During the heated spell is the proper time to attend to all greenhouse repairs, although many of us put it off each year until the first cool nights remind us of what we have forgotten. Painting, glazing, piping, bench repairing and building, overhauling steam and hot water boilers and work of a like character should be done during the hot summer months. Then we need not sleep with an open eye when the first killing frosts arrive. The continued high price of lumber is causing many to adopt concrete benches as a substitute, and all who have tried them have no further use for wood. It also pays to use concrete for permanent coldframes.

Sweet Peas in California.

Coal supplies for the coming winter should be arranged for while prices rule low; if this has been neglected, it should be attended to without delay.

Brief Reminders.

Cinerarias should be sown now in a coldframe. Keep the pans well covered with paper.

Keep the little plants of Ficus elastica and F. pandurata potted on before they become potbound. Syringe ficus in lath sheds freely during hot weather.

Remove the pods from sweet peas persistently. Pick the flowers in the evening. If gathered in the heat of the day and placed in a cold room many flowers will fade out.

Get the young smilax and Asparagus Sprengeri in the beds and benches as soon as possible. Cut out all old shoots from last year's Sprengeri bench.

Save seeds of any fine strains of useful perennials, such as larkspur, aquilegia and digitalis. Sow at once and they will produce fine plants before fall.

Choose cloudy, moist days for the transplanting of perennial and biennial seedlings.

STATE STUDIES FOR FLORISTS

FOREIGN EXPERIMENTAL WORK.

Results of Investigations at Urbana.

In organizing the experimental work in floriculture at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Urbana, Ill., the Department of Horticulture had prepared a brief review of such work as has already been done, especially in other countries. Some notes from one sub-topic of that report are here presented in abridged form:

The largest amount of experimental work along the line of forcing has been concerned with the new process of etherization. The investigations have borne on the physical nature of the process, the effect of various environmental conditions on it and its application and efficiency with various kinds of plants.

First and foremost is to be mentioned the discovery of the treatment itself by Dr. Johannsen, professor of botany in the Agricultural College at Copenhagen. This discovery marked the beginning of a new experimental interest in the management and cultural modification of the resting period in plants. A number of other investigators have elaborated the method or defined the conditions of its application.

Aymard, Fils, has made quite considerable theoretical studies on etherization and has written a booklet on the subject.

Effect of Etherization.

First, as to the nature of the process in the plant: Investigations show that anesthetics have the same effect on plant life as does drying out or freezing. Further, the three processes can be interchanged for cultural purposes. It was shown that the drying out of plants is a factor in etherizing by desiccating unetherized plants over calcium chlorid and other desiccating agents. Such plants forced as quickly or even quicker than those treated with ether. Moreover, etherized plants were shown to lose considerably in weight.

Further investigations along this line showed that the more the plant has been frozen the less is the strength of etherization that is needed to force it.

Temperature and humidity during the process of etherization were shown to be of great importance. It was shown that the effect of anesthetics is directly proportional to the temperature at the time of etherization. The best temperature is 17 to 20 degrees C. The upper limit at which ether affects the plant is 24 degrees, and the lower limit 9 degrees below zero C.

It should be remarked that another authority on this subject thinks that the different temperatures for etherization cannot be laid down so exactly as Aymard has done in these figures.

Investigations have brought out—as also the experience of gardeners—that the percentage of humidity in the box at the time of etherization is of considerable importance. So far as the reviewer has noticed, however, percentages have not been stated. Chatenay noticed that if there is a high degree of humidity in the etherizing box the flowers do not open well.

As to the necessity for light: It has been found that lilacs may be forced in the dark up to the time the flowers begin to open.

Vilaire found that bagging of the buds just as they begin to appear hastens their opening. Bagged clusters opened while those not bagged were still in the bud.

Aymard showed, further, that the effect of anesthetics decreases as the thickness of the covering of the buds increases; and that the quantity of liquid used and the length of time it is applied must be proportioned to this thickness.

It has been found that etherizing plants as soon as they are taken out of the ground does not give so good results as when the plants are allowed to rest for a few days in the interval. Further, Ledien has shown that etherized plants retain the effect of the treatment for some time and that they do not need to be forced at once. In fact, lilacs which had stood for two weeks between etherization and the beginning of forcing bloomed in five days less time than did plants brought into the greenhouse directly from the etherization box.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

When one says we are in the midst of summer business it does not mean much business and this year it means less than usual. There is not even the usual amount of funeral work, although there is some good stock and the first asters have made their appearance. It is believed, however, that most of our mills and factories are about to resume operations and, if such proves true, by the time fall comes we will not have anything to complain of.

Among the wholesalers there is not so much complaint, as many of the employees are on their vacations, giving the balance all the exercise they need this extremely hot weather.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg Florists' Club met last Tuesday evening, but a big storm during the afternoon and evening kept the attendance down. The subject for the evening was "Annuals and Perennials." There was a good exhibit and what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. The prize for perennials went to Mr. Lillie, gardener for Mr. Barnsdale; for annuals, to Fred Weissenbach, gardener for Wm. Mellon.

The Elliott Nursery Co. sent in about fifty specimens of hardy perennials, which were shown by one of the firm's employees, Mr. Marshall, who stood ready to give any information asked for.

President Fred Burki had a bunch of native wild flowers.

J. Weisman, gardener for D. M. Clemson, showed Hydrangea arborescens sterilis, which is considered a good thing, blooming as it does from the middle of June till the late varieties come into bloom.

There probably has not been a meeting held for some time in which the interest was so general as was the interest in the discussion of the hardy flowers.

Several new members were added, and a few old ones who are in arrears for dues were carried over, in hopes that they might have enough pride in their profession to keep themselves in good standing in the only society which does anything to bring them together and encourages and instructs them in the various lines in which they should be interested. There are not many of these, but it was the judgment of most of the members that these few might be shown that it is to their interest to stand with the boys if it did cost them $2 per year to do it. Wake up, boys! Pay your dues like men and do not let your friends think you too small to associate with.

Various Notes.

John Bader and T. F. Koerbel will sail Thursday, July 16, for Europe. They expect to be gone several months, covering all points of interest.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is resting at one of the Canadian summer resorts.

A. W. Smith, Jr., will spend his vacation at his summer cottage, Chautauqua, Pa.

George Marshall, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., leaves this week for Atlantic City.

Alfred McCoyd is making some improvements at his summer home at West View.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the market last week was such that almost any kind of a report might fit in well. The commission men are receiving quite a lot of stock, but little of it can be classed as first grade. Trade has been only fair. One day they clean up and the next there is plenty left over. The retailers are not stocking up much and only buy as they need it. Trade among them is light and funeral work in the forenoon is about all the business that is to be had. Prices on stock are low. Extra fancy carnations are out of the question. Enchantress is about the best that comes in. Fair lots of Beauties are coming in. In other roses, Richmond and Carnot are about the best; Bride and Maid are too soft.

Asters are scarce as yet, but will be along soon in abundance. Sweet peas are better in color and longer in stem. Some extra good valley is to be had, and plenty of gladioli.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, which took place July 9, was well attended, the number present being twenty-five. The meeting opened promptly at 2:30, with President W. C. Young in the chair and all officers present. Chairman Schoenle, for the trustees, reported everything in readiness for the club's picnic at Normandy park, Wednesday, July 15. State Vice-President John Steidle, of the S. A. F., reported on transportation, naming the two lines from here to Niagara Falls, the Big Four and Wabash, the rates on both being the same, $21.40 for round trip, and berths $4 each way. On vote, it was decided that the vice-president should arrange with the Big Four for the trip, to leave St. Louis Monday, August 17, at 1 p. m. on the Knickerbocker special, which will arrive at the Falls at 8:43 a. m. the next morning. If enough go a special car will be set apart for the florists.

The following officers were placed in nomination for next year: President, W. C. Young and Walter Retzer; vice-president, Henry Emmons, G. Angermueller and Edwin Denker; secretary, A. J. Bentzen; treasurer, F. H. Weber and J. J. Beneke; trustees, J. F. Ammann, C. Beyer, Charles Fulgraf and George Frow.

The next meeting will take place August 13, at 2 o'clock, when the annual election of officers will occur. President Young and the trustees will make special efforts to have the largest attendance of the year present.

Various Notes.

Henry Russe, formerly in business here, is now located at Lebanon, Mo., where he is putting up several new greenhouses. His friends in the trade here wish him success.

William Hurley, private gardener for William K. Bixby, reports that he will leave the place September 1. Mr. Bixby's is the only private place in St. Louis.

City Forester Andrew Meyer, Jr., has asked for a special appropriation of $5,000 in order to take better care of the trees throughout the city. The city has now nearly 150 miles of trees which come under his supervision.

A. S. Halstead, E. W. Guy and Henry Emmons, of Belleville; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, and John Steidle, of Central, spent Thursday in the city and all attended the meeting of the Florists' Club in the afternoon.

The annual Henry Shaw banquet to florists, nurserymen and gardeners will take place next month, the week of the Apple Growers' Congress.

John Kalish and bride and Will Osseck and bride have returned from their honeymoon trips.

George Waldbart is cutting a great many outdoor flowers, such as gladioli, asters and sweet peas, from his large country place in Clayton, which came in handy for the large amount of funeral work last week.

Phil Giebel, head of the Compton Hill Reservoir park, says that they will start this week to oil all the driveways in his park. This is one of the prettiest spots in the southern part of the city, and the fine work of Mr. Giebel in the bedding and care of the place is seen at once by those who know.

John Burke and Henry Ostertag paid a visit to the Belleville florists Saturday, July 11, and enjoyed a pleasant day. They say the whole craft from there will attend the Florists' Club's picnic this week Wednesday.

C. A. Kuehn, Henry Berning, W. C. Smith and George Angermueller donated prizes valued at $5 for the outing; the St. Louis Seed Co., a bird and cage; the correspondent, a year's subscription to the REVIEW for the best bowler among the growers. Mrs. Schoenle and Mrs. Carl Beyer also donated prizes for ladies, and Harry Balsley donated a box of cigars. Many other prizes also are offered.

Fred Alves, manager at Angermueller's, will this week start on a ten days' vacation, Al. Gunz having returned.

O. K. Sanders, son of C. C. Sanders, who is with the Big Four railroad, says he will see to it that all the florists who attend the S. A. F. convention will receive the best of care going and coming.

R. J. Windler and Conrad Bergsterman, on South Grand avenue, have been quite busy of late, working up a great deal of funeral work in large designs.

Two employees of A. J. Bentzen were badly injured by an explosion of lime last week, at the Bentzen place on Marcus avenue. Both eyes of Eli Mioux were badly burned; the other, Larry Balsty, had both arms and face burned. The lime exploded when it came in contact with the water. Both are improving, though Mr. Mioux will lose the sight of one of his eyes.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society has issued the preliminary list of premiums for the fall show. Chairman Sanders, of the executive committee, says the show will be larger than last year and hopes for a financial success.

L. Baumann, of Chicago, was a visitor last week.

J. J. B.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Good stock is scarce. Roses are small and a great many thousands find their way to the rubbish pile. Sweet peas are poor and scarce. Carnations are small as buttons and of poor quality. Asters are good, but as yet are not plentiful. The plants in the field are looking exceptionally well and the prospect for good asters in the future is fine. Gladioli are fine and they find a ready sale at 4 cents wholesale. There are no dahlias yet, but the bushes look promising. Carnation plants in the fields look exceedingly well. The rainy weather during the spring gave them a good start and they were never better at this time of the year.

Some of the growers are commencing this week to clean up their houses and will soon put in the new plants. The low prices of last winter have caused some to be discouraged and they will not plant so many this year. We hope that better prices will prevail next winter. There have been quite a number of bulb orders cut down and some will force very few, as last winter's overproduction was too much for them and the loss was quite heavy to some growers.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son are busy finishing planting mums. Their ferns are looking fine. They have planted large quantities of white amaryllis or spider lilies and they find ready sale for the cut blooms, which are made mostly into funeral sprays and look well when made up by one that knows how. R. S. Brown seems to be as well as ever, from the way that he hustles around. He never travels much, as he is always too busy at home, and that is one reason why he has done so well.

John Schneider, the old pioneer florist of Kansas City, returned to this city recently after a two years' absence. He likes this city best of all, though he has been out west through Washington, Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada and Oregon. He also made a trip to Europe, being there two months visiting his old home, where he met his brother, whom he had not seen for forty-five years. He is now showing some beautiful pictures of that country. He has one eye open on a location for a cut flower store, which he will open this fall.

D. Freudenthal is now taking it easy. We understand that he has closed one of his cut flower stores for the summer. One store is all he wants to take care of during the hot weather.

George M. Kellogg is at Battle Creek, Mich., at the sanitarium, for his health, but he is not improving very rapidly. We wish him a speedy recovery.

W. H. Humfeld, who has had poor health since last December, is not improving very rapidly, and, to make matters worse, he had his right foot severely bruised by a horse stepping on it. He has been confined to his home the last week.

The window decoration of the W. L. Rock Flower Co. attracted a great deal of favorable attention Sunday. A large vase of tritoma spikes was the main feature.

The Alpha Floral Co. has installed the latest and most up-to-date cash register. There are separate money drawers for nine clerks. It not only registers the time and the amount of sale, but contains many other new devices too numerous to remember. We are told that it cost $985. We believe that if everybody in this world were honest there would not be any use for such expensive machines, but we also think that any clerk wishing to share some of the profits could do so in spite of such costly machines. The show window, as usual, is full of cut flowers.

S. B. Ayers, of Independence, Mo., has two greenhouses of about 2,000 feet of glass and ten acres of good soil. He grows quite a lot of outdoor flowers, such as asters, sweet peas and peonies. He was quite successful last winter in growing sweet peas and he will devote more space to them this fall. He is still quite young and, the way he is going at it, he will make a florist that will be heard from in the future.

A. Thornhill, of Rosedale, Kan., can be seen each week at the city market. He often says that he is going to quit and take it easier, but he is like some more of us; as long as there is $100 in sight he is going to get his share of it, so he toils.

Lawrence Schwager still holds the fort at Thirteenth street and Grand avenue.

When we met him he said business was rather slow at present.

P. G. Lacey, with the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co., has been quite sick the last two weeks, but we are glad to see him able to be in our midst again.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Exceedingly hot weather has killed what little business there was. It has also had its effects on stock.

Roses are fair to middling. Carnations are all in.

About the best flowers on the market at present are sweet peas.

The first lot of asters was seen at the commission house Monday, July 13.

Various Notes.

The following rates have been procured by our transportation committee from the Detroit & Buffalo line for the round trip to Buffalo during the S. A. F. convention: For from ten to fifty delegates, $5 round trip. For from fifty to 100 delegates, $4. For over 100 delegates, $3.50. State rooms, each carrying three people, $2.50 each way. This rate is for a ten-day limit, delegates returning singly if they so wish, but leaving Detroit in a body for the convention.

Ferdinand Kolbe again has the use of his right hand. A cut resulting in blood poisoning disabled him for nearly a month. Being just at the height of the plant season, this meant a serious loss to Mr. Kolbe.

While the Tigers were cleaning up their opponents, the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange ball team beat the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House team to a standstill on Belle Isle Friday, June 10. This time the defeated team took their loss much more to heart than the last time. Louis Charvat was confident his side would win, but, while he put up a good fight, they were no match for the Michigan Cut, captained by Robert Rahaley. The feature of the day was Rahaley's fine work as catcher and the rapid fire pitching of Andrew Ferguson, Jr. Well, I nearly forgot the score and I guess Louis wishes I had. Here it is: 19 to 4. Arthur Forth, mascot for the winners, has a set of lungs like an airship.

Two of Breitmeyer's staff, Frank Danzer and Miss Hattie Holzhauer, are on their vacations.

Albert Dilger and his son, of Chicago, are in Detroit visiting with Wm. Dilger, a brother.

Mrs. Hugo Schroeter is home again from a long visit in the east.

Philip Breitmeyer, who has made an enviable record as park commissioner of this city, officially announced his being a candidate on the republican ticket for nomination for mayor. While some of his friends in the florists' business think he is making a mistake in entering so deeply into the political field, he has the best wishes and support of his numerous friends in the trade, who all hope, for the benefit of the whole community, to see him land at his destination far in the lead of his opponents.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has commenced the annual house-cleaning. Hammond's paint is being used to good advantage on the woodwork.

B. Schroeter had the decorations at the Light Guard Armory for the large exhibit of the Eastman Kodak Co.

Harvey Pierce had a valuable gold watch stolen out of his coat pocket during the ball game on Belle Isle last Friday, July 10.

Miss Hattie Klagge and Miss C. Rauss, both of Breitmeyer's staff, have just returned from a month's vacation. Miss Klagge spent a delightful time in Mount Clemens. Miss Rauss also spent some of the time in the Bath City.

The incorporation of the Lohrman Seed Co. was announced in the Legal News under date of June 30. The stockholders are Chas. T. Lohrman, Philip Breitmeyer, Harry Breitmeyer and E. Bleil. Capital stock, all paid, $10,000.

The Detroit Florists' Club held its last meeting July 15, at the home grounds of Secretary Sullivan. This was a departure from the usual method, as the meetings are generally held in the club room. The weather being favorable, it was thought an open air meeting would be more pleasant than an indoor one.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market shows no vitality. The severe drought and intense heat continue. Sunday the humidity was unbearable and the temperature 100 degrees, the hottest day of the season. Great damage is done the vegetable crops. Now the potatoes are feeling the bad effects of the drought and there is little hope for the tomatoes. If heavy rains do not come soon, the loss will be large.

Hardly any stock is reaching the market in roses and carnations. Most of the rose stock of all kinds is barely salable. The street merchants have gone to the summer resorts, so that this outlet is practically closed.

The quiet of the country prevails in the wholesale market. After noon all stores are as good as closed. One wholesaler declares it would be a godsend to every department of the business, and a saving of money, to close the doors absolutely during July and August. This applies to the retail section also, where receipts cannot meet the item of rent alone. If it were not for the cemeteries, there would be no call for flowers whatever. Society is at the seaside or the mountains. No one marries in July and August.

About the only flowers in the wholesale windows on Monday were the gladioli. Local stock is now arriving and prices are retrograding. Before July 25 the old-time summer prices will prevail. Even the retail windows, apart from these and water lilies, look barren and unprofitable. Rapidly the stores are growing lonesome, the wholesalers taking their usual summer holiday or generously sending their employees away for needed recreation.

Many of the shippers seem to have taken the hint as to the uselessness of paying express charges on stuff that is unsalable and are disposing of it locally or putting it in the discard. It is nonsense to send anything but perfect stock now to the New York wholesale market.

A few nice asters are arriving. Lilies have never recovered from the solar plexus blow given them at Easter. The older wholesalers say this is the severest year ever known in the business in New York, but the signs of the times are not discouraging. The tide of prosperity has turned. With the shelving of political unrest will come renewed confidence and enterprise. The great harvests now assured make continued hard times impossible, and there is a spirit of optimism everywhere that gives hope and inspiration to all.

Various Notes.

President F. H. Traendly contemplates a trip shortly to Niagara Falls to coöperate with the other officials in consummating all needed arrangements for the convention.

Everybody from New York I speak to concerning the convention seems to be arranging for the holiday. No one can afford to miss it this year and the special train with its seductive comforts will appeal to all. Chairman Rickards is already planning for the comfort of the excursionists. Messrs. O'Mara and Young, of the transportation committee, are busy with arrangements for the enjoyment of all, and our exhibitors in every branch of the trade have already secured space for large displays.

John I. Raynor has some good Beauties from Newport.

The New York and New Jersey plant growers were greatly encouraged by their summer outing and contemplated another reunion shortly, with one of the famous shore fish dinners.

The young horticulturists of the city are now being drilled and taught by Superintendent Hanna, of the Rockefeller Institute, in the mysteries of raising vegetables of all kinds, at the acre plots set aside by the public schools for vacation work, and wonderfully interesting and instructive these miniature farms become under the enthusiastic culture of the school children. These schools continue until October.

Emil Schloss and family are at Asbury Park, N. J., for the summer. Mr. Schloss will be at the convention with a large exhibit, as usual.

George Saltford is entertaining his brother and family, from Poughkeepsie, this week and will shortly enjoy his annual outing at his old home at Rhinebeck.

Sidney Wertheimer landed in Europe July 9, and will visit the silk manufactories of France and Switzerland while away. His trip will continue until the middle of August and the firm says there will be many novelties in the exhibit at Niagara Falls.

O. V. Zangen is busy at his seed farm in Jersey. He has several acres of his new salvia, Zurich, and his improved compacta, Fireball, and says his business for the year has been most satisfactory.

C. B. Knickman, with McHutchison & Co., has just returned from a western trip, visiting as far as the coast. One of his orders was a four-car importation contract from Clarke Bros., of Portland, Ore. Mr. Knickman leaves for a business and pleasure trip to Europe next week, his first foreign experience.

Lyman Joslin, gardener of Richmond Hill, N. J., is in St. Mary's hospital, Jamaica, suffering from a serious cut in the throat, inflicted by a vegetable knife used by himself while temporarily deranged.

J. E. Fenrich and family are at Asbury Park.

W. H. Donohoe and family are now summering at College Point. Their residence is close to the scene of the big fire that swept away some of the beach hotels and resorts and crept close to Wetzel's, where the Florists' Club holds its yearly outings.

Jos. Levy and family are away for their holiday in the Catskills. John Seligman and wife, of the same firm, will enjoy their outing in Sullivan county, as usual.

Grandpa Nugent is entertaining his daughter and baby on their annual visit from South Dakota. Mr. Nugent's son-in-law, at one time in his employ, is now president of a mining company, at Goldfield, Nev.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Everything is moving along slowly and quietly, in the regular summer rut. There are few good flowers coming in and the demand can hardly be noticed. Lilies and Beauties are about the only flowers that there is any call for, and they are scarce on this market. The weather conditions have been against outdoor sweet peas and the quality of those coming in is poor, as they have such short stems. A few good carnations are seen, and also a few roses, of which the Kaiserins head the list. Brides and Maids are so poor as to be scarcely available even for funeral work.

Asters are coming more plentifully and the quality is better, but there is no large call for them. Only white ones are in so far. Colored ones would sell better just now. There is quite a lot of valley on the market and it is of good quality, but it sells cheap and poorly at that. Outdoor flowers, such as sweet alyssum, candytuft, feverfew and like varieties of flowers for funeral work, sell well, but at the usual low prices.

In greens we are well supplied, having good quantities of smilax, plumosus in strings and bunches, and also Sprengeri. Hardy ferns are fine now. We still have leucothoe sprays, and both green and bronze galax.

Club Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room July 11 and was well attended.

E. G. Gillett reported that the Convention League had agreed to help out the florists in case we secured the S. A. F. convention in 1909. They were anxious for the convention to come here. The report was received with a great deal of enthusiasm by the members of the society.

Strenuous efforts are being made to have a large delegation of Cincinnati florists attend the convention at Niagara Falls and, owing to a happy coincidence, it is possible for the florists of this city and those near-by to take advantage of an excursion rate which happens to be in force from this city at that time. E. G. Gillett stands ready to give full information to all who desire it, as to this rate, and I would advise all those who intend to go from this district to address him at 114 East Third street, and he will explain to them how they can save from $5 to $7 on the rate.

One of the important things which came up was the indorsement by the society of E. G. Gillett for the office of vice-president of the S. A. F., and they intend to work to this end with all of the energy which they possess. Not only do we want the S. A. F. to come to this city in 1909, but we also want to have one of the officers of said society in this city and we will work to that end to the best of our ability.

Various Notes.

The tickets for the florists' outing are now ready and can be purchased at any of the wholesale houses or from any of the picnic committee. From the way things look now, the outing will be a great success this year. Everyone seems to be right in for it and is anxiously waiting for the day to arrive. Do not forget to purchase your tickets from some florist, for we do not get any credit from tickets purchased at the boat landing.

The time for vacations is at hand and preparations are noted on all sides among those who are fortunate enough to be able to get away. Nick Weber and family are getting ready to leave July 20, for their annual trip to Milwaukee, Chicago and Benton Harbor, via Lake Michigan. They will be away two weeks.

Fred Gear is planning to go to Atlantic City shortly, returning to Niagara Falls in time for the convention, from which he wants to take a trip down the St. Lawrence river.

C. E. Critchell has been on the sick list, having been confined to his home for several days during last week.

Charles Brunner has purchased twenty-two acres of land on Foley road, near Fischer avenue. This land adjoins R. Witterstaetter's place and, in fact, entirely surrounds it. Mr. Brunner expects to go in heavily for outdoor hardy stock, beginning to plant at once, and in the course of a year he will erect a large range of glass, making a specialty of roses of all kinds for cut flowers and plants. He is associated at present with his brothers, their plant being located on Fifth avenue, Price Hill, where for many years they have done a flourishing and profitable business. This firm has made a specialty for many years of forcing hybrid roses and teas for the spring plant trade, and the quality of their output is known throughout the country. With this experience to back him, Mr. Brunner is already assured of success in his new undertaking. He will continue with the old firm for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Critchell announce the engagement of their daughter Grace Davis to John C. Tracy, of Chicago. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents, August 5. They also announce the engagement of their daughter Katherine Eaton to Dr. Robert W. Morris, also of Chicago. The date of the wedding will be announced later.

H. E. Mitting, formerly carnation grower for W. K. Partridge, has purchased the establishment of the Wilmington Floral Co., of Wilmington, O., and will continue the business, making a specialty of fine carnations.

Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers is now making his rounds in an automobile. After two years he has been able to persuade the board to get one for the park department.

J. F. Pogue has bought out the business of Huntsman & Co., located at 609 Walnut street, and will continue it in his own name. Mr. Pogue was the partner in the business, but finally decided to buy out Mr. Huntsman's interest in the store.

B. P. Critchell has been put to considerable inconvenience, as well as loss, by the breaking of a sewer in his locality. The contents of the sewer mixed with the water which he was obliged to use for watering, and as a consequence he has lost large numbers of aster plants which were bidding fair to produce a large crop of fine blooms.

C. J. OHMER.

OBITUARY.

Rudolph Reynders.

Rudolph Reynders, of Oil City, Pa., was struck by a Lake Shore passenger train, at the Main street crossing, Saturday night, July 4, and was fatally injured. He was carried into the passenger station and later taken to the hospital, where his death occurred shortly after 2 o'clock on the following morning.

Mr. Reynders was born in Lancaster, Pa., September 18, 1865, and removed to Oil City twelve years ago from Buffalo, N. Y. He secured employment in the National Transit shops, and with his savings started the greenhouses near the St. Joseph and Grove Hill cemeteries, which have been a success from the start. On November 11, 1897, he was married to Miss Rose Good, of Oil City, who, with two children, Katherine, aged 6, and Harry, aged 4, survive. He is also survived by his aged father, H. W. Reynders, of Lancaster, Pa., and by two brothers and three sisters, John, of Kingstown, and Bert, Helen, Mary and Mrs. James Amstett, all of Lancaster.

He was a member of the C. M. B. A., of the Modern Woodmen of America and of the Knights of the Maccabees.

Carl R. Pfennig.

Carl R. Pfennig, a florist and landscape gardener of Jamaica Plain, Boston, Mass., died Saturday, June 27, at the City hospital of pneumonia, after a brief illness, aged 54 years. He leaves a widow and one son.

Mr. Pfennig conducted a florist's business at 380 Ashland street, and had resided in that neighborhood for many years. He was a member of the German Order of Harugari.

Mrs. Alfred Pahud.

Adele J. Pahud, wife of Alfred Pahud, of Indianapolis, died July 6, after an illness that had lasted for more than three months. She was buried the following Thursday in Crown Hill cemetery, within a few hundred feet of the home she had occupied for nearly twenty years. For years she had taken orders for flowers that were laid on the graves of those buried at Crown Hill.

Mrs. Pahud was 53 years of age. She was a woman of much sweetness of character. A year ago she and her husband celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. The event was attended by many Indianapolis people. Mrs. Pahud was a native of Alsace-Lorraine, France. She came to Indianapolis a young woman twenty-six years ago, and, six months after her arrival there, was married to Alfred Pahud.

She is survived by her husband and three children, Louise, Alfred and Harry Pahud.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

The early birds, who want to catch the nice fat worm this fall, are well along with the benching of carnation plants.

A meeting of window-glass manufacturers was held at Cleveland July 9, at which it was decided to advance the price of their product ten and twenty per cent. The president of the manufacturers' association said: "The price dropped thirty-three per cent the last eight months. Manufacturing practically has ceased. The raise is to take care of increased demand."

The John C. Moninger Co. calls attention to the fact that a number of growers who have ordered pecky cypress for bench material do not appear to understand the character of the wood and object to it because of its appearance. From other sources there are similar reports, and it has occurred that shipments have been refused because of the mistaken idea that the lumber was not good. The Review has for some years urged growers to use pecky cypress instead of hemlock for benches. While the "worm holes" in pecky make it look bad, it really outlasts the best hemlock by several times.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

H. C. Irish, who has been the leader in the work of the National Council of Horticulture, has the following letter from F. W. Taylor, who was Chief of Horticulture at the St. Louis World's Fair and who is now engaged in irrigation work at Denver:

"I have been much pleased to note the progress being made by the National Council of Horticulture and particularly that it has maintained the position which it assumed at the start, of separating itself entirely from any organizations which deal purely with commercial questions.

"I was extremely pleased that the National Council of Horticulture was organized at the St. Louis exposition and I have been watching its movements with a good deal of interest to see if it could maintain its original high aims. I feel that it is doing so and I trust that in the future it will interest itself particularly in looking after those questions of a general nature which can scarcely be treated properly by any other single organization.

"If, in organizing the Department of Horticulture at the St. Louis Universal Exposition, I had been able to receive advice, suggestions and support of such an organization, many phases of my work might have been much easier and I have no doubt that in certain respects better results could have been secured.

"I wish to particularly suggest that whenever it is learned that plans for large expositions are under way, the National Council of Horticulture should place itself in communication with the officers of such organizations and do everything in its power to see that horticulture in all its phases is properly arranged for. This means in the construction and arrangement of buildings, in the making up of the lists of awards; and in many other ways a more or less uniform method should be followed. No organization should be so well equipped to supply all such information as this, as the National Council of Horticulture.

"If at any time there is any way in which I can render any service in any branch of the work in which it is believed that I can be helpful, I shall be extremely glad to have you call upon me."

THE DISCOUNT FOR ICE.

Regarding your article, "An Express Discount," it seems to me that Mr. Reid is perfectly right in his claim that shippers of cut flowers, who have to use ice in order to keep their stock in good condition, are entitled to the same rate of discount as are shippers of cut ferns or cape jasmine.

Mr. Reid seems to have done the right thing in bringing this matter to the attention of the Interstate Commerce Commission, although I think it might have been as well to have brought this matter to the attention of the S. A. F. and have the society take the same course as it did in the matter of excessive express rates.

Frank H. Traendly.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is pleasant to note that the increase in trade shown in the latter part of June is holding in July. This must not be interpreted to mean that trade is heavier than it has been, for of course it is much lighter, but it is better by comparison with last year's records. Naturally, conditions of supply have a large bearing upon the results in individual houses, but in general business for July is excellent; the commission houses are almost unanimous in reporting a good increase thus far in the month as compared with the same period last year.

The business in summer has shown an increase for several years and a good many growers now are catering to the summer demand; also there are more farmer shippers, the men who have summer flowers but no glass, so that there are increased supplies as compared with previous summers. Of course, increased supply does not always mean increased cash receipts, but it looks as though it would have that meaning again this year, as well as in recent summers. While buyers are not asking for large quantities of stock, they all are appearing in the market and conditions generally are first-class for the season.

The houses which handle only material grown under glass are now at about the lowest point of the year as regards supply, but the houses which have outdoor stock are right in it. The Beauty crops are slowly increasing and of Killarney, Richmond and Kaiserin there are fair receipts, but not many Maid and Bride. Good roses are selling well, if at midsummer prices.

The carnations are holding out much better than they usually do in summer. Many growers are replanting, but there still are enough carnations to go around, and the quality is splendid for July. Outdoor asters are expected to make their appearance shortly. They are in request only among the buyers who do not realize how good carnations are.

There still are a few peonies. Auratum lilies are in large supply and of splendid quality. Candidums are done and not many longiflorums are now in. Gladioli are in good supply and selling excellently; even the poorest are finding a fair market, while the best are bringing fine prices. However, the annual flood of these flowers is not far away and prices are likely to go down suddenly. Sweet peas may not be quite as abundant as a week ago, but there still are enough so that the street boys are peddling them at cheap prices. The leading retailers are using the better grade of sweet peas in quantity; they give excellent satisfaction to the customer and a fine profit for the retailer.

There is increased demand for green, not only ferns but bronze galax moving briskly.

The Picnic.

Next Sunday, July 19, is the date of the Florists' Club's annual picnic and the prospect is for a big crowd, even larger than last year. Trains leave the Union depot, Canal and Adams streets, at 9 a. m. and 12:40 p. m., but don't fail to buy your ticket of a florist and not at the depot ticket office. The com-

Various Notes.

William A. Peterson has disposed of his automobile and invested $5,000 in a new sixty horse-power Locomobile warranted to fracture the most elastic speed ordinance.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, entertained T. F. McGrath, of Northampton, Mass., over Sunday. Mr. McGrath is a brother-in-law of Mr. Lynch and is known to many in this market. He was on his way home from Denver, having been a delegate to the democratic national convention. Mrs. Lynch and children, Charles and Dorothy, started July 15 for a visit at their old home at Hatfield, Mass.

Emil Buettner is cutting heavily for July. His carnations are holding up excellently.

G. H. Pieser, president of Kennicott Bros. Co., has been spending a few days fishing in Wisconsin.

E. C. Amling has moved his office in order to give increased space for the stock sorting and selling departments and will be better fixed than ever as soon as the changes are completed.

J. J. Kruchten is receiving some tea roses that are first-class hot weather stock.

S. A. Anderson and Mrs. Anderson, of Buffalo, came to town July 13 by boat. Mr. Anderson had samples of begonias and established a selling agency with the E. F. Winterson Co.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has been receiving outdoor-grown America gladioli and found them ready sale at 10 cents.

Percy Jones says that it will pay growers to hand over the summer stock to the farmers, because the greenhouse man cannot compete with the farmer in any event, and because the time might much better be devoted to getting ready for winter, when the farmer is out of it. Incidentally Mr. Jones thinks the farmers may eventually get tired of growing sweet peas to be jobbed off for 1 cent per bunch and drop out, when it will pay the florist to handle outdoor crops again.

Scheiden & Schoos, at Evanston, have their place about half planted with carnations from the field. They are this year growing Victory, Beacon, Aristocrat, White Perfection, Lawson-Enchantress, Sarah Hill and 25,000 of their unnamed red seedling.

W. S. Garland, at Desplaines, says that with the same amount of glass as last year he has this season taken in more money than in any other year since he has been in business.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, accompanied Mrs. Sperry to Paw Paw Lake last week for a few days' recreation.

The Market.

A week of intense heat is not conducive to much activity in cut flower circles. Markets, commission houses and stores all present a half deserted appearance. Flowers, such as there are, will far more than fill the light calls made for them. A good proportion of them are arriving in an almost useless condition. Of both roses and carnations a good quantity still arrive, but the bulk, owing to the heat, are small and many are either unsold or disposed of at almost any price obtainable. Sweet peas, owing to continued drought, are short-stemmed. Rather more asters are coming in. These include some Comet, pink and white. For such other flowers as are seen the demand is so erratic that it is difficult to quote any prices. Asparagus, smilax and adiantum are all in light demand.

Various Notes.

The happiest man in Brookline these days is Duncan Finlayson. The cause is a daughter, born July 7.

Reports received from several carnation growers in Massachusetts indicate a larger proportion than usual affected with stem-rot this season.

Farquhar & Co. report a satisfactory seed business. In nursery stock, while the large orders aggregating thousands of dollars were lacking this season, there was a great increase in those of moderate size.

The intense heat and prolonged drought are having a serious effect on market garden crops in this section. Those who have irrigating facilities are doing well. Carnations are smaller than usual at this date. Boston registered 97 degrees in the shade July 12.

The picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Pine Bank park, Malden, July 29, is being eagerly anticipated by many. The judges of sports will be William Downs, T. J. Grey, E. Holmes, E. Johansson, P. J. Turley, Duncan Finlayson, Kenneth Finlayson and James Miller. F. E. Palmer will captain the commercial growers in the baseball contest, R. W. Curtis being in charge of the private gardeners' team. W. J. Kennedy will be ringmaster, Peter M. Miller starter and Wilfrid Wheeler handicapper. There are eighteen sporting events in all, a considerable reduction from former years. This will make a decided improvement, as sports virtually occupied the whole day on preceding similar occasions.

The ravages of the brown-tail and gypsy moths in the vicinity of Boston are more severe than ever, in spite of the heroic measures being taken to keep them in check. As if these pests were insufficient, the elm beetle has reappeared in alarming numbers in nearly all parts of the state and the elms in many cities and towns have been mute testimony to their destructive work. ## PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business conditions are but slightly changed from those of a week ago. The noticeable changes are the increase in the quantity of asters, which is quite marked, and of gladioli. There are also some superb sweet peas coming from a distance. The rose situation has been changed by the addition of more locally-grown summer Beauties, which, at times, when they are not overbroiled, are excellent. Killarney from local growers is also better, being a fit companion for the really good Kaiserins that we have at nearly all times. Gaskelliana is the reigning cattleya of the day, while valley can at all times be depended on for fair quality. In the lilies, auratum is still excellent, and cold storage bulbs of longiflorum are producing finer flowers today than one often sees in midsummer. Carnations are rarely seen in quantity—only a few nice bunches here and there, chiefly white, with some Enchantress, Ethel Crocker, and occasionally Harry Fenn. Locally-grown sweet peas are mostly poor. The outdoor flowers have suffered from drought. There is some seashore shipping business and some funeral work.

The Reopening of "104."

It was officially announced July 10 that Charles M. Keegan had purchased the lease held by David Rust, receiver for the William Graham Co., for the store at 104 South Thirteenth street. This lease expires at New Year's, and it was understood Mr. Keegan had secured an option on a new lease on the same premises, to begin when the old one expires. This new lease, it is said, is for the ground floor only, the owner's purpose being to change the stairway and rent the second floor, which is not needed for a florist's purposes, to someone else. Inquiry at "104" added the information that the business will be carried on under the name of Charles M. Keegan, by Charles M. Keegan, W. W. Faust and Adolph Rueger. Mr. Keegan will have charge of the financial part of the business; Mr. Faust, who was with the William Graham Co., and has many friends in this city, will have charge of the store, and Mr. Rueger, who was decorator for the William Graham Co., will attend to that end of the business. Mr. Faust stated that it is their purpose to open a first-class store and conduct it in a style worthy of the best patronage in this city.

Mr. Cowee's Visit.

Arthur Cowee, of Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, N. Y., spent a few hours in this city on his way from Atlantic City to New York on the evening of July 7. Mr. Cowee came in response to an invitation to speak on the gladiolus before the Florists' Club. Fortunately, the hour previous to his leaving Atlantic City had been spent swimming in the cool Atlantic, a fit preparation for the unprecedented torrid wave which enveloped Philadelphia on that day and for several days before.

A small but select audience, embracing many of the leading members of the club, gathered to meet Mr. Cowee. His paper, which appeared in the Review last week, was listened to with marked attention and elicited a hearty round of applause at its completion. Mr. Cowee's manner was direct and forceful; his handling of the subject, that of a master. After the paper he exhibited a series of gladiolus slides, painted for him by Mrs. Cornelius Van Brunt, of New York, who has done such excellent work for the New York Horticultural Society. These slides, some forty or fifty in number, were most beautiful, bringing out the exquisite colors of the gladiolus with surprising fidelity. It is doubtful whether any of the club members present had ever seen lantern slides of such rare quality.

After the exhibition Mr. Cowee answered a number of questions put to him by the members regarding the Groff hybrids and his Meadowvale Farm. Later, in conversation, Mr. Cowee spoke entertainingly of the labor problem which formerly confronted him at Berlin. Labor is scarce at Meadowvale Farm, which is some miles out of Berlin. In order to meet the increasingly heavy demands of harvesting the gladiolus bulbs in the fall, Mr. Cowee conceived the idea of putting hoboes who apply for work at this task. The first fall five or six hoboes came and were employed; they were paid $1.50 a day and charged a nominal price for their firewood and for a blanket, being housed first in tents and later in portable houses. Mr. Cowee gave them a good talking to when engaging them and a chicken dinner at the country hotel when dismissing them, shaking hands with each as he paid him off. This gave him the name of a "good fellow" in hobo land, and a couple of years later—last fall—an enormous number of hoboes appeared and were put to work harvesting the gladiolus bulbs. Mr. Cowee further explains this solution of his difficulty by adding that the work is not very hard and that it comes at a time of the year when the hoboes must have money to carry them through the winter or go to a public institution, which they particularly dislike. This is merely an instance of the way in which Mr. Cowee meets problems as they come up.

he ought to be eating his luncheon should be considered kind. Don't you think so?

The method of growing cyclamens has changed decidedly this season. The Robert Craig Co. has put up two houses, one 12x225, the other 12x200, especially for these plants. These houses are arranged with slat tops—the tops that were used on the frames. These slats are placed in position every morning at 9 a. m. and removed about 5 p. m., thus giving the cyclamens as much light as possible, without the direct rays of the sun. On both sides of each house for the entire length are doors on hinges, which are left down during mild weather, thus admitting a free circulation of air immediately over the top of the plants. Both houses have been piped with the intention of flowering the cyclamens therein. The plants grown under these conditions are in splendid shape, sturdy and vigorous, in medium sized pots, placed on tobacco stems. The cyclamen strain is from seed saved on the place, from the best varieties of the past years. This seed is collected chiefly with a view to early flowering (cyclamens at Christmas are what you want), and to their colors and freedom of bloom. Mr. Craig believes he has something very choice, and there is every indication that his belief is well founded.

The Politics of Flowers.

Not many days ago it was stated on reliable authority that five prominent business men of this city had been gathered together in one afternoon at Wyndmoor. It was asserted on the Street, that fertile field of information, that these five members of the profession had gone to Myers & Samtman's, at Wyndmoor, for a definite purpose. The Street had various conjectures as to what that purpose might be, because the five stand so high in floricultural circles that it felt sure there was something doing that would prove of general interest. The five referred to were Henry Bauer, Frank Gaul, Charles E. Meehan, Leo Niessen and Samuel S. Pennock. Myers & Samtman are so prominent as Beauty growers that the Street at once jumped to the conclusion that the distribution of Beauties was under consideration. It was generally known that John Burton would be King Bee in the local Beauty market for the coming season. Could it possibly be that this was an effort pro and con regarding the dispensing of the Beauty crop of Myers & Samtman, or, to be more explicit, were the accredited representatives of a certain attractive young man endeavoring to make it clear to growers and wholesalers that the welfare of the city market required that a certain proportion of the Beauty crop of the city should reach him direct. A representative of the most progressive florists' paper called on Frank P. Myers and asked him whether he was going to send all, or any portion, of his American Beauties direct to the buyers next season. Mr. Myers smiled pleasantly and answered at once, "Any man who seriously considers doing such a thing should have trustees appointed for him at once."

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

ONCE more the harvest season is at hand.

TURNIP seed is in strong demand at present.

MICHIGAN radish seed crops are doing well, according to last reports.

THE onion set crop at Louisville promises to be equal to last year, and perhaps better than it was last year.

REPORTS generally from the pea growing sections indicate that fair crops of all varieties will be harvested.

SWEET PEAS for seed in England are generally ripening a light crop because of long continued dry weather.

TRAVELING men in the seed line are reporting good business. The outlook for the coming year is very satisfactory.

THE stand of beans at most of the growing points is reported fair and weather conditions generally are good at present.

SEEDSMEN will be interested in the note on "Sweet Peas in California" on page 8 of this issue, and the illustration on page 9.

THE favorable weather of the last week in the vicinity of Chicago has added much to the appearance of the onion set crop.

THE general condition of vine crops is reported to be backward, but the weather has improved and the outlook is much better than it has been.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, does so large a business in grass seeds that a small item like a few carloads of pop-corn, sold to the poppers, attracts little attention.

ONION seed fields in the vicinity of Chicago give promise of large yields, and reports from other central western sections bear out previous predictions that this locality is well adapted for this crop.

I. L. HILL, proprietor of Hill's Seed Store, Phoenix, Ariz., has moved into a new and larger building on North Center street. He is putting in new fixtures throughout and says the business of the last season justifies a considerable increase in his facilities.

E. J. SHEAP, of S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., sends a decidedly favorable preliminary report as to the condition of pea crops; a good yield is indicated. Radish also promises well so far. Beans, cucumber, muskmelon and sweet corn are not far enough advanced as yet to judge, but are looking well.

IT is reported that the L. L. Olds Seed Co. will remove from Clinton, Wis., to Madison, Wis., about September 1. Quarters have been leased.

THE government's July crop report made the condition of corn and wheat appear more favorable than had been anticipated, while private advices are to the effect that there has been improvement in July.

THE Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., has published a 16-page booklet, by Adolf Kruhm, entitled "The Story of Alfalfa," which is being distributed free to farmers. It is well calculated to increase the sale of seeds, and in 1907 Kansas alone had 743,000 acres in alfalfa.

THE report from Hamburg is that the season promises an excellent crop of valley pips, both as to quantity and quality, but that orders are not so heavy as last year. Not only in the United States but in England and Germany there remain considerably larger quantities of pips in cold storage than are usual at this date. The increased importations of last fall and the decrease in demand due to low prices in the wholesale markets during a large part of the season, account for this condition in the United States, and largely also in other countries. In recent years there has been a steadily rising market at Hamburg for first-class pips, for the supply was not equal to the demand, but now it looks as though some readjustment might occur—at least, a better grade of stock may be expected if present conditions exist for long.

NEED FOR PREPAREDNESS.

In his address as president of the American Seed Trade Association George S. Green referred to the necessity for the preparation which will put the association in a position to influence action when congress undertakes the revision of the tariff next fall. The trade will then have the opportunity of supplying definite information of a character to secure the elimination of the embarrassing features of the present law. Mr. Green's paragraph on this subject was as follows:

"As there has been no revision of the tariff during the past year, there has been no necessity for special action on the part of the committee on tariff and customs, but since the question of tariff revision seems likely to have attention in congress in the near future, it is essential that our committee be ready to furnish information to the congressional committee which will have this matter in charge. After my experience this spring as to the difficulty of doing such work during the rush of the seed season, I am impressed with the importance of having this subject studied during the next six months by a competent committee, which should make definite report to the next executive committee meeting, so that the wishes of the seed trade may be properly presented in the most effective manner at the proper time. In this connection I wish to indorse the suggestion of my predecessor, Mr. Wood, as to the desirability of specific duties, in preference to ad valorem duties."

PARCEL-POST TO HOLLAND.

Members of the trade have reason to be particularly interested in the provisions of a parcel-post convention which was recently concluded between the United States and the Netherlands. By the terms of this convention, which went into effect July 1, parcel-post packages may be transmitted in either direction between the two countries. Thus Holland is added to the gradually increasing list of nations which the United States postal guide places under the head of "International Parcel-post."

The stipulations of the convention are as follows:

"Parcels exchanged between the United States and the Netherlands must not exceed $50 in value, weigh more than four pounds six ounces (or 2 kilograms), nor measure more than three feet six inches in length, and six feet in length and girth combined.

"Postage must be paid in full at the following rates, viz.: In the United States, on parcels for the Netherlands, 12 cents for each pound or fraction of a pound; and in the Netherlands, on parcels for the United States, 80 cents (Dutch) for a parcel not exceeding one kilogram in weight, and 1 guilder and 10 cents for other parcels.

"A delivery charge not exceeding 5 cents in the United States, or 12½ cents (Dutch) in the Netherlands, may be collected of the addressee of each parcel.

"Parcels for or from the Netherlands cannot be registered."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending July 3 were as follows:

| Kind. | Pkgs. | Val. | Kind. | Pkgs. | Val. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Caraway | 100 | $ 934 | Millet | 100 | $ 264 |
| Castor | 1360 | 4699 | Mustard | 256 | 1909 |

| Fennel | 6 | 59 | Other | .. | 2765 |
| Hemp | 800 | 3609 | | | |

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $1,430.

THE FIRST HARRISII.

The first shipment of the present season's crop of Harrisii bulbs reached New York from Bermuda July 10. The custom house gives the following as the consignees and number of cases:

| Consignee. | Cases. |
|---|---|
| Crossmond, L. D. | 320 |
| Hagemann, Wm., & Co. | 44 |
| Henderson, Peter, & Co. | 25 |
| Outerbridge, A. E., & Co. | 42 |

| Total | 1,075 |

LILY BULBS.

The arrival of the first of the season's crop of Harrisii bulbs on the last boat from Bermuda again turns attention to that important item, the Easter lily.

This year there is no cry of scarcity, although it is impossible to say at this date what the crop, counting all types of bulbs, will turn out to be; the sources of supply are now so scattered that even the most indefatigable of travelers cannot inspect them all. However, the most reliable reports point to increased output, especially in the new fields — Formosa, the Azores and possibly other places not yet exploited.

In Bermuda further progress is said to have been made in eradicating the mixtures and disease. The larger growers have come to appreciate that the survival of the industry depends upon the employment of the most careful methods and it is said the fields in bloom this spring presented an appearance of uniformity that was a pleasing indication of progress. The smaller growers are said to be getting into line under the lash of necessity wielded by the buyers. The main shipment is due about July 24 and will show a somewhat increased percentage of the larger sizes. The crops this year will probably be a little greater than last year.

The crop in the Azores (possibly 500,000 bulbs) is yet too small to cut much figure in the world's supply, but is increasing and of good quality. Those who have forced these bulbs are well pleased with them. European markets get a good part of the crop.

Japan now supplies the major part of the Easter lily bulbs. Many are grown by small farmers, a few thousands here, a few thousands there, over a considerable territory, so that it is difficult for the exporters themselves, to say nothing of foreign firms, to keep track of the methods employed; and hence, probably, the complaint which has attended the flowering of last year's crop of bulbs. There were large losses of longiflorum multiflorum, but giganteum did much better and the demand has centered on it, with the result that prices on giganteum and multiflorum are rather wide apart. One of the best informed men in the trade says this year's output of multiflorum will be not so large as last year in number, with an increase of giganteum, and that in time prices will gradually draw together again.

Formosa promises to figure largely by another year. Last season the crop there was only a drop in the bucket; this year it is 175,000, according to a man who was there at planting time. The first planting there was true Jap longiflorum and for two seasons the Formosa bulbs that have come to the United States have given such good results that this year's crop has sold quickly. Those interested in the Formosa product have used every endeavor to hold the stock true, but it is said a few of other types already have appeared there, which simply goes to show how hard it is to hold on to a good thing in this big and envious world.

At least one house has been offering "a few cases of longiflorums from a place not yet exploited that turned out fine last year," so it may be that soon still other sources of supply will have to be reckoned with, for of course the existence of such a crop is not to be questioned.

Leading handlers of bulbs say that the advance orders for bulbs are about as last year from those who grow for their own trade, but that the big growers for city markets are not ordering so many as last year. But with the perfection of the cold storage process the marketing of longiflorum bulbs has come to be an all-year-round affair and the importers, with full faith in a large increase in business activity later in the year, feel secure in the ultimate result.

CUMBERLAND SEED CO.

The Cumberland Seed Co., Nashville, Tenn., began business July 8 at 132 Second avenue, north. The new concern is capitalized at $30,000, is incorporated under the laws of Tennessee, and is strictly a Nashville concern.

At a meeting of the stockholders W. B. Ewing, formerly manager at Nashville of the branch house of Woods, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, was elected president and manager of the new company. Woods, Stubbs & Co. and W. H. Small & Co., of Evansville, Ind., are large stockholders in the Cumberland Seed Co., but in no sense is the concern just formed a branch of either. It is a separate corporation and its purpose is to cater to the Nashville and Tennessee trade especially. The firm will handle field and vegetable seed for the planters and garden and flower seed for the agricultural and Nashville trade.

HARRIS STIRS TEMPEST.

A few weeks ago T. J. Harris, superintendent of the Public Garden at Hamilton, Bermuda, wrote a letter which found its way into print in a trade paper and has made him the object of some harsh criticism. Among other things he said: "Since I have been here, I have given the subject (Harrisii bulbs) very careful consideration, and I feel sure the florists of America will welcome the news that their interests are being watched in Bermuda. Some two or three of our largest growers, I am glad to say, can now guarantee their stock as absolutely pure Harrisii; these of course sell privately to the large nurseries. A large number of cases are sold in the open market and the florist who purchases them is entirely in the hands of the packer."

The growers who do not feel that they are included in the "some two or three who can guarantee their stock and sell privately," take this altogether too seriously, for one of them says in a letter to the local Royal Gazette: "Numbers of us who possessed lily stock which hitherto has found a fair market, now possess a quantity of material upon which we have expended some time and labor, only to find it is utterly unsalable."

If the grower's stock really is "utterly unsalable," which is open to question, few will be ready to credit that it is because of what Mr. Harris said. But there can be no doubt he did not increase his popularity among the bulb growers of his island, unless it be with the ones who think they were meant by "some two or three," etc.; the following in the Royal Gazette of July 7 sounds as though it might have been written by one of them:

"The Superintendent of the Public Garden appears to be, just at present, the object of a most bitter attack. Now, I hold no brief for Mr. Harris, but I think it is desirable that the facts of the case should be laid before the public, who seem likely to be misled by the biased statements of certain parties who are financially interested.

"I have heard the argument put forward that instead of writing the subject up in an American paper, Mr. Harris should have gone round to the farmers and laid the facts before them, and that they (i. e., the farmers) did not know that it mattered whether they shipped bulbs of Lilium Harrisii or bulbs of L. longiflorum. Such an argument as this is, on the face of it, absurd. For the last six or seven years both Mr. Harris and his predecessor have been urging growers to eliminate everything but type Harrisii from their stocks and to ship nothing but the genuine Bermuda lily, and several of the largest growers have been doing their utmost to carry out this advice. Unfortunately, L. Harrisii throws very little stock, while L. longiflorum increases very rapidly, with the result that unless a grower knows what he is about and carefully weeds out every bulb not absolutely true to type, in the course of a very few years he will have practically nothing but L. longiflorum stock planted in his fields. Many of the growers have in the past been careless about this and have thought it did not matter what sort of bulbs they sold so long as they were lily bulbs of some sort. For many years thousands of bulbs have been shipped from Bermuda marked L. Harrisii on the cases, which were not L. Harrisii at all, but were either type longiflorum or another inferior variety. In other words, to be plain and not mince matters, these bulbs were deliberately marked with a false description and were not of the nature and quality demanded by the buyer. The result of this fraudulent packing has been that the Bermuda lily trade is now in a fair way to follow the tomato and onion and potato trades, which have all either been killed outright or severely damaged by this same careless packing.

"It appears, therefore, that so far

LILIUM HARRISII

WE OFFER A SELECTED STOCK OF THE ORIGINAL TRUE HARRISII FOR EARLY FORCING.

These bulbs have been grown from the original pure Harrisii, and will be found to be splendid stock for early forcing, for which purpose Harrisii is so valuable. We have had the stock inspected, and are assured that it is almost absolutely pure and almost entirely free from disease. This is not stock picked up indiscriminately from different sources, but is grown from one stock and will be found very superior to the ordinary Harrisii usually offered, both in regard to freedom from disease and purity, and not the late type now so often furnished.

Lilium Harrisii has been deteriorating slowly for years, and in order to get back to the true type of the original Harrisii, we have had our stock grown from the original pure stock and it will be found very superior to the Lilium Harrisii usually offered. While the stock is A-No. 1, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices asked for indifferent stock.

We have only a limited quantity of this stock to offer, so it will be advisable to place orders without delay in order to insure securing this stock.

from doing any harm to Bermuda lily trade, Mr. Harris's letter is likely to have a very beneficial effect and it would even appear to be desirable to pass a law making it an indictable offense to sell L. longiflorum as L. Harrisii.

"The lesson to be drawn from the results of the last few years is that the Bermuda farmer has got to give up his old rule of thumb methods and careless packing and follow in the footsteps of his brother farmers in other lands. If he does not wish to go to the wall altogether, he has got to learn to farm scientifically and to grade and pack his produce carefully. Instead of trying to raise an enormous crop of onions for which he cannot find a market, he will have to go in for intensive farming and raise small crops of high-grade produce, for which he can find a market. First-class stuff carefully packed and graded will always find a sale when inferior stuff is quite unsalable. This is a lesson which the Bermuda farmer has got to take to heart, or in the very near future he will be in a worse plight than he is at the present time, if such be possible."

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

During the week from July 5 to 12 business assumed a steady gait and everybody was kept going, if not at a great speed. There is really nothing going to waste except the poor grades of carnations. Sweet peas are arriving in great quantities, but only the long-stemmed ones are wanted. The few outdoor asters that come in are short-stemmed, which is due, no doubt, to the dryness which prevailed right after they were planted.

Various Notes.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. reports business good at its new store, Fifth street and Grand avenue, and also at the Hotel Pfister.

The M. A. McKenney Co., at 417 Milwaukee street, reports more work for weddings in July this year than was expected, and more than in previous seasons.

Both J. M. Fox, just across the street from the McKenney Co., and the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. say that they were kept busy straight through the week, in all lines.

Walter Halliday, the boss behind the counter at Pollworth's, is spending his vacation fishing at Fox Lake.

By the time these notes appear in print, the Holton & Hunkel Co. will have its three rose houses planted, and one house in green goods, mainly plumosus. Mr. Hunkel spends most of his time at Brown Deer, getting things into good shape.

C. C. Pollworth stated that they will use reinforced concrete benches in their new houses and have engaged a local cement contractor to supervise the work, to begin July 13.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. had an order for 8,000 carnations July 13, for St. Paul. No doubt the Shriners' conclave created the demand for these.

The window-boxes at the city hall, river front and other places have, according to reports, created quite a demand for them and they are more numerous than ever before. If promises hold true, Milwaukee is to get some pictorial advertising in Collier's Weekly in the near future, which certainly is for the good only. E. O.

Club Meeting.

The best meeting, from a business and social standpoint, ever held by the club was the July meeting at F. H. Kramer's greenhouses. His large potting shed was artistically decorated. The bunting, flags and Japanese lanterns, with the pyramids of nice new pots, made it look like an exhibition hall at a convention. There were forty-two members present and the following new members were elected: George Comly, J. Lensberger, Charles Kramer, J. Watson, Geo. E. Dalgris, Herbert Wright and John D. Robinson, Jr.

The committee on convention reported that they had secured a rate of $17.50 for the round trip, good for twenty days. Thirty members present expected to go in one party. This will probably be increased to forty-five.

The same committee as last year was appointed for the chrysanthemum show, the date to be about November 15 and George Cooke to be superintendent of the show. The committee has a guarantee fund of $500.

The same committee on annual outing was reappointed, with George Shaffer as chairman. Arrangements have been made to go to Great Falls, Va., July 24. All the stores will close half a day.

Wm. F. Gude extended an invitation to the club to meet on his lawn next month and be his guests after the meeting, which was accepted.

After the adjournment and a rising vote of thanks to Mr. Kramer for his entertainment of the club, all members were furnished with an ice-cold 4-inch pot, with a cork in the bottom, in one hand, and a sandwich in the other, and the orchestra played, while all sang "And He Is a Jolly Good Fellow." Everybody had a good time and wants the club to meet oftener.

The Denver and Chicago conventions being over and the different booms having collapsed, another one, that had its birth up north, is heard of more and more every day and with every incoming mail; that is, Adolphus Gude's boom for president of the S. A. F. at Niagara Falls next month. Mr. Gude has not said a word, but is leaving it all to his friends. He is too busy himself getting those new houses in shape. O. O.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade is simply dead; the only thing doing is in funeral work. This calls for quite a quantity of flowers. Carnations are about played out. Plants in the field have not made good growth on account of the dry weather we are having. We need rain badly. All vegetation is showing the effects of the drought. Lawns are burning up. Roses are not much better than carnations, either in quality or quantity. Sweet peas are showing the effects of the dry spell.

J. H. Cleary started July 8 to close his store at noon. This is a good start and ought to be followed by other retailers.

Wm. Livesey has just put in a new granolithic sidewalk around his residence.

Vacations are now the order of the day. W. L.

MUSHROOMS.

Does It Pay to Grow Them?

"Does it pay to grow mushrooms?" is a question that has often been asked. If florists or gardeners are asked the question, some will reply that it does not pay. Others, again, will say that there is more money in mushroom growing than in anything else.

The writer has been growing mushrooms for the market since 1896 and will tell the readers of the REVIEW a few facts about mushroom growing. In the first place, mushrooms should be grown in a simple and scientific way, and not after the old, complicated methods used fifteen or twenty years ago.

The Old Method.

According to the old method, the manure was prepared for about six weeks, and forked through every few days, with lots of hard labor. Then it was put in beds and immediately packed down as hard as possible, with the feet, and the beds were made up about fifteen or twenty inches thick. When the heat went down to 90 degrees the beds were spawned, and the spawn was put down about three inches in the manure. After that the soil was put on the beds about three inches thick, and packed down hard. After a few weeks the beds were sprinkled with warm water to "bring the mushrooms up."

I am not surprised that those growers could not make a success in mushroom growing, as that treatment is enough to kill any spawn. What spawn requires to grow well is some fresh air, and packing the beds so hard and putting so much soil on top excludes the air from the spawn. If mushrooms are grown in a simple and up-to-date way, they are a good paying crop, and the market is increasing every year.

A Modern Method.

In order to grow a good crop of mushrooms, it is not necessary to fork through the manure very much in preparing it for the beds. The heat will go down much more quickly in a pile of manure if it is left alone, than if it is forked through every few days, and if it is watered it will not burn dry in the pile.

We do not go through our manure at all when it lies in a large pile outside, but bring it into the mushroom sheds the way it comes. Then we water it and go through it twice in the beds, as we have our beds arranged so we can easily do that. We have all the doors open in both ends of the mushroom sheds, so that the air has free circulation during the time the beds are put in, as the manure needs plenty of air before the heat goes down. Fresh manure should always be used in mushroom growing, though a month old or so is not too old. The straw or hay does not need to be shaken out.

Spawning the Beds.

When the beds are laid they should not be packed down too hard and the manure should be nice and moist. The beds should not be spawned before the heat goes down to 70 or 75 degrees and about three-quarters of an inch of soil is enough to cover the beds with. The soil should be left loose on top and not packed down at all.

It is useless to make the beds up too thick, as no more mushrooms can be picked on a very thick bed than on a thinner one. From seven to nine inches is about the right thickness in a bed.

It is much better to use cold than warm water in watering the beds, and heating the water to 80 or 90 degrees is only waste of time and does more harm than good.

Importance of Good Spawn.

It is important to use good spawn in mushroom growing, as that is one of the main things in getting a good crop, and many failures are caused by using a poor spawn. All spawn will run out sooner or later, and new varieties should be used instead of the old, run-out ones.

It is impossible to tell good spawn by the appearance of it, as the best looking blue spawn might be altogether worthless, and spawn that does not look well at all might give a good crop of mushrooms. It is a good idea to try a few different kinds of spawn in some earlier beds before the main crop is planted.

Anyone thinking of starting in the mushroom business should start in a small way, with a few beds, and get all the experience he can before going into it more extensively.

PAUL SWANSON.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Club's Outing.

The most important event to report this week is the outing of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, which took place July 8. To Mandeville, on Lake Pontchartrain, right across from New Orleans, the florists took a two-hour boat ride and had the best of times, enjoying a grand banquet at Mugnier hotel.

C. R. Panter acted as toastmaster.

John T. Tims, of the assessor's office, attended in place of Mayor M. Behrman, who was kept away by press of business. Professor A. H. Rosenfeld, of the State Crop Pest Commission, was also present. The other members and invited guests were:

Chas. Eble, Henry Cook, C. R. Panter, John Eblen, P. A. Chopin, H. Papworth, O. Abele, A. Alost, C. Ory, F. Colongues, J. A. Newsham, A. Despommier, F. Faessel, J. Rush, J. St. Mard, E. Baker, R. ## BUFFALO.

Trade in the Bison City.

The weather has been extremely warm and dry and unless we have some heavy rains soon outdoor stock will amount to nothing. Asters are the next to be on market. A few of the growers are complaining of the "cinch" bug on the plants, the same thing which gave so much trouble to the mums last year. We have noticed in the trade notes of other cities the remark about tree pests. The worms became so bad in Buffalo, the city took hold of the matter and sprayed all trees infested which were on city proerty. Besides this, there are several firms doing nothing else but tree spraying.

Business is quiet with everybody and about the only things talked about are vacations and picnics.

Various Notes.

The regular club meeting resulted in the planning of a picnic. The date is to be July 29. We all hope it will bring out a large crowd. The Bedell House has been selected, which affords ample accommodation and pleasant surroundings after you get there. The committee will arrange a fine program of sports and a ball game between the east and west sides. Heretofore the lack of attendance from the store men has been noticeable and we hope this year everybody will come. It has not been stated as yet whether the stores will close or not for the half day, but let us hope they will.

Nearly all the stores close at 6:30, except Saturday night, for the summer months.

We will not need any more advertising in the Review this year. Your paper has proved very beneficial to us this season through our advertisements.—J. B. Shurtleff & Son, Revere, Mass.

Your paper reaches everywhere, and everyone who is in any way connected with the flower business reads the Review. This is evidenced by the great variety of letters I have received through my advertisement. Your paper did its part.—Charles Schneider, Chicago, Ill.

PACIFIC COAST.

The Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen held a successful sixth annual convention at North Yakima, Wash., July 8 and 9, fifty being present.

The Cherry Fair, to have been held at Salem, Ore., beginning July 9, was postponed to July 16 to 18 on account of cold weather retarding the season.

The Van Holderbeke Nursery Co., Spokane, Wash., has been incorporated, with $60,000 capital stock, by A. Van Holderbeke, E. Van Holderbeke and A. Elm.

PANSIES IN CALIFORNIA.

The best selling annual on this coast is the pansy. Many thousands are handled every winter and spring by florists and gardeners, and it is really surprising that better strains are not in evidence than are usually seen exposed for sale.

Carelessness in the selection of seed and equal carelessness in the growing are both to blame. Great care should be taken in the selection of the seed. But few growers make any pretense of saving their own seed, and when they do so they usually gather from the flowers promiscuously and as a consequence many inferior seedlings are grown, with the usual results. Even when the growers use care in the selection of the plants from which the seed is saved, it is unwise to collect and grow for more than two seasons without renewing the stock from seed grown in another locality.

When a specialty is made of any particular strain or variety, even greater care must be taken to keep them true to name, but, with so many reliable growers who make the pansy a specialty, there is no difficulty with seed bought either in this country or in Europe.

When the seed is sown—and during the present month is about the best time in this latitude—it is a good plan to start it under glass, but do not leave it inside for more than two or three weeks after the young plants have shown themselves. Do not sow the seed too thickly in the boxes. When they are removed to the open, shade them for a few days and they then should be exposed to the sun.

After about ten to twelve weeks they should be pricked off into flats and left until late in the fall or early in the winter, when they should be planted in permanent beds. Beds that are intended for pansies, if the best results are expected, should be dug over at least twice during the late summer or fall and plenty of well rotted manure worked in.

Pansies are gross feeders and the beds should be built so that there will be no surplus moisture standing around them after the winter rains commence. This is especially important when the gardener has thick, heavy soil to contend with, and an addition of a quantity of sand or other loosening material will in this case be of great benefit. On the other hand, just as fine pansies can be grown where the soil is naturally sandy, provided a sufficient amount of enrichment is given, in which case it will be necessary to continue feeding at regular intervals during the entire season of the plants' growth.

Pansies at any stage want plenty of moisture, good drainage and rich soil, and if the seed has been carefully selected there is no better paying plant in the entire catalogue of the gardener, nor one that is easier to handle.

It is a good plan to sow a later batch of seed, usually about six weeks later than the first, and in this way a succession of flowering plants can be had, if the weather permits, from Christmas until they become too large to handle to advantage, which is usually late in the summer.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues to be cool. At no time during the last two weeks has it been over 60 degrees at the warmest time of the day in the neighborhood of San Francisco. This makes it favorable both for the growers and the store men in the handling of flowers.

Carnations, with the exception of a few varieties, have never appeared to better advantage than they do at present. Lawson is about the only variety that seems to be greatly bothered by the thrips and, owing to the condition of the weather, this pest is much less noticeable than in former years. The prices of everything in the carnation line are, however, away down to bed rock and there is no immediate prospect of their betterment.

Roses, except short-stemmed stock, are scarce and what few are seen are bringing good prices. Fancy roses are out of existence at present.

Sweet peas still are the most popular flower and the prices are low, owing to the immense quantities of them being brought in by the Chinese growers. Valley and L. longiflorum move slowly, but the supply is not heavy. Gladioli in all colors are seen everywhere. They do not bring as much money as they did for the growers last season and the demand seems to be lighter. Coreopsis, gaillardias, etc., fill in nicely, but the majority of them find their way to the garbage can.

Business is about as quiet as it can be and retain its identity. Funerals are all that the retailers have to contend with and they do not prove very formidable propositions, either. Compared with last season, June of this year easily fell off thirty-three per cent in the volume of business done. Many of the retailers cut down help considerably and, as a consequence, there are many idle clerks in town. The continued cool weather, however, will drive the city folks back into town early this year, and there is a possibility that fall trade may open earlier than usual on that account.

Various Notes.

Peter N. Schlentz, of Chicago, is on a visit to San Francisco. He expects to remain here for some weeks.

Clarke Bros., of Fruitvale, are busy changing some of their carnation houses. Most of their stock is off crop at present.

J. M. Holland has opened a new floral establishment on Piedmont avenue, Oakland.

Hutchings & James have completed a large greenhouse, to be devoted to fern growing, at the Elmhurst nursery.

H. Ukai has leased his greenhouses at Golden Gate to a Japanese firm and will devote his entire time to his Elmhurst nurseries. G.

CHICO, CAL.

W. W. Tracy, of Washington, D. C., has been appointed to succeed August Mayer as chief of the Plant Introduction Garden at this place. Mr. Mayer, who was in charge during the last eighteen months, has been transferred to Arlington, Va., and will be the head of the horticultural department of the government gardens there.

Mr. Tracy was in Chico two years ago, prosecuting work in the vegetable pathological department. He is the third head to be in charge of Uncle Sam's gardens, where are conducted experiments of importance to the entire country, with plants from all parts of the globe. P. H. Dorsett was the first chief, upon whom fell the work of breaking the first sod, and after making an enviable record of achievement he entered a private floral enterprise at Washington, D. C., where financial returns are greater. August Mayer succeeded him and conducted with success several important experiments. The work is now at the stage where results are being obtained and a splendid work is ahead of the new chief.
